Caviar and Fish

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

Robert Lyman, 37—a stocky, bushy-browed antiwar agitator and contact man of defeatist factions—yesterday was caught prowling outside the chambers of the special grand jury on Axis agents.

The grand jurors, whose investigations smashed two Nazi propaganda organizations in the last seven months, are probing the Congressional connections and possible enemy control of a string of publications and movements, whose policy is defeatist and whose financing provoked suspicion.

Caviar Chief Testifies

Beside Lyman being nabbed, other developments yesterday included:

1. Gunther Hansen-Sturm, German-born head of the Romanoff Caviar Co., New York, was questioned. Hansen-Sturm told reporters he thought the grand jurors wanted to ask him about "thousands of dollars" he had taken to Representative Hamilton Fish, who ordered his secretary to mail franked speeches for the Nazi agent, George Sylvester Viereck, who is now in jail.

2. Charles B. Hudson, defeatist editor, of Omaha, Neb., apparently decided to "talk." Hudson was jailed for three months Thursday for refusing to tell who printed a seditious postcard which he mailed out with the "Roosevelt Is a Judas" speech of Representative Clare E. Hoffman.

3. Although he testified for some time, Hudson was taken back to the District Jail last night. He retained Attorney George E. Sullivan, who is himself the author of a defeatist, anti-Jewish book which Hudson sells his readers.

Tried to Talk to Witness

Deputy United States marshals on guard in the Municipal Court Building reported they saw Lyman trying to communicate with Mrs. David Stanley, Cleveland, who has been called as a witness. Mrs. Stanley is a leader in United Mothers of America, which last week had a conference at Cleveland and passed out statements calling the President a "traitor" and the German agent, George Sylvester Viereck, a "patriot."

Mrs. Stanley's group was one of a number of groups known to have gotten bulk lots of the "Roosevelt Is a Judas" speech of Representa-

Cavite Base Soon Will Be Restored, Jap Radio Says

Toyko (from Japanese Broadcasts), April 10 (AP).—A Domei correspondent reported after a tour of Cavite navy base in Manila Bay today that workmen are bustling to put the docks and machine shops in readiness for use in future naval operations.

When work was begun January 11, he said, the navy yard was shambles, with virtually everything leveled to the ground.

The machine shop has been rebuilt and the docks are now being used to repair ships, he said.

Five steamers, former American ships raised from the bottom of the bay were moored to the docks, flying the Japanese flag and two of them had been equipped with salvaged American cannon, the correspondent said.

Traffic Kills Two; D. C. Toll Now 37

The year's death toll in the District jumped to 37 last night when a bicyclist was killed by a truck and a pedestrain was fatally injured by a street car. At this date last there were only 24 traffic deaths.

Yesterday's traffic victims were Emmett Bryan, 15, Negro, of 150 Rhode Island Avenue Northwest, and a man tentatively identified as Frank Clarke, 30, address unknown.

As Noncombatants Only

U. S. Women May Be Enrolled For War Service—Voluntarily

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

The Government is giving serious consideration to the voluntary registration of women for possible noncombatant service in the Nation's expanding war effort, President Roosevelt disclosed yesterday.

Main drawback to the tabulation of work talents among the feminine population, he told his press conference, is the huge mechanical task involved.

Census figures show 42,058,000 women between the ages of 18 and 65, and this is the group he said the Government has in mind.

The President and his advisers have been at work for weeks on the problem of man power mobilization and he said yesterday a solution might be announced next week.

Among the problems involved, he said, is that "man power" includes "woman power," and whether a new organization should be created for handling their registration.

There has been talk, the Chief Executive said, of a voluntary registration for women on the next day set for registration of men up to 65—April 27. If it is decided to register women, however—and he stressed the "if"—a date for them will be set later.

Before the House Military Affairs Committee is a bill by Representative Baldwin (Republican), of New York, calling for compulsory registration of women between the ages of 18 and 65.

The Baldwin measure is proposed as an amendment to the Selective Service Act and draft boards would be expected to handle its mechanics. Because the bill would make registration compulsory, Representative Baldwin has said many persons have the idea it would be a draft.

If the registration is voluntary, no additional legislation would be needed, and the purpose served would be just the same—provided all the women responded as leaders believe they would.

Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, of Massachusetts, who introduced the bill for a Women's Army Auxiliary Corps, believes women need only be told where they are needed and permitted to serve.

In Great Britain a total of five million women has been registered under the National Service Act, under which all of them between the ages of 20 and 41 are liable for conscription.

Registration was made in blocks and not all at once, with single women between the ages of 20 and

Union Finance Reports Urged By House Unit

Judiciary Group Backs Bill to Require Full Accounting by Labor

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Legislation compelling labor organizations and trade associations to register and file a full financial accounting with the Commerce Department has been favorably reported by a House Judiciary Subcommittee and may race more sweeping labor legislation to the House floor.

This was learned last night as the House Naval Affairs Committee ordered further hearings beginning Monday on the Smith-Vinson bill, limiting profits, suspending the 40-hour week and outlawing the closed shop. Secretary of the Navy Knox and Chairman Land of the Maritime Commission were called to testify.

Across the Capitol, Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, predicted that the April 20 Senate motion to call up his own plant-seizure bill will be adopted. Connally would make no comment on a series of independently sponsored amendments to his bill, but said, "Congress is going to enact war labor legislation relaxing the existing laws."

Indorsed by Arnold

The Vinson bill, requiring registration and accounting by labor unions and trade associations, was favorably reported by Judiciary Committee No. 3 of the House Judiciary Committee. The report was filed by Representative Sam Hobbs (Democrat), of Alabama, before the House took its Easter recess, it was learned. Chairman Hatton Sumners was expected to call a meeting of the full committee for final action after his return here Monday.

The registration measure was uniformly opposed by representatives of both labor and trade groups, but was tacitly indorsed by Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold at a hearing on March 21. Arnold startled the committee with his testimony that labor "pressure" on farmer, consumer and independent businessmen "is independent of any law whatever."

Anti-Inflation Program Set By Roosevelt

Over-All Plan Has Not Jelled Yet, but First Step Is Taken

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt yesterday disclosed that plans were coming to a head for an over-all Government program to head off inflation. A segment of it, an order empowering Federal agencies to audit war contractors' books to prevent unreasonable profits, was announced later in the day.

At his press conference, the President declined to discuss details of the antiinflation program on the grounds that they had not jelled.

At the same time, Mr. Roosevelt's chief fiscal advisers, including Vice President Wallace, Treasury Secretary Morgenthau, Price Boss Henderson, Federal Reserve Chairman Eccles and Budget Director Smith met for a three-hour White House conference. It was assumed they discussed the general problem of price control and inflation. None was willing, however, to answer reporters' questions about the meeting.

Agencies Get New Powers

The Executive Order issued after yesterday's press conference empowered six Federal organizations to inspect plants and audit books of war firms "to prevent the accumulation of unreasonable profits," avoid waste of Government funds, and to implement other measures taken to head off price advances and inflation.

The agencies designated were the War Production Board, the War, Navy and Treasury Departments, the Maritime Commission and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Donald M. Nelson, WPB chairman, was charged with formulating rules and regulations and establishing policies concerning the inspections and audits.

This development was seen as one phase, specifically directed at excessive corporate profits, of a broader program on price freezing, wage limitations, higher taxes and enforced savings which is now in the process of development.

An integral part of the plan is the Office of Price Administration's general price freezing program, which,

D. C. High Schools to Expand Elementary Aviation Courses

District school officials moved swiftly yesterday to cooperate with the United States Office of Education in a program to speed up formation of America's air armada by preparing high school students in the fundamentals of aviation.

Plans were pushed for expansion next fall of a course in elementary aeronautics, established last February, and a recommendation for refresher courses in physics, mathematics and physical education this summer was drawn up for presentation to the District Board of Education.

These steps were in line with Thursday's suggestions by J. W. Studebaker, United States commissioner of education, that aeronautics be taught in all high schools where 15 or more prospective flying cadets can be enrolled and that refresher and pre-pilot training courses be given this summer in the larger communities.

A third suggestion by Studebaker—that refresher courses in mathematics be given this semester—was taken under consideration here.

Dr. Chester W. Holmes, assistant District superintendent in charge of high schools, said the aviation course already in effect in Washington's eight high schools was being studied with the view of making it a full-year course instead of one semester. Details incident to increasing its scope are being worked out with the United States Office

75 More Nips Downed

By Drew Middleton
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, April 10.—Britain's Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell marshaled every available man o' war, airplane and soldier tonight for the defense of the Ganges Basin of India, menaced by a Japanese air and naval fleet which had sunk the British aircraft carrier Hermes and two heavy cruisers in a four-day battle in the Bay of Bengal.

The hard-hitting Flying Fortresses under the American Maj. Gen. Lewis H. Brereton were believed to be the chief reliance of the commander in chief for India, Gen. Wavell, in his attempt to find and strike the Japanese invaders before they are able to make landings.

With British naval defenses crippled by Japanese air power, the Allies were placing ever-growing reliance in these huge American B-17's.

Sinkings Costly for Japs

The Japanese paid a heavy price for the destruction of the three British ships—the 23-year-old aircraft carrier Hermes and the heavy cruisers Dorsetshire and Cornwall. An informed observer placed enemy aircraft losses at 75 in the actions.

Moreover, a British communique announced that 21 Japanese planes were destroyed for certain yesterday in the enemy raid on the British naval base at Trincomalee, Ceylon; that 12 other enemy planes were probably destroyed and two more damaged.

The sinking of the Dorsetshire and Cornwall had been announced yesterday, but not until today was it disclosed that the Hermes had gone down. She sank about 10 miles off Ceylon, not far from the Trincomalee British naval base protecting India and the western side of the Bay of Bengal.

Using Three Carriers

An authoritative source disclosed that bombers and not torpedo planes sank the 10,850-ton Hermes, the oldest carrier in British service. It was believed in London that she fought without support from shore-based aircraft and it was presumed that the 20 planes she carried were

U. S. Emissary Strives to Hold Hindu Leaders, Cripps Together

By the Associated Press

New Delhi, India, April 10.—Final rejection by the All-India Congress Party of the British plan for postwar dominion status was reported late tonight.

(The Reuters news agency indicated that the final differences had arisen over a transitional government system to be employed until after the war, when Britain has offered full dominion status.

Demand Full Home Rule

(Reuters said the congress was prepared to participate and take office in a central government only if it was a truly national government with cabinet responsibility, and not merely an extension of the governor general's executive council.)

Thus negotiations over the Indian question, which only yesterday appeared to have received its answer in a general agreement, appeared almost certainly to have broken down amid Hindu charges that Sir

Cripps to State Case To World by Radio

New Delhi (Saturday), April 11 (INS).—Sir Stafford Cripps will deliver a radio address from New Delhi at 5:30 o'clock tonight (11 a. m. E. W. T.), it was announced early today, on the outcome of his mission to India.

Stafford Cripps, the British emissary, had been hamstrung by the London war cabinet.

Cripps Orders Plane

(Cripps was expected to leave New Delhi Sunday, the London News-Chronicle said, and has ordered his plane for then.)

Louis Johnson, President Roosevelt's personal emissary to India, who had been hailed by the Nationalist press as "the hero of the hour," and a "super Cripps" for the part he played in the complex negotiation was believed to be ardently striving to prevent complete collapse of the talks, but without the assent of the big Hindu bloc this appeared almost certainly hopeless.

The wizened little spiritual leader of the Hindus, Mohandas K. Gandhi, who went back to Wardha and his silence last week after advising against acceptance of the British offer of post-war dominion status, appeared to have left the imprint of his counsel on a majority of the working committee of the All-India Congress Party.

In a four-hour session today, it was reported, President Maulana

'So Much With So Little'

Bataan Force's End Became It Well, MacArthur Says

By the United Press

Gen. MacArthur's Headquarters, Australia, April 10.—"No army has ever done so much with so little—."

In 12 lines penciled on a sheet of inexpensive, lined writing paper, Gen. Douglas MacArthur paid his tribute today to the men of Bataan, who went down "fighting to the end" in the Philippines.

As befitted a commander who had lived and fought intimately with the men he led, he remembered their mothers back home when he wrote:

"The Bataan force went out as it would have wished, fighting to the end of its flickering, forlorn hope.

"No army has ever done so much with so little, and nothing became it more than its last hour of trial and agony.

"To the weeping mothers of its dead, I can only say that the sacrifice and halo of Jesus of Nazareth has descended upon their sons, and that God will take them unto himself."

The commander in chief had maintained public silence for 24 hours on the fall of Bataan, although aides said the news had moved him deeply. His statement obviously was written under the stress of deep emotion, although the firm, clear hand in which it was penciled seemed to express the promise he has made that he will return to the Philippines eventually and avenge their loss.

The statement was issued through a press officer, Col. Lloyd Lehrbas, who read it to a small group of correspondents in a hotel room today.

Crews Return, Save 2 Ships Blasted by Subs

Third Vessel Sunk Off East Coast; 47 Missing Or Killed in Attacks

The Navy revealed last night that Axis submarines have attacked three more merchant ships off the United States' Atlantic Coast, but crewmen reboarded two of the vessels and brought one into port while the other was towed in by a rescue ship.

A toll of 47 dead or missing was reported from the three attacks, in one of which a small cargo ship carrying six passengers and 47 crew members was torpedoed and sunk.

Edward Magruder, 25, of 2334 High Street, Washington, was among three passengers saved and landed at Cape May, N. J.

The latter sinking brought to 68 the number of Allied merchant ships sunk off the east United States coast by submarines since January, and the number of dead and missing in such attacks to approximately 1224.

In Lifeboat Five Days

By the Associated Press

Cape May, N. J., April 10.—A small American freighter was torpedoed and sunk off the Atlantic coast a week ago, the Fourth Naval District announced tonight, with the possible loss of 37 of its complement of 53 crew members and passengers.

Sixteen survivors were landed here on Wednesday after sailing their open lifeboat more than 200 miles by dead reckoning. They spent five and a quarter days in the lifeboat, a Navy spokesman said. All suffered from exposure, but none was injured seriously.

The undersea boat attacked without warning about 5:50 a. m., Third Mate Philip W. Babcock related, and within 15 minutes the ship went down.

The survivors scrambled into one lifeboat, and Second Mate Parke M.

Annihilation Battle Rages on Central Front; Foe Repulsed in North

By the United Press

Kuibyshev, April 10.—Russian air, tank and infantry forces have captured scores of localities and wiped out a German infantry regiment in a battle of annihilation on the central front, and to the north have repulsed a strong attack by enemy reservists, killing 4470, the Red Army reported tonight.

Despite admittedly powerful and fresh opposition, the Russian offensive appeared to be maintaining its momentum, especially on the central and northwestern front, where more than 8800 German troops were reported slain in a series of heavy battles.

Mechanized struggles raged in force on all parts of the Russian front, with Soviet armored units giving blow for blow and the Germans throwing in French, Czech, Polish and other tanks just off the assembly lines of factories all over Europe, military dispatches said.

Infantry Regiment Crushed

The government newspaper Izvestia reported that captured enemy tanks being repaired in Russian workshops included new machines from the Skoda works in Czechoslovakia, Mercedes plants in France, the Krupp works in Germany, and Packards.

The 519th German Infantry Regiment was reported crushed in the Smolensk zone when a synchronized assault by land and air cut it off from the rear, preventing its reinforcement. In eliminating the regiment as a fighting force, the Russians were credited with killing more than 1500 troops, reclaiming many inhabited points, and liber-

Cebu Invaded

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

Nearly 3500 sailors and marines have escaped battered Bataan to fight again from Corregidor in a desperate battle to stave off complete Japanese domination of Manila Bay, the Navy announced yesterday.

There was no official word in Washington of the fate of the remaining defenders of Bataan, who before the start of the big Japanese push, April 3, numbered 37,000 "effectives," but Japanese reports quoted by the Associated Press told of continuing enemy operations and of the capture of several thousand American and Filipino troops.

The evacuation of marines and bluejackets across three miles of the bay was accomplished under cover of darkness "a few days ago," the Navy said. Lieut. Gen. Jonathan Wainwright ordered the withdrawal when the futility of further resistance on the mainland became evident "in the face of overwhelming enemy odds."

Fort Heavily Bombed

In a brave message to President Roosevelt, Lieut. Gen. Wainwright proclaimed—"our flag on this beleaguered island still flies"—but an Army communique disclosed that the Japanese were battering the fortress with tons of explosives.

Meanwhile, the Japanese were extending their conquest of the Philippines to the island of Cebu, 375 miles south of Bataan. Swift American motor torpedo boats struck

Jap General Reported Killed On Bataan Front

London, April 11 (Saturday) (INS). Gen. Senosuko Sonoda, identified as one of the Japanese commanders on Bataan, was killed in action before the exhausted American and Filipino defenders finally were overcome, the Daily Sketch reported today.

The Daily Sketch added that the Japanese had trained "hundreds of guns on each square mile" of the short Bataan front and literally pounded the defense positions to pieces. As positions thus were overcome the guns were moved up in successive stages.

Genius on Java

Yank, Never a Pilot, Rebuilds 'Fortress,' Flies 18 to Safety

By Lee Van Atta
Copyright, International News Service

Melbourne, April 10.—The story of Master Sergt. Harry M. Hayes of San Antonio, Tex., is an epic almost unparalleled in the history of United States aviation.

Alone and with only his mechanical skill—plus a natural flying ability and just plain nerve—he saved the lives of 18 American, British and Dutch officers, women and children when he piloted, for the first time in his life, a battered flying fortress from beleaguered Java to safety in Australia.

Harry Hayes is the finest living testimonial to the worth and courage of the American Air Corps.

What he performed is regarded by most aviators as a strictly physical and mechanical impossibility, something almost unbelieveable, an event usually confined to the never-never land of rip-roaring movies. But Harry Hayes did accomplish the "impossible" and he has thereby forever established a niche for himself among America's flying greats.

Due to an oversight, Hayes had been left in Java when the American forces evacuated that island. He had been left there along with several American women and children who had not arrived at an embarkation point on time for a scheduled departure.

"I was hanging around waiting for something to happen," Hayes said, "when a 'cherry mission' (an American volunteer flier of the Chinese Air Force) who was with his wife came and asked me if there was any possibility of our somehow getting out of Java. At that time the Japanese were operating 10 miles away from us."

With the volunteer flier, Hayes went to the airport where four wrecked American planes—one B-18 and three flying fortresses—lay, given up as worthless by the departing Americans. Hayes went to work on the B-18. He labored for two days, getting it ready for flight.

All the passengers were on the field ready to leave when Japanese zero fighters came over and strafed the airdrome, completely destroying the B-18.

The American volunteer flier could have flown the B-18, but he was absolutely unfamiliar with the controls of the flying fortresses. Nonplussed, Hayes, a big, soft-speaking Texan, examined the other ships and decided that there was an

Blasted on Ground

Luzon Airforce Was Lined Up To Raid Formosa When Caught

By Clark Lee
Associated Press Staff Writer

Melbourne, Australia, April 10.—The fate of Luzon and Bataan was sealed just before 1 p. m. on December 8, some 10 hours after the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

Our main bomber force was lined up on Clark Field, 40 miles north of Manila on Luzon Island, with the crews standing by awaiting orders to take off and bomb Japanese air and naval bases on the Island of Formosa.

Most of the pursuite planes were at nearby Iba Field.

The pursuits and some bombers had been aloft during the morning but had returned to the ground for orders.

While these instructions were being issued, the Japanese struck.

Fifty-four heavy enemy bombers roared over Clark Field at 10,000 feet and showered the grounded planes, runways and hangars with explosives.

Eighty-six Japanese Zero fighters came in their wake and strafed the planes, ground forces and anti-aircraft batteries in low-level attacks.

Simultaneously other bombs and fighters dived on the parked planes at Iba Field. They left a roaring hell of flames at both airdromes.

Some of our planes were saved, but the main strength of our air forces was gone.

Washington Officer Headed 1500 Marines in Hand-to-Hand Bataan Battle

Six Others Are Mentioned in Navy Account

A native Washingtonian, Col. Samuel L. Howard, Marine Corps, headed the 1500 Leathernecks in their courageous hand-to-hand fighting against Japanese attempting to land on Bataan Peninsula, yesterday's Navy communique disclosed.

Six other officers from the Washington area, or well known here, mentioned in the communique are:

Commander Francis J. Bridget, Washington born and educated.

Lieut. Comdr. Rintoul T. Whitney, whose wife and two children live in Fairfax County, Va., and Lieut. Thomas K. Bowers, of Annapolis, who have been cited by the Navy for extraordinary or distinguished service during the bombing of Cavite naval base before its evacuation.

Commander E. L. Sackett, who lists Washington as his residence, commander of the rapair ship Canopus, destroyed by United States forces to keep it out of Japanese hands when the sailors and Marines left Bataan several days ago to fight on from Corregidor.

Lieut. Comdr. T. G. Warfield, who was an instructor at the Naval Academy before assuming command in 1941 of the minesweeper Bittern, destroyed at the same time for the same reason.

Lieut. N. M. Dial, of Washington, commander of the tug Napa, likewise destroyed.

Meanwhile, three more Army men known in this area were reported to have been with Gen. Wainwright's little force when the Japanese knockout blow came.

They are Col. Alexander S. Quintard, a native of Washington whose mother lives here; Maj. Thompson Brooke Maury, son of a Washington newspaperman, Magruder Gordon Maury, and Master Sergt. Carl J. Milyneck, whose wife lives here.

Col. Howard

Born in Washington 51 years ago, Col. Howard was graduated from Virginia Military Institute in 1912 and two years later entered the Marine Corps as a second lieutenant.

Since May, 1941, he has been in command of the Fourth Marine Regiment, transferred to the Philippines from Shanghai two weeks before the Japs struck at Pearl Harbor. He was awarded the Haitian Campaign Medal, Haitian Distinguished Service Medal and Diploma, Haiti and Dominican Republic Expeditionary Medal with bronze star.

Commander Sackett

A native of Bancroft, Nebr., Commander Jackett was graduated from the U. S. Naval Academy in 1919 and first saw service as an ensign aboard the U. S. S. Florida. He was later assigned to submarine service and in 1932 reported to the Edgewood Arsenal, Md., for instruction in chemical warfare. He attended the post-graduate school, Naval Academy, Annapolis, a few months later and left there in 1933 for the University of California for a course in marine engineering.

Commander Sackett resumed command of the U. S. S. Canopus February 28, 1940. He lists Washington as his residence.

Lieut. Warfield

Lieut. Warfield was graduated from the United States Naval Academy in 1932 and was advanced to lieutenant senior grade in 1939, when, after service on the U. S. S. Maryland and other warships, he was ordered to the Naval Academy for duty as instructor in the Department of Ordnance and Gunnery. He was detached from Annapolis in July, 1941, to assume command of the minesweeper Bittern, destroyed at Bataan.

Commander Bridget

Commander Bridget, 44, Washington native, attended Western High School and the Columbian Preparatory School here before entering the Naval Academy in 1917.

In 1938 and 1939 he served as assistant naval attache and assistant naval attache for air at the American embassy in Tokyo. For a year previously he served in the Bureau of Aeronautics here.

Lieut. Dial

A son of the late Senator Nathaniel Dial of South Carolina, and Mrs. Dial, of 1852 Kalorama Road Northwest. Lieut. Dial attended Western High School here and entered the Naval Academy in 1928. His first assignment was aboard the U. S. S. Arizona. In September, 1941, he assumed command of the U. S. S. Napa and was later ordered to China. He moved on to the Philippines last August.

Mrs. Dial said last night she received a letter from her son a week ago, saying he was safe.

Lieut. Bowers

Son of Commander John Treadwell Bowers, retired naval officer now living in Annapolis, Md., Lieut. Bowers is a 31-year-old native of Newport, R. I.; Annapolis, and Long Beach, Calif., and the Severn School at Severn, Md. He was on duty at the Bureau of Ordnance in Washington from October, 1940, until May, 1941, when he reported for sea duty.

Col. Quintard

Col. Quintard, a native of Washington and grandson of the late Alexander Shepherd, one-time governor of the District of Columbia, was commissioned a second lieutenant in World War I and has been in the Army since. On last report, February 25, he was a field artillery officer on Bataan.

His mother, Mrs. Edward A. Quintard, and a sister, Mrs. E. Reese Thomson, live at 4424 Forty-ninth Street Northwest. A daughter, Mrs. Wyatt Brown, is a resident of Alexandria. Col. Quintard's wife and two other daughters are in Sewanee, Tenn., with her parents, Gen. and Mrs. James J. Jervey.

Lieut. Comdr. Whitney

A former college and professional football player, 52-year-old Lieut. Comdr. Whitney entered the service as a national naval volunteer in 1917, served at sea in World War I and was commissioned as an ensign on admission to the Navy's regular line in 1921.

At one time he was football coach at Jefferson College. He is a native of Escanaba, Mich., which he lists as his present shore residence.

Maj. Maury

Maj. Maury, son of Magruder Gordon Maury, Washington newspaperman, of 5031 V Street Northwest, was a staff officer for field artillery on Bataan, according to the latest information received by his wife, who is working in an airplane factory at Los Angeles.

An honor graduate of both the University of Virginia and the Military Academy at West Point, Maj. Maury was stationed at Fort Myer, Va., in 1934, at the time of his marriage to the former Miss Landon Priscilla Bunker. He was ordered to the Philippines last June.

Sergt. Milyneck

Master Sergt. Carl J. Milyneck, 32, who was stationed for 14 years at Fort Belvoir, was among the gallant American soldiers fighting the Japs on Bataan, it was learned here yesterday.

MILYNECK

Sergt. Milyneck's wife, Mrs. Beulah Milyneck, lives in Washington at 2834 R Street Southeast. She went with her husband to the Philippines when was assigned to duty there in September, 1940, and remained until last June when she was sent home with other American women and children.

back at the new invasion, sinking a Japanese cruiser, the Army said.

The Army said the Japanese "apparently" were landing troops on Cebu from a fleet of five warships and ten transports. The Cebu radio fell silent.

From the Southwest Pacific, meanwhile, the Navy had this success to report—the sinking by a United States submarine of a Japanese warship, described as a heavily armed "auxiliary cruiser or large tender." The enemy vessel went down in the vicinity of the Celebes Sea.

Before leaving Bataan, the Navy disclosed, Capt. Kenneth M. Hoeffel, in charge of the land-fighting sailors, directed the destruction of the 500-foot floating drydock Dewey, and completed destruction of three ships, rendering all of them useless to the enemy. The ships were the 5975-ton submarine tender Canopus, the 840-ton minesweeper Bittern and the 845-ton tug, Napa.

Of the evacuated forces which now face a desperate battle from which further escape seems impossible, the Navy said about 1500 were marines and the balance sailors. The bluejacket force, it was understood, comprised most of an original force of 2000 sailors on Bataan.

The Army said the evacuees were not to be counted among the 36,853 United States and native troops it listed as trapped. These troops, defeated only after they were exhausted in a week's unbroken fighting, are presumed to remain on the peninsula.

These same forces had fought in the front lines with Army infantry and had stood with Wainwright's artillery along the beach defenses of the peninsula. In bitter hand-to-hand struggles they had thrust back dozens of Japanese landing attempts.

At one time they constituted about one-third of Gen. MacArthur's Regular United States forces. The Navy's estimate of their strength indicated that still to be accounted for are approximately 1000 of them.

The marines were commanded by Washington-born Col. Samuel L. Howard. The command included his own Fourth Regiment, removed to Manila from Shanghai last fall, and the First Separate Battalion, whose commander was Lieut. Col. John Porter Adams, wearer of the Navy Cross for his courage during the evacuation of the Cavite Navy base last December.

Forts Dare Not Fire

The only Army communique of the day applied this last bitter touch of irony to the unhappy picture of Bataan's exhausted survivors—unwittingly they served to shield the Japanese from Corregidor's big guns.

Enemy batteries in Bataan and on the south shore of Manila Bay shelled Corregidor and its satellite forts, the communique said, but the Japanese fire was not returned.

"The exact position of our troops in that area was not known and it was desired to avoid the chance of subjecting them to our own fire," the War Department explained.

Although General Wainright, reporting on conditions Thursday, said all communication between Bataan and Corregidor was cut off, and the department declared that fighting on the peninsula appeared to have ceased, Tokyo broadcasts indicated that the enemy was still meeting some opposition.

The Japanese, said the Associated Press, last night claimed the occupation of Cabcaben, on the peninsula's southeast shore, and reported their troops advancing on the last American-held town, Mariveles on the south coast.

As they fell back, the Japanese said, Americans and Filipinos were burning or otherwise destroying whatever they could find that might be of value to the enemy. Mariveles, on the extreme tip of the peninsula, was reported in flames and huge columns of smoke arose everywhere on the Bataan coast.

The Domei News Agency said the Americans appeared to have destroyed every military installation on the road below Cabcaben, the Associated Press reported.

The dispatches stated that Gen. Wainwright has assembled several small transports at Los Cochinos in another evacuation move, but the Japanese deemed prospects of escape to be slim. They expected their naval units at the entrance of the bay to block removal.

Gen. Wainwright's message to President Roosevelt, made public in part, was in response to one from the President authorizing him to surrender if he wishes. The general's reply, referring to the colors still flying from the fortress, refuted Axis claims that he sought an armistice.

President Roosevelt at his press conference called Wainwright's message grand. The President had no comment on the Philippine situation except to say that everyone felt pretty badly about Bataan.

Little Hope for Corregidor

Admittedly, there was little hope that Corregidor could long hold out. The fortress, which must be reduced before the Japanese can gain full control of Manila Bay, was bombed repeatedly Thursday in addition to being shelled from shore batteries.

(The Navy's announcement, carried in full elsewhere in this paper, recounted many deeds of personal heroism on the part of the men who must now make at least one more desperate fight for Corregidor.)

The venerable drydock Dewy was by far the most famous and costly of the Navy facilities destroyed at Bataan. She was built by the Maryland Steel Co., Sparrows Point, Md., and launched June 10, 1905. She cost $1,125,000. During her trials she docked the armored cruiser Colorado and the battleship Iowa.

From December 28, 1905, to July 10, 1906, she was towed 13,089 miles from Solomons, Md., to Olongapo in the Philippines, a historic feat of seamanship. Her last trip was across Manila Bay after the evacuation of bomb-torn Cavite.

Dazed Nurses and Warriors Battle Way to Corregidor

By Dean Schedler

Associated Press Staff Writer

Corregidor Fortress, April 9 (AP) (Delayed).—All night long last night, nurses dazed with fatigue and war-weary fighters braved Japanese bombers and shark-infested waters to escape stricken Bataan for the comparative safety of Corregidor Fortress in Manila Bay.

(This is the first cabled news dispatch to reach the Associated Press directly from Corregidor since the fall of Bataan.)

Across the narrow channel which separates Bataan Peninsula from Corregidor came civilians, as well, all who could or dared make the trip to the fortress.

They came across in rowboats, mostly. Some of them swam and were picked up in mid-channel by other small craft.

All the while, Japanese bombers dropped their bombs or viciously machine-gunned the channels.

I talked with soldiers who had gone many nights without sleep or had little to eat during the final days while they fought so valiantly against overwhelming odds.

They tried to oblige by relating little bits of information concerning those awful last hours in which they stood, and retreated bit by bit in the face of terrific machine gun, cannon and aerial bomb fire.

But they were interested in only one thing—sleep.

The nurses arrived in small boats, stumbling ashore with weariness after days and long nights of work in hospitals under constant fire.

The soldiers could hardly impart their thoughts to me. It was as though they were groping for consciousness in a maelstrom.

They only knew that they were hungry and tired—and sleepy.

Meanwhile, during the night we could look across the water toward Bataan and hear tremendous explosions and see myriad-color fires as munition dumps were exploded. Men carried out the last defiant orders of the scorched earth policy.

The drama of the arrival of these refugees from the hell-fire of Bataan surpassed only the aching scene on Corregidor itself when soldiers and officers heard over the radio from the United States the story of the last of Bataan.

Veterans Weep at the News

Seasoned soldiers, veterans of many a heavy bombing attack on this staunch island fortress, wept openly as the radio announcer, "The Voice of Freedom," broadcast by shortwave from San Francisco, the words:

"Filipino and American troops of this war ravaged, bloodstained peninsula have laid down their arms. The world will long remember the epic struggle."

There was continued silence among us, but we could hear the firing which we knew then, was the last gallant struggle of Bataan.

"But what sustained them through all these months of incessant battle was a force more than physical," the voice continued.

"It was the thought of their native land and all it holds that is most dear to them, the thought of freedom and dignity, and pride in these most priceless of all human prerogatives."

We listened in silence, but in the heart of us all, I am sure, arose an "amen."

Chinese Vow To Avenge Bataan Defeat

By the Associated Press

Chungking, April 10.—The defenders of Bataan were saluted today in sympathetic sadness and for once the news of a defeat for the United Nations was received without discordant criticism.

"Chinese armies are determined to avenge the American losses on the Bataan Peninsula," said a statement issued by War Minister General Ho Ying-Chin.

"China has been fighting against great odds for almost five years and we are determined to continue to fight shoulder to shoulder with our Allies against our common foe until final victory is achieved.

"The Filipinos and Americans of Bataan won world-wide admiration and respect by holding out for four months against absolutely superior enemy land, naval and air forces.

"Since the outbreak of the Pacific war, Bataan Peninsula is the only place where the defender has been able to put up a prolonged resistance against the repeated victorious enemy onslaughts."

This and other comment was to the effect that the Bataan forces had made an invaluable contribution to the Allied cause.

extremely remote chance of one of them flying if the other two were stripped.

Resolutely he began the task. He moved all of his possessions to the flying fortress, living there for five days without sleeping, while directing a hastily requisitioned crew of 60 Hollanders in rebuilding the tattered ship.

The Dutch workers toiled in successive eight-hour shifts, 20 on each shift, with Hayes superintending all shifts. Two engines were rebuilt in three days. The wings had to be repaired. There were no flaps at all and nothing could be done about that, except pray that flaps would not be needed. The bomber's tail, which had been blasted by the Japs, had to be completed overhauled.

The biggest problem was how to reduce the plane's weight and make more space in order to accommodate the most passengers. Hayes ordered everything thrown out—parachutes, rubber boats, radio sets—nothing was left except the plane, its controls and plenty of room.

Finally the hour of departure came. Everyone who was going knew that their pilot was not a flyer, but only a man with nerve and mechanical genius. Yet all shared faith in his ability to get them out.

Somehow, this once-proud terror of the skies again lifted her wings into the air, with a quietly confident first-timer pilot at the controls.

Due to the load of 18 passengers, the ship was rarely able to fly above an altitude of 3000 feet.

There were no maps of Australia aboard the plane, the Dutch having run out of such charts.

All Hayes had to guide him were his determination, courage, confidence—and "a nose for Australia." Virtually by smell and intuition alone he piloted the ship to one of Australia's safest airdromes—1300 miles over sea and sands.

When he arrived there he was forced to land minus flaps—an aerial wonder in itself.

Everyone of those men, women and children who came with him owes his or her life and freedom to the daring and ingenuity of Master Sergt. Harry Hayes.

Hayes is married and has two children. He has been in the United States Army Air Corps for 16 years.

At present he is laid up with a broken arm suffered in a crash during operations in northern Australia.

After the 1300-mile trip of the flying fortress under Hayes' control, United States officers inspected the ship on Australian soil and pronounced it absolutely useless and unfit ever to go into the air. It never left the ground again. It was dismantled on the spot.

Navy Tells Heroic Role Played by Sailors and Marines in Defense of Bataan

Here is the Navy's own story of the part played by Bluejackets and Marines in the fighting in Manila Bay and on Bataan and of their evacuation from the peninsula:

"EVACUATION OF the Bluejackets and Marines who had been fighting on Bataan since early January—their presence there was disclosed on March 19, in a Navy Department communique declaring they constituted about one-third of Gen. MacArthur's regular United States Army troops in the area—was carried out under orders of Lieut. Gen. Wainwright when it became evident that it was no longer possible to hold the peninsula in the face of overwhelming enemy odds.

"Early in April the scale of enemy attacks increased and furious fighting was reported in the front lines and along the beaches. Attempted landings by the Japanese from barges on the various beaches were repulsed by Army artillery units and by naval and Marine beach defense units in hand-to-hand fighting. When it became increasingly apparent that Bataan could not continue to hold Lieut. Gen. Wainwright ordered Navy and Marine Corps personnel to Corregidor under cover of darkness.

"Capt. Kenneth M. Hoeffel, U. S. N., commanded the Navy personnel evacuated from Cavite and Olongapo when those points fell. Col. Samuel L. Howard, U. S. M. C., headed the Marines, about 1500 officers and men. Among the Marines was Lieut. Col. John Porter Adams, U. S. M. C., who received the Navy Cross for his conduct during Cavite's evacuation in late December.

"IN COL. HOWARD'S command was his own Fourth Regiment, removed from Shanghai to Manila last fall, and various small detachments stationed in the Philippine area before the war, including the First Separate Marine Battalion under Lieut. Col. Adams.

"As December passed and it became evident that Manila and Cavite were no longer tenable as bases, all naval units and the various Marine units on Luzon were successfully evacuated to the southward. There they joined Gen. MacArthur's forces.

"The Navy Yard at Cavite was destroyed prior to evacuation, together with military stores and equipment which could not be moved by our forces, or of use to them. All naval artillery, fuel and ammunition was placed at the disposal of the Army. The repair ship U.S.S. Canopus, moved when Cavite and Olongapo were abandoned, suffered considerable damage from bombing, but was beached at Mariveles and used as a fort and repair shop for mechanized units and military equipment.

"The entire construction and repair organization and undamaged equipment of the Navy was turned over to the use of the Army. Operations of United States Navy submarines from Manila Bay was ended, and their base was shifted to the southward.

"DURING JANUARY and February the naval and marine forces functioned as a part of the beach defenses of Mariveles and Corregidor, manning guns and operating in cooperation with the Army. In the third week of February the naval battalion was shifted from Mariveles to man the beach defenses of Fort Hughes.

"Up to this time the naval battalion had been assigned the defense of a sector on the Bataan front. The month of March found the Fourth Marines and the naval battalion an integral part of the harbor defenses, and they continued to fight at the side of the Army units until Lieut. Gen. Wainwright's order to move to Corregidor.

"Severe damage to storage facilities, power plants and repair facilities was caused by bombing and resultant fire when Japanese planes bombed the navy yard at Cavite on December 10, 1941.

"The destroyers U. S. S. Pillsbury and U. S. S. Peary, whose loss later in the war was announced by the Navy on March 24 and April 3, respectively, and the submarine U. S. S. Sealion, suffered minor damage from bombs. The three vessels were laid up at Cavite for repairs at the time of the attack. Both destroyers saw much service before their sinkings in distant and later battles.

"NUMEROUS ACTS of heroism were performed by navy yard personnel in connection with fire fighting, first aid and security measures during the early December bombings. Detailed reports of these actions have not yet been received, but word of a few such instances has reached the Navy Department.

"In the power plant all personnel except one officer, Lieut. Jerry A. Steward, Civil Engineer Corps, U. S. N., were killed in one of the first direct hits. Although wounded Lieut. Steward remained at his post throughout the entire bombing, fighting fires and securing the power plant's machinery.

"Ensign R. W. Granston, Chief Pay Clerk O. C. Bruun and Pay Clerk C. A. Hanson, all of the Supply Corps, U. S. N., deliberately braved the danger of exploding munitions and burning buildings to remove official funds from the navy yard to a place of safety.

"Later in December Bruun, Hanson and Lieut. Carl F. Faires, jr., another Supply Corps officer, obtained funds from Manila under hazardous circumstances to pay off in full 6000 former navy yard employes. Their trip was made during intensive bombing.

"DURING THE BOMBING at Cavite Pay Clerk J. H. Walker displayed the highest degrees of personal courage, leadership and presence of mind while under fire by voluntarily organizing and leading a party which rescued a number of buried and wounded men from burning debris.

"Commander Francis J. Bridget, U. S. N., and Lieut. John D. Bulkeley, U. S. N., also distinguished themselves in action and were cited for 'extraordinary heroism.'

"Lieut. Col. Adams, Lieut. Comdr. Rintoul T. Whitney, U. S. N.; Lieut. Thomas K. Bowers, U. S. N.; Lieut. (j. g.) Malcolm M. Champlin, U. S. N. R.; Lieut. (j. g.) Trose E. Donaldson, U. S. N. R., and Chief Boatswain James C. Oster, U. S. N., also were cited for "distinguished service" during the bombardment.

"All of the above acts of heroism were rewarded by the presentation of Navy Crosses to the officers mentioned. The awards were announced by the Navy Department on March 12.

"When naval personnel and marines left Cavite to join forces with Gen. MacArthur's units the submarine repair ship Canopus, several small tugs and the old floating drydock Dewey were taken along. The submarine Sealion was so damaged as to necessitate her complete demolition to prevent her repair by the hard-pressing enemy. Her destruction was announced by the Navy in a communique issued March 18.

"IN JANUARY the Navy's motor torpedo boats with Gen. MacArthur operated against Japanese shipping. One boat, commanded by Lieut. Bulkeley, sank a Japanese ship of about 5000 tons inside the entrance to Subic Bay, as announced in a communique issued January 20. One motor torpedo boat was lost about the middle of January.

"In the latter part of February a naval vessel evacuated High Commissioner Sayre, his family and his staff from Corregidor, while in the second week of March, Gen. MacArthur and his family, Rear Admiral Rockwell and various members of their staffs were evacuated by a motor torpedo boat.

"Before leaving Bataan for Corregidor a few days ago, Capt. Hoeffel destroyed the drydock Dewey and completed the destruction of the repair ship Canopus, the minesweeper Bittern and the tug Napa, which had been previously damaged so as to render them incapable of fighting.

"The Canopus was commanded by Commander E. L. Sackett, U. S. N.; the Bittern by Lieut. Comdr. T. G. Warfield, U. S. N., and the Napa by Lieut. N. M. Dial, U. S. N."

Marshall Reported Pressing British for Offensive Now

U. S. Fliers Bag 7 Jap Planes Above Burma

By the United Press

A. V. G. Headquarters, Kunming, April 10.—American Volunteer Fliers, roaring back into the thick of the battle for Burma, shot down seven Japanese fighter planes and probably destroyed four others today, running their total for the last 48 hours to 23 shot down or damaged.

A squadron of 20 Japanese speedy "O" naval fighters, sneaking over an A. V. G. base in northern Burma this afternoon in an attempt to raid it a second time today, were surprised by a handful of American fliers whose blazing guns definitely sent seven of the enemy plummeting to earth and damaged four others so severely that it is doubtful they were able to reach their own base, said a communique issued tonight.

None of the shark-nosed American Tomahawk planes were lost during the short dogfight in which, just as yesterday, they were outnumbered at least two to one.

The American fliers pounced on the Japanese before they were able to do any damage to the A. V. G. airdrome, said the communique, issued by the headquarters here of Col. Claire L. Chennault, commander of the Americans who are flying under the banner of China.

One pilot just returned from the Burma front said that Japanese air activity there during the past week was "heavier than ever, the Japanese having received large reinforcements."

3 Columns Storming Chinese Defense Line

Chungking, April 10 (U.P.).—Three Japanese columns are storming Chinese defense lines above Toungoo, on Burma's Mandalay Road, while below the Burma oil fields to the west a new threat to the British flank is developing from Japanese creeping up the Irrawaddy River in small boats at night, front dispatches said tonight.

In the Toungoo sector, commanded by U. S. Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell, one Japanese force was driving against Chinese troops astride the Mandalay road 6 to 10 miles north of Toungoo. Another enemy column was fanning out east, in the direction of Mawchi, Burma's tin center. A third force moved around the west side of the Sittang River in an attempt to outflank Yedashe, 18 miles above Toungoo and at least 10 miles at the rear of the Mandalay road defenders.

The British line, some 70 miles west of Toungoo, was less than 60 miles from Magwe, where the oil fields begin, and that was believed to be the invader's next main goal. It would serve them as a base for drives through the oil district and toward Mandalay, 150 miles northwest.

Indian Parleys Near Collapse

Abul Kalan Azad and Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru told their colleagues that as a result of their talk with Cripps last evening a satisfactory settlement on the defense of India issue was improbable.

It was understood that the congress, after examining the new British formula for Indian defense, had rejected it as "inadequate and therefore unsatisfactory."

(Authoritative London quarters said they had no word of any actual rejection, but that this would appear to be a logical development.)

Despite this, Nehru was reported eager to come to terms with the British. He was joined, it was said, by a fellow committee member, Chakravarthi Rajagopalachariar, the congress party leader in Madras, but they were reported to have been out-voted by a majority more in line with Gandhi's wishes.

Objections re-emerging in the committee deliberations pivoted on the question of defense and other proposals on which it was previously reported that understanding was in sight.

The British appeared to have offered a compromise on the defense plank, reportedly proposing an Indian defense minister in an Indian war cabinet but with a Briton in supreme military command for conduct of the war. But evidently this did not satisfy the native leaders.

Azad told reporters he was sending the committee's resolution to Cripps, the chief British negotiator, and that he hoped to issue its text and a supplementary statement tomorrow.

The first Congress Party rejection to the original British offer was forwarded to London last week and presumably the war cabinet's response to the detailed outline had constituted the basis of the amendments advanced by Cripps after once postponing departure for home.

Navy Cut, India Girds for Invasion

overwhelmed by waves of Japanese bombers.

The Japanese naval power which has smashed this opening in the British naval wall protecting India springs from aircraft based on at least two regular carriers and probably one auxiliary carrier, a well-informed source said.

Most of these planes are fighter bombers and it is probable that the Anglo-American air force will not attack in great strength until the Allied bombers can be escorted by shore-based fighters.

From the hill country of the north to the flat naked plains British Indian troops are concentrated at strategic points from which mobile columns could be launched to strike at an invader. India's coastline is too long to allow the British to rely on linear defense.

While British losses at sea had been heavy and punishing they had been by no means as severe as Tokyo had alleged.

The Japanese claimed that aside from the Hermes, Dorsetshire and Cornwall, two additional British cruisers had been sunk off Trincomalee Naval Station.

To this the admiralty returned this specific, official denial:

Warships Save Tanker Hit By Axis Sub

By Leo Disher
United Press Staff Writer

With the United States Fleet in the Atlantic, April 6 (Delayed).—An American merchant ship, a gaping torpedo wound in her side, limped unmolested toward an American port today after the timely arrival of two fleet United States destroyers apparently frightened away an attacking Axis submarine.

The vessel's escape was not without its casualties. One of the 33 men aboard her was missing and another was injured.

The enemy raider sent a torpedo into the vessel early Monday, but fled before it could fire a finishing shot. The ship's captain, S. B. Heglund, of Philadelphia, accredited the escape to the arrival of the two United States warships. Crewmen said the destroyers hove into view "less than an hour" after the torpedo struck.

I reached this vessel aboard a launch from a warship. I boarded her and found the midship a splintered pile of debris, with water sweeping from the open sea into the hull.

The missing man was a 29-year-old seaman Matthew Hehnen, of Philadelphia. Another seaman, Reynolds Adamiak, of Riverhead, N. Y., was reported injured in a leap to the deck of the ship and to have been taken to a shore hospital by Coast Guardsmen. Both were sprayed by burning oil which spouted to a height of 30 feet when the torpedo hit.

I soon learned that Skipper Heglund was intolerant of publicity, insisting that the whole incident was "ordinary and everyday."

He agreed, however, that it was "miraculous" that his ship remained afloat. The crewmen reflected their skipper's attitude, remaining calm and saying they intended to continue service aboard tankers through Atlantic Coast danger zones.

Heglund was in his bunk when the torpedo struck at 1 a. m., Monday. Radioman William Morris, 24, Ridley Park, Pa., was in the radio room talking with the third mate when "suddenly the light went out and there was a terrific explosion."

Fully aware the vessel had been torpedoed, Morris made an unsuccessful attempt to get lights from an auxiliary system. When he tried to send a message, he found the ship's antenna had been torn away in the explosion.

Heglund said the spouting, blazing oil drenched Hehnen, who then plunged into the sea, never to be seen again.

Babcock, a Blairstown, N. J., resident, who spent two months in a navigation school and then "picked up the rest myself," recounted that he and Ward steered the tiny lifeboat by sun and stars and dead reckoning until a Navy patrol boat picked them up on April 8.

Three of the ship's six passengers were among those saved. Employes of Pan-American Airways, they were Robert L'Hommedieu, 39 Roosevelt Street, Babylon, Long Island, N. Y.; Edward Magruder, 25, 2334 High Street, Washington, D. C.; and Harold J. Bohnen, 46, 594 Willow Road, Winnetka, Ill.

Crews Save Vessels

Norfolk, Va., April 10 (AP).—Crewmen of two American merchant ships, one torpedoed and the other attacked by submarine shellfire off the Atlantic coast, abandoned their vessels but later reboarded their craft and saw them brought safely to port, the Navy disclosed tonight.

The crew of the vessel, a United Nations cargo ship, abandoned her under shellfire from a submarine the night of April 2, but reboarded the vessel several hours later and manned her until she was towed safely to an undisclosed East Coast port the following day.

Two members of the ship's 34-man crew were killed by the raider's shells, seven were missing and four of the 24 survivors were hospitalized for serious wounds, the Fifth Naval District said in announcing the attack today.

Death-Dodging U. S. Sub Hits 4 Jap Cruisers

By the United Press

An Australian Port, April 10.—A battle-scarred American submarine has arrived safely at this port after sinking one Japanese light cruiser and torpedoing three more during a long cruise on which, flirting eternally with disaster, it survived 69 depth charges in two days.

The submarine commander, a young American ace whose name cannot be disclosed, revealed that in addition to the cruisers, his torpedoes also damaged and possibly sank an 8000-ton transport.

The crewmen were at battle stations almost daily throughout the patrol, and time and again escaped death by a hair's breadth as depth charges burst on all sides.

In Java's Waters

The cruise began in Java waters, from which the submarine was sent to harry the Japanese at the eastern approaches of the Netherlands East Indies.

Its first victory and brush with disaster came, the commander related, when he saw the silhouettes of three enemy destroyers headed directly toward him.

The submarine crash-dived, allowing the destroyers to pass over, then took up a firing position against the ships which were expected to follow.

"The first ship sighted through the periscope was an 8000-ton transport," the commander said. "Our first torpedo, fired at short range, scored a hit. We turned to present our other tubes to the tanker following.

"But when we came up again, we found a light cruiser in the sights of the periscope. We fired again, and believed we hit the cruiser. Just as we submerged, there was an explosion from another direction, indicating that one of the other ships in the convoy also had been hit.

Hunted Four and Half Hours

"The destroyers hunted us four and a half hours. They dropped about 30 depth charges. We were shaken up and damaged, but managed to escape and make repairs.

The submarine then was ordered to a nearby island where a Japanese landing was being made.

"The next target," the commander continued, "was a large force consisting of cruisers, destroyers and transports which entered a harbor, leaving several warships patrolling outside.

"We maneuvered constantly, then about 3 p. m. finally got into excellent position to fire against a cruiser coming in our direction. We fired the bow tubes, and as we dived we saw the cruiser enveloped in a cloud of black smoke and sinking fast.

"Depth charges began to rain down, and the sub shuddered and plunged toward the bottom. We caught her just in the nick of time when we already were below our test depth."

Third Victim

On the following night the commander spotted a third cruiser circling slowly in the moonlight. Again the submarine attacked. The torpedoes found their mark, and the crewmen heard the cruiser's engines slow down and finally stop altogether. And again the submarine eluded the enemy destroyers.

Between 2 and 3 p. m. of the same day a fourth cruiser was spotted.

"We were unable to approach closely until late afternoon," the commander said. "The crew was at battle stations all day. Then as the cruiser zig-zagged through the choppy waters we finally got our chance to fire.

"We let go all our remaining torpedoes, and a gratifying explosion followed. The cruiser's propellers stopped and we heard a series of minor explosions before the depth charges began to crash down."

Quisling Jails Four Bishops For 'Rebellion'

By the Associated Press

Stockholm, April 10.—Vidkun Quisling struck back with concentration camp and ultimatum today at the clergymen of Norway who resigned en masse rather than submit to the Nazi regulations which the puppet-premier is trying to impose upon the church.

Swedish dispatches from Oslo disclosed that yesterday—on the second anniversary of the German assault on Norway—four bishops, among them Bishop Fivind Berggrav of Oslo—had been imprisoned, and that 1100 other clergymen who quit in the mass protest had been given until 2 p. m. Saturday to go back to their work.

Bishop Berggrav and his three colleagues, who were taken to a concentration camp, were accused by the Quisling police of having originated the Easter-eve statement read in Norwegian churches—which the puppet regime called a "rebellious act." This announced the mass resignations.

Earlier the enraged Quisling had declared that his plans were being endangered "by treasonable machinations of Norwegian bishops such as Bishop Berggrav."

The others imprisoned were Bishop Indreboe, Bishop Ingband B. Carlsen and Bishop H. E. Wisloeff.

Quisling's church department insisted it had nothing to do with these arrests "which are the business of the state police." But the church department itself issued the ultimatum to the other pastors. The alternative to returning to work was not stated.

Both Quisling and the church department have issued statements disclaiming any desire to interfere in religious activities of the clergy, but they have said in the same breath that there must be a state church and that the pastors "must not misuse the church and Christians for political purposes."

On Wednesday Quisling said he was being compelled to "annihilate" bishops and others who, he said, were "provocative trespassers."

Among the things the clergymen are protesting against are Quisling's plans for nazification of child education.

British Peril Axis Supply Line to Africa

By the Associated Press

London, April 10.—British submarines were credited tonight with new inroads on the Axis supply line to North Africa and reliable British sources predicted these developments might impel Nazi Marshal Erwin Rommel to strike in force with his available desert army, rather than wait for more help.

One of the British submarines slipped through the destroyer screen of an enemy convoy and sank one large and one medium-sized supply ship. In a separate attack, other submarines sank two schooners, one of them known to have been loaded with sugar and other stores for Tripoli.

Only yesterday the Admiralty announced the sinking of a heavy Italian cruiser by a British submarine.

In the desert, some 100 miles west of Tobruk, Rommel meanwhile was sparring in force but with caution. Two of his columns, equipped with tanks, clashed yesterday with British forces, and some of the Axis tanks were damaged. Fighting also spread to the enemy's southern flank, but at the nearest point the enemy still was 15 miles from the British Gazala line.

In Cairo the present Axis activity was interpreted as an attempt to establish strong points in front of the Tmimiel Mechili trail.

Rommel, however, has an estimated 125,000 men in the desert and there have been several indications he is preparing for a definite major offensive, despite the uncertain weather. He has strengthened bomber forces in preference to fighters, established advanced fuel and ammunition dumps and has moved Italian units to the front, while training fresh German troops in the desert warfare in rearward areas.

Red Official Sees Nazi Defeat Near

By the Associated Press

Kuibyshev, April 10.—The Red army will liquidate the German army in Russia in 1942, S. A. Lozovsky, Soviet Vice Commissar for Foreign Affairs, told his press conference today, adding that United States supplies are reaching the Russian forces and being "used to make Nazi corpses."

Asked how United States supplies are arriving, Lozovsky, official press spokesman, said, "All sort of things for war" are being received "but precisely in what quantities is a secret."

"All the supplies we produce and those from the outside are used to convert the German army into corpses," Lovsky went on, "and it goes successfully."

He ridiculed German reports (evidently not circulated generally) that Russian losses have reached 20,000,000, saying that anyone knows that only 10 to 12 per cent of a nations population can be mobilized for the army.

(Russia's population, by official estimate in 1940, was 193,000,000.)

Lozovsky said the Germans had stopped giving information on their dead and wounded.

"I suggest," he said, "that they create a new category, the 'slightly killed.'"

Asked to amplify the statement that the Red army would liquidate the Germans on Soviet soil, Lozovsky said he could not go into battle plans. Asked if his liquidation prediction was based on establishment of a second European front, he replied that a press conference was not the proper place to discuss a second front.

Lozovsky asserted that the Germans had dropped talk of a spring offensive and now talk about a summer offensive.

Touching on a recent trip to Berlin by Boris of Bulgaria, the official spokesman declared that the Germans were seeking additional "cannon fodder" for the Russian front.

Litvinoff Urges United Action Against Nazis

By the United Press

Philadelphia, April 10.—Five points upon which he believes the Allied Nations must hinge their entire effort were outlined tonight by Soviet Ambassador Maxim Litvinoff in an address before the American Academy of Political and Social Science. He said:

"1. Victory is impossible without the destruction of Hitler.

"2. Hitler cannot be destroyed either by blockading Germany or solely by bombarding German towns, but only on the field of battle.

"3. The main field of battle lies at present on the territory of the Soviet Union, where the overwhelming majority of the divisions of Germany and of those wrung from her satellites, are concentrated and will continue to be concentrated.

"4. The Red army has shown that these divisions can be beaten, driven back and destroyed.

"5. The complete destruction and final defeat of Hitler demands definite united efforts of the Soviet Union and Great Britain, with some supplementary aid from the United States of America."

Litvinoff urged United Nations action to force Hitler to scatter his forces.

"We can only guess where he will strike next," Litvinov said. "The very fact that we have such a broad field for our guesses shows how advantageous is the enemy's position, compelling us to scatter our forces. Isn't it time for us to make Hitler rack his brains and wonder where his enemies will direct their next blows, on which part of the continent they will land troops? Isn't it time to compel him to scatter his forces a little?"

Staff Chief May Consult Exiled Governments

By Edward W. Beattie, Jr.
United Press Staff Writer

London, April 10.—The imperative necessity for a smashing blow at the Axis now—not next autumn or next year—is being pressed upon British war leaders by Gen. George C. Marshall, United States Army chief of staff, and Harry L. Hopkins, controller of American war supplies, it was learned tonight.

Hopkins, who is presumed to speak directly for President Roosevelt, told Prime Minister Churchill that the United States cannot wait until she "over-produces" war materials to seize the offensive, it was reported. He was said to have stated that the high command in Washington wants the Allies to mass the resources at hand and strike at the most vulnerable Axis spots at once.

Marshall was reported preparing to meet leaders of the European governments in exile here to determine what part the great underground armies in their occupied countries could play in an Allied drive into Europe. British, Russian, Czecho-Slovakia, Polish, Dutch, Free French, Yugoslav and Norwegian officials were expected to attend Marshall's conference at the British war office.

Nothing official was said of these developments, but it was becoming abundantly clear that the Marshall-Hopkins mission concerned the possible opening of a "second front" on the European mainland, to be spearheaded jointly by the British and the A. E. F. However, should that course be decided against, it was believed that the alternative would be to mass every bit of Allied war material—planes, tanks and guns—that can be spared, and haul them to Russia for a showdown with Germany on the Eastern Front.

Marshall went to the war office today, where he talked with leaders of Britain's combined command.

All that could be learned about Hopkins' activities was that he conferred with a member of the war cabinet before lunching with Marshall and Air Chief Marshall Sir Charles Portal.

He and Marshall were said to be in constant touch with Churchill and planning to spend the weekend with him.

ating 8000 civilian prisoners.

Elsewhere on the central front the Red army captured a number of strategic fortified points, endangering the German defense system of blockhouses, bunkers and barbed wire around an occupied city, war reports said.

Berlin Admits Break-through

(Berlin radio, heard in London, admitted that the Russians succeeded in breaking through the central part of the German defense line north of Lake Ilmen, dislodging the Germans from their advance positions. It claimed that the attacking force was cut off later.)

Soviet guerillas operating in the northwestern area were reported to have captured a key point, killing 900 Germans and then fighting a punitive expedition and killing 300 more.

In the same area the guerillas blew up 135 bunkers, a concrete river bridge and a food storehouse.

On the Kalinin front, Russian tank squads drove German mechanized units out of a strong point, killing 800 enemy troops. A neighboring village was recaptured and the bodies of 350 Germans found in the streets.

Signalizing consolidated victories in the Ukraine, the Russians were reported to have reopened one of the biggest coal mines in the Donets Basin.

U. S. Now Is Building More War Planes Than All Axis Nations Combined, Sen. Brown Says

By the Associated Press

Royal Oak, Mich., April 10.—United States Senator Prentiss M. Brown (Democrat), of Michigan, told a Jefferson Day banquet gathering of Democrats last night that the United States "now—not on order, not in six months, but now—is producing more airplanes than Germany, Italy, Japan and all the conquered countries together."

The speaker told his audience he was reminding them of production figures because confidence, not an attitude of defeatism, is the Nation's need.

"I greatly deprecate the attitude of some in the Administration who think they can spur our workers to greater effort by telling them how much superior the Germans and the Japs are," Senator Brown said. "It isn't so."

The Senator said the Garand rifle, "which has three times the fire power of any rifle used by enemy powers, is now, today, being produced in such quantities that one can be placed in the hands of every American soldier who is supposed to carry a rifle."

A battleship, 2 cruisers, 18 destroyers and 5 submarines have been launched since Pearl Harbor, he added, as well as 112 merchant ships. Merchant ships now are being completed at the rate of two a day, he said.

Halifax Sees Great Advantage for Allies

New Orleans, April 10 (AP).—Lord Halifax, British Ambassador to the United States, predicted here today that when the United States "gets in full stride" in plane production, the Allied nations would have a great advantage which would lead to ultimate victory over the Axis powers.

"When that time comes this country is going to be producing more planes in one month than the Japanese can produce in a year," he said. "This is a solid reason why we'll win the war."

Lord Halifax, accompanied by his wife, arrived here today to view defense industries.

"The Japs are going to give us a lot more trouble before we are through with them," the Ambassador said. "And so are the Germans. However, even giving the Japanese the benefit of doubt of our estimate of their production, the Allies eventually will win and this will come about when the United States has its full stride in production."

ROBERT LYMAN

tive Clare E. Hoffman (Republican), of Michigan, who ordered 145,000 reprints from the Government Printing Office.

When challenged, Lyman left Mrs. Stanley and hurried away. Deputies sent by Special Prosecutor William Power Maloney overtook the man and brought him back for a quick grilling by two Federal agents. Maloney then called Lyman into the grand jury room.

Subpenaed for Monday

Later the man was examined by Detective Lieut. Joseph A. Shimon, chief investigator for the district attorney. Late in the day he was freed, after being handed a subpena commanding him to appear at the grand jury room Monday.

Lyman said this order interfered with his plan to leave last night for Detroit, to go to work in a machine shop which is handling "defense orders" at St. Claire Shores, Mich.

Lyman's ascertainable history shows him to be a sort of small-time, unpublicized Jan Valtin. He has been a prize fighter and a law student. He has a record of a score of arrests, for assault, disorderly conduct, threats and the like. He is known to the Washington police and to those in Detroit.

At one time, Lyman published a small bulletin called "American Unity." He was affiliated with the National Workers League, a Fascist-minded movement in Detroit.

Worked With Others

Col. E. N. Sanctuary, of the Jew-baiting group, "American Christian Defenders," is a correspondent and collaborator of the husky Lyman. About two weeks after the attack on Pearl Harbor, they were negotiating over the purchase and sale of several thousand copies of the anti-British, isolationist pamphlet, "War Guilt and Warmongers."

Lyman also is a colleague of David Baxter, the San Bernadino, Calif., spokesman for a "peace offensive." Both of them work closely with Court Asher, the Jew-baiting, England-hating publisher of the weekly paper, "The X-Ray," issued in Muncie, Ind.

(An article in Wednesday's Post reported the nature of this publication. Editor's note.)

Called Roosevelt a Jew

Lyman engaged in publishing activities himself, exchanging his product with Baxter, Sanctuary, Asher and others of his colleagues in serving "the cause." Among his output was a chart—bigoted in tone and scurrilous in expression—which purported to show that President Roosevelt was a Jew.

Besides Hudson, Hansen-Sturn and Lyman, two other witnesses were heard yesterday. They were:

James B. Brooks, assistant cashier of the Riggs National Bank, which handled an account of the National Committee to Keep U. S. Out of Foreign Wars. This committee was set up, with Fish as chairman, shortly before the New York isolationist went to Germany in 1939. After conferring with the Nazi foreign minister, Fish proclaimed Hitler's demands on Poland "just."

Charles Connally, of the New York newspaper, Irish Echo, which was another of the known recipients of bulk consignments of Hoffman's "Roosevelt Is a Judas" speech.

Some Witnesses Glum

Assembled in the guarded witness room yesterday were other witnesses who were not heard before adjournment time. Their spirited conversation gave way to glum silence and restless floor pacing after Charles B. Hudson arrived from the jail, his nervous gestures clinking the links of the handcuffs which kept him close to a deputy marshal.

These witnesses included:

Mrs. David Stanley.

E. J. Garner, editor of the Wichita, Kans., newspaper, Publicity, which calls the rubber and sugar shortages "myths," insinuates that the President and his Cabinet are to blame for Pearl Harbor, slanders all Jews, berates Administration supporters in terms approaching obscenity and urges its readers to defeat Congressmen who voted for the lend-lease bill so they cannot again "serve their Jew masters."

Mrs. Charles B. Hudson and her son, William, 21.

William Griffin, editor of the New York Enquirer, which printed Washington articles by Prescott Dennett, Viereck's operative here.

Hermann D. Kissenger, Kansas City lawyer who was arrested there in December on a charge of "giving aid and comfort to the enemy," but was freed a few days later. Kissenger, who was active in "bund" journalism, was another who got Hoffman's "Roosevelt is a Judas" speech in considerable quantity.

Gerald B. Winrod, editor of the defeatist magazine The Defender, of Wichita, Kans., who was beaten for the Republican nomination for the Senate in 1938.

Foreman John S. Gorrell said the grand jurors would examine these witnesses and others in its sessions next week.

The Broom's Editor Raises Dust of Lies

(Editor's note—Scores of verminous little sheets, each with a few thousand readers, are gnawing away at the faith and unity of our people, whispering defeat and clamoring about "freedom of the press." Their common policy—"made in Germany"—is to turn Americans against one another, and to split America from the United Nations. This is the fourth article of a series about these papers.)

Post Staff Writer

"Who is behind this plot?" is the retort of C. Leon de Aryan to a current investigation directed toward canceling his American citizenship.

De Aryan is a tall, lean man, with deep lines in his face, a grim slit of a mouth and intense, deep-set eyes. He owns and edits The Broom in San Diego, Calif.

Before the attack at Pearl Harbor, The Broom was one of the clamorous chorus of little papers that shrieked against aid to England.

The franked speeches of isolationist Congressmen went out postage free from San Diego to The Broom's mailing list.

Like others of the vermin press, The Broom has been patriotic, since December 7. Like the others, The Broom has discovered great value in the Bill of Rights, too.

"The meetings held by Robert Noble have been declared fully within the law by none else than Attorney General Biddle," declared The Broom with satisfaction after Biddle blocked prosecution of Noble for sedition. (Noble went on holding meetings and is now being prosecuted for sedition on the Attorney General's direct order.)

For the Japanese, The Broom suggests an excuse, saying:

"The Emperor is sacred and inviolable"—is Article 3 of the Japanese constitution; which explains why the Japs started shooting when President Roosevelt approached the Emperor directly over the heads of his government negotiators.

Under the heading, "England's Cleanup in Abyssinia," The Broom declared that the British government bought "all Italian properties in Abyssinia" for ten million dollars. This deal was made possible, said The Broom, "out of lend-lease largess."

To the cause of good discipline in the Army, The Broom contributes an article about "the mistake of assuming experts are in a better position to determine whether a long list of laboratory products for the alleged prevention of disease are necessary or whether draftees and enlisted soldiers who have attained physical perfection without the use of these products are entitled to be consulted about what forms of medical treatment they shall submit to."

From the Galilean, suspended magazine issued by William Dudley Pelley—Silver Shirter jailed on a sedition charge—The Broom reprinted an article celebrating Pelley's release on bail pending appeal of a fraud sentence.

Editor de Aryan explained his attendance at Bund meetings by saying he went as a reporter. He explained his frequent anti-Jewish editorials as resentment over Jewish action against him.

When confronted by the citizenship investigation, de Aryan obtained, and printed, letters attesting his sincerity from many officials in his community. Almost all said they disapproved his views, which they called "extreme" and "fanatical."

Once a gang boss in construction work in Mesopotamia and India, de Aryan says he was "dishonorably discharged from the United States Army," but hints that this was not to his discredit.

He sends The Broom through the United States mail at the low second class rate.

Restrictions Demanded On Japanese Papers

Restrictions on 40 Japanese language newspapers were demanded yesterday, in a letter to Postmaster General Walker from J. Bond Smith, attorney who was in charge of espionage precautions in the postal service in the last war.

Smith said the Japanese papers go through the mails without the postal service knowing their contents. As a result, he said, the most flagrant propaganda or espionage messages are undetectable, except by the merest chance.

Smith recalled that in the last war, publishers of foreign language papers were required to file sworn translations.

Gun Duty for Volunteers

One of the main reasons for the British conscription was to get 150,000 additional women into the Auxiliary Territorial Services, members of which have engaged in actual gun firing. According to conscript provisions, however, only volunteers within the A.T.S. would be assigned to gun duty.

A partial breakdown on 1940 census figures shows that in the United States there are 2,523,461 women between the ages of 18 and 19; there are 5,895,443 from 20 to 24; 5,645,967 from 25 to 29; 5,172,076 from 30 to 34; 4,799,718 between 35 and 39; 4,368,708 between 40 and 44; 4,045,965 between 45 and 49; 3,504,096 between 50 and 54; 2,832,501 between 55 and 59, and 2,330,523 between 60 and 64, inclusive.

Brest 'Siege' Threat Caused By Outbreaks

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, April 10.—Scores of executions and hundreds of arrests have followed furious disturbances at Brest, in the forbidden area of occupied France, according to information received in London today from reliable sources. The disturbances are said to have broken out over food shortages and drastic repressive measures ordered by the Nazi military commanders of the region.

German authorities in Brest have notified the population to stand ready for a proclamation of a state of siege "without advance notice."

After several days during which the police and military used ruthless methods in handling popular discontent, rioting broke out at the beginning of this week. Brest, densely populated shipyards and industrial center, with an arsenal which the Germans are said to have been operating to capacity, was immediately occupied by fresh forces sent to strengthen the garrison. The rioting stopped and the last report was that Brest was a "dead city."

Brest has been raided by the Royal Air Force 112 times—most of the the raids occurring when the R. A. F. was trying to cripple the German warships in hiding there. The last raid on Brest was on the night of February 11.

Japs Aren't So Tough, Airline Official Finds

Give a Jap opposition and he isn't so tough, according to William L. Bond, vice president of China National Aviation Corp.

Just returned from China, India and Burma, he told a press conference yesterday that the Pan American-operated C.N.A.C. is still doing business as usual—in fact, it is expanding—despite hazards presented by Nipponese bombers and fighters along its air routes linking Calcutta, Chungking and Lashio.

BOND

A native Virginian whose present home is in Chevy Chase, Bond will return to the East in a few weeks to help keep commercial air traffic moving. His is the line, owned jointly by the Chinese government and Pan American, which recently flew Chiang Kai-shek from Chungking to India and back.

Leaving the Chinese capital February 23, Bond flew to Calcutta on one of his company's own transports, then changed to a Pan American ship for the flight to West Africa in company with a number of American Volunteer Group pilots who were ferrying fighting planes to the front.

Since hostilities began in December, China National Aviation Corporation has lost six airliners by enemy action, four destroyed on the ground and two shot down, Bond said. Twenty employes and 20 passengers have perished, all but one of them Chinese.

Bond supervised evacuation of 275 Chinese and Americans from Hongkong during the first two nights of the Nipponese assault on that former British stronghold. He has spent the last 11 years in China, where he is known as "Pan American's No. 1 Boy" and the head of the "Middle Kingdom's Space Machine Family."

Canadian Power Shortage May Cut Newsprint Supply

William L. Batt said yesterday establishment of new war industries in Canada might cause a power shortage there late this year affecting production of newsprint.

Batt, chairman of the United States-Canadian Materials Coordinating Committee, told reporters of this possibility after a conference with Canadian officials. He said rainfall in Canada would determine the extent of the power shortage and what curtailment of newsprint production would be necessary.

The Canadian newsprint industry, one of largest power consumers in the dominion, supplies about 70 per cent of this country's newsprint.

New aluminum and chemical plants to be built at the request of the United States will require the bulk of Canada's available power.

However, the War Production Board reported that newsprint stocks in the United States now are at a high level. On January 31, mill stocks totalled 154,904 tons and, by February 28, had increased to 169,371 tons. Publishers' stocks on January 31 were 366,236 tons and, by February 28 had risen to 425,537 tons—a figure representing approximately 55 days' supply.

Americans Not Sure of Red 'Ally,' Dr. Walsh Says

Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, vice president of Georgetown University, last night declared that millions of Americans are waiting for a reciprocal assurance from Russia that she is with the United States in fighting this war, in his sixth lecture of a series in Memorial Continental Hall.

"The stubborn and phenomenal defense of their homeland by Russian troops is a strictly domestic affair, as Mr. Stalin informed the world in his recent speech on the anniversary of the Red army," he said.

"We have rushed to the relief of all humanity whether we liked them or not and did it with a princely generosity for Russia during her suffering in the famine of 1932, long before political recognition was accorded. She has it in her power now to witness a new and finer cooperation of free peoples that could serve as a great balance wheel in the turmoil of this distracted age."

Actress' Son Killed in Action

BEFORE THE WAR—Sir Robert Peel, son of Actress Beatrice Lillie, has been killed in action, according to reports in London, while on duty with the British Navy in Asiatic waters. Here, Miss Lillie, who is Lady Peel in private life, kisses her son on his arrival in New York early in 1939

Reports on Union Finances Urged

by the bill would set out information on officials of the organizations as well as financial data, giving in detail the assets, liabilities, receipts and expenditures of the organizations covered.

Other Data Required

The constitution and by-laws of each would be filed, together with a statement of purposes for which the group was organized, and a description of present activities. Names of employers with which labor union have an agreement, and the terms of the agreement, would also be required.

Included in the definition of "trade associations" compelled to file similar data would be industrial associations, business leagues, business associations, chambers of commerce and boards of trade.

Civic leagues, cooperative agricultural associations, clubs, fraternal organizations and mutual or benevolent insurance associations would be exempt, as would organizations operated for religious, charitable, scientific, professional or similar purposes.

Representative Vinson (Democrat), of Georgia, also coauthor of the far-reaching profits-labor measure now pending in his Naval Committee, offered the bill following an investigation of naval contracts by his group. The committee reported "tremendous financial gains made by labor organizations during the period of the defense effort."

Called "Labor-Baiting"

Spokesmen for labor organizations appearing before the subcommittee called the bill "labor-baiting." They charged it would provide undue Government interference, unfairly supply employers with amunition and destroy the independence of labor organizations. Witnesses for trade groups called the bill unnecessary, and said it would discourage businessmen from membership.

With the Navy committee sharply divided on the Smith-Vinson bill, there was a possibility that the registration measure may beat the more drastic labor measure to the House floor. Vinson recently predicted action on the Smith bill by April 13, but yesterday more hearings were slated for that date. The 6 per cent profit limit provisions of the bill were incorporated by the House in the 19-billion-dollar defense measure. That leaves only the labor sections, and these were expected to be modified. One suggested compromise would extend the 40-hour week to 48 hours before overtime is paid, abolish double time for Sunday work, and limit union membership charges for work on war projects.

Similar amendments are expected to be offered to the Connally bill if it is called up in the Senate on April 20. The Connally bill also would be open to wage-ceiling amendments, but "Baruch plan" advocates of across-the-board wartime controls expect the Administration to take the initiative in this field before the Connally bill comes up.

Anti-Inflation Program Is Set

it was learned reliably, will move from the study stage into an actual order. It is expected to hold all prices, at manufacturing, wholesale and retail stages, at present levels or perhaps even lower figures.

This plan has been resisted in the past by OPA officials on the grounds of administrative difficulties, necessities for widespread adjustment of the general freeze to avoid injustices, and the absence of compliance and field organizations.

Recently, however, OPA has been broadening its compliance machinery and building up an extensive field and regional organization.

However, the enormous size of the "inflationary gap"—the difference between the greatly increased purchasing power of the Nation and the drastically limited field of consumers' products which will be offered for sale in the future—is felt to be such that any general price freeze order unaccompanied by other measures could not stem the tide.

Many Violations Feared

The order, it is feared, would be violated to such an extent and "black markets" would arise so swiftly under pressure of the excess funds in purchasers' hands, that it would be worse than useless.

For these reasons, OPA officials admit, the order is being delayed until a formula is developed and agreed to which would absorb a large part of the "inflationary gap" through:

1. Greatly increased taxes.
2. Enforced savings of some sort.
3. Limitation of profits.
4. Limitation of further wage advances on a broad scale.

Other measures being discussed for their anti-inflationary value are further restrictions on retail credit, such as customers' charge accounts, to implement the controls on installment buying, and more drastic rationing of many more commodities in the food, clothing and consumers' durable goods fields.

12 Billion Tax Discussed

In the tax situation, some officials have discussed a Federal levy of at least 12 billion dollars a year as the minimum necessary to "blot up" excess purchasing power.

Increased concern has been noted recently in OPA circles as living costs continue to advance despite the issuance of a series of price schedules on a wide variety of commodities. Although OPA had hoped at one time to limit the trend through fixing prices at manufacturing and wholesale levels of raw materials and certain finished products, officials now do not deny that the Nation is in the beginning stages of "a serious inflationary cycle."

Yesterday, the Labor Department announced that retail food prices had risen 1.5 per cent in the 30 days from mid-February to mid-March, to the point where it now costs $1.20 to buy the food which sold for $1 a year ago.

U. S., Canada Act to Speed Output of Essential Crops

Copyright by Chicago Sun

The United States and Canada yesterday completed arrangements to increase production of certain crops in both countries and facilitate the seasonal movement of farm labor and machinery across the border.

The agreements, announced simultaneously from the White House and Ottawa, heralded a closer economic collaboration between the countries in furtherance of the common war effort.

The first agreement calls for increased production of oil-bearing crops in the United States, and of oats, barley and flax in Canada, to meet wartime needs in both countries.

The second provides for removal of regulations and restrictions now impeding the free flow of farm machinery, with their crews, and farm workers between the countries.

"Without changing the trade structure," said the statement released by White House Secretary Stephen Early, "these arrangements provide for the more effective utilization of the joint agricultural resources of the two countries for the production of certain farm products needed in the war effort."

The crop increases are required to meet the shortage of fats and oils growing out of loss of imported supplies, increased wartime requirements and the demands of our allies under lend-lease.

The increased oats and barley acreage in Canada will not only provide more adequate livestock feed in Canada but will permit corn belt farmers in this country to plant more soybeans in place of feed grain, without impairing our feed resources, the White House said.

The Canadian Government has already adopted a definite program to encourage wheat growers to shift surplus wheat land into oats, barley and flax, the White House reported.

Unimpeded movement of men and machines across the boundary will lessen seasonal shortages of both labor and equipment, which threaten to impede the war agriculture programs in both countries, the White House said.

By producing more flaxseed, Canada will provide as much as possible for its own needs and offset in part the reduction in North American imports resulting from shipping losses and closed sources of supply.

Under the agreement, next autumn Canada is pledged to facilitate delivery in the United States of whatever quantity of flaxseed, oats and barely it is able to supply.

The United States is pledged not to impose additional restrictions on these importations.

The United States has also agreed to deliver as large a quantity of vegetable oils or vegetable oil seeds to Canada as possible.

The free movement of farm labor will further the efficient distribution of labor supply to meet peak requirements at planting and harvesting periods, the agreement stated.

Only 30 More Beds Found for Service Men

Following a week's search for additional sleeping quarters for service men visiting Washington over weekends, the District Servicemens' Lodging Committee yesterday was able to report an increase of 30 beds over the number available last weekend.

The 30 beds were offered by the All Souls' Church, Cathedral and Connecticut Avenues Northwest, thus pushing the total in Washington to 922.

Committee members, meeting at the District Building, reported that their efforts to suppy beds by converting available space now in the city were almost entirely unsuccessful. The principal obstacle in converting, it was stated, lies in the inability to conform with the District health and fire protection regulations.

Space for 500 Cots

The one cheering note in an otherwise drab report was contributed by Hugo Wolter, director of Recreation Services, Inc., Wolter said that the Union Station officials had offered space in the station capable of holding about 500 cots. The space was originally used as a railroaders' gymnasium.

Wolter said, however, that before the space could be used certain improvements would have to be made. The extent and nature of those improvements was not entirely definite but it was estimated, by Commander William A. Corley, committee member, that they would cost approximately $60,000. When asked where the $60,000 would come from, Corley said he did not know if the Federal Security Agency would supply the money.

At the same time it was announced that the servicemen's lounge in Union Station was nearing completion. The former Presidential reception lounge is being converted into a recreation center for the soldiers at a cost of $10,000. It will provide no sleeping quarters.

128 Use Leave Area

Meanwhile the census conducted by the committee revealed that the Washington leave area in Arlington was used last weekend by only 126 men. There are cots in the area for 500 and the lack of transportation was held responsible for the vacancies.

As a solution to the problem of getting the men to the area after midnight, Corley announced that the American Legion, George Washington Post, No. 1, had arranged for all night jitney service with a local taxicab company. The jitney service will start at midnight and continue as long as there are customers.

The committee did not venture an estimate of the number of men expected in town this weekend. But summing up the report, Wolter said the need this weekend would probably be as pressing as any in the past.

Following the meeting, Wolter announced that various churches and civic associations had arranged more than 30 events for the weekend entertainment of the soldiers, sailors and Marines.

Today's program will start at 2 p. m. with a sightseeing tour of the city sponsored by the Washington Federation of Churches. Men wishing to make the trip will meet at the National Art Gallery, Sixth Street and Constitution Avenue Northwest. Today's other events are:

'The Fleet's In' to Bomb The Town With Laughter

Dorothy Lamour, William Holden, Eddie Bracken And Ace Singing Comedy Cast Score at Earle; Three Top Acts in Colorful New Stage Revue

"THE FLEET'S IN." Paramount picturization of "Sailor, Beware," the play by Kenyon Nicholson and Charles Robinson, fictionized by Monte Brice and J. Walter Ruben and adapted to the screen by Walter De Leon, Sid Silvers and Ralph Spence, starring Dorothy Lamour and William Holden, with Eddie Bracken, Betty Hutton, Cass Daley, Gil Lamb, Leif Erickson, Betty Jane Rhodes, Jack Norton, Lorraine and Rognan and Jimmy Dorsey's Orchestra, with Bob Eberly and Helen O'Conell. Directed by Victor Schertzinger. At the Earle Theater.

"THE FLEET'S IN" and fun is at high tide at the Earle Theater.

The waves of laughter whipped up by Dorothy Lamour, William Holden, Eddie Bracken, Betty Hutton, Cass Daley and the rest of the breezy cast aren't quite as rough as they were when the original stage piece was known as "Sailor, Beware," but they are still choppy enough to toss an audience about a bit and spray it with a gusty sprinkling of salty dialogue.

Not only is the play first contrived by Kenyon Nicholson and Charles Robinson, and adapted to the screen by Walter De Leon Sid Silvers and Ralph Spence, a substantial basis for a lively film frolic, but it has been given added zest by a half dozen or so songs that are nicely sung and the presence of Jimmy Dorsey and his orchestra and vocalists to feature the goings-on in the Swingland Ballroom, about which the action largely revolves.

The whole exuberant charade is predicated upon the bogus tranformation of the most bashful and diffident gob in the battlefleet into a blazing Romeo. By accident, he seems to have ignited a couple of flaming romances with unapproachable young women of great social and screen renown. So all of his shipmates decide that they can make a mintful of easy money betting on him to be the first ball of fire ever to kiss The Countess, star singer at Swingland, in public. A nice assignment, even if he didn't want to get it. Yes, real love raises its radiant head, and all that sort of tosh.

The story is too familiar to seasoned playgoers and screengazers to possess too much of the element of surprise, but it is lashed into a pretty satisfactory semblance of freshness by the exhilarating talents of its principal players. The Messrs. De Leon, Silver and Spence, who fashioned the present camera version out of dusty material, are past masters at the sprightly art of polishing up old gags and making them look like new. They also have a nice gift of snappy dialogue. Lines once loaded with double entendre now have but a single edge. It is a nicely honed edge that cuts keenly through gloom but never lacerates even the more delicate sensibilities. The songs are a pleasantly lilting lot, by Johnny Mercer and Victor Schertzinger—Mr. Schertzinger also directed—and they suffer no whit at the hands of Dorothy Lamour, Betty Hutton, Jimmy Dorsey's Bob Eberly and Helen O'Connell or any of the others.

A Shrewdly Chosen Cast

William Holden, who is having fun with Gen. Andrew Jackson on another downtown screen, is having more trying to make Dorothy Lamour believe that it is all those bets and not his love that is not on the level. His reticence furnishes a perfect foil for the more boisterous comedy of Eddie Bracken, who has never been better; Gil Lamb, old favorite of the vaudeville and musical comedy stage; Cass Daley, who deserves a more conspicuous assignment; Leif Erickson, the Navy whizbang who stands by and watches Mr. Holden apparently stealing all of his stuff, and the explosive Betty Hutton, a roistering comedienne who is in top form, in more ways than one. Lorraine and Rognan, recently seen on a local stage, toss in a dash of their eccentric dancing and Jimmy Dorsey's Orchestra was stormily greeted on their every appearance by yesterday's overflow crowd. The only ones cheated were those who got caught in the lobby lockouts.

Harry Anger's new stage revue is all dressed up in nautical style and features the Roxyettes, fresh out of the wide open spaces, and three diverting acts. Any one of the three might be the headliner, depending upon individual taste. Chester Dolphin is an acrobatic, upsidedown juggler, who performs a few tricks never before seen by these astigmatic eyes that have been staring stageward for years on end now. The Three Harmoniacs, whose "mouth organs" sound like, and are almost the size of, accordians, score tremendously and, like Mr. Dolphin, Dick, Don and Dinah execute gymnastic feats the like of which are seldom seen. In the meantime, the Roxyettes are missing a bit in their "Hoops" number and making it all up in the "Hula" routine with its phosphorescent radium costumes and undulating rhythm—and other things. A tuneful song of sentiment by Bob Addie, Washington sportswriter, is introduced effectively as Jo Lombardi's overture.

A new issue of the newsreel, devoted exclusively to a heartening review of Uncle Sam's "New Army," frankly announced as now two million strong, with other millions on the way, and a plaintively amusing Merrie Melodie cartoon comedy, complete a rousingly roisterous bill.

So That's How You Tell, Is It?

BETTY HUTTON AND EDDIE BRACKEN are betraying no naval secret, one presumes, in providing this casual evidence that "The Fleet's In." It is docked for the week at the Earle Theater, with Dorothy Lamour, William Holden, Cass Daley, Jimmy Dorsey and his orchestra and specialists, and numerous others giving the occasion laughter and lilt. Based on that salty old saga, "Sailor, Beware," of course

Walter Huston Bolsters Met's Musical, 'Always in My Heart'

By Richard L. Coe

"ALWAYS IN MY HEART." Warner Brothers picturization of a screenplay by Adele Comandini, suggested by a play by Dorothy Bennett and Irving White, with Kay Francis, Walter Huston, Gloria Warren, Patty Hale, Frankie Thomas, Una O'Connor, Sidney Blackmer, Armida, Frank Puglia, Russell Arms, Anthony Caruso, Elvira Curci, John Hamilton, Harry Lewis, Herbert Gunn and Borrah Minnevitch and his Harmonica Rascals. Directed by 'o Graham. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Metropolitan Theater.

Walter Huston's forthright sincerity is the most compelling feature of Metropolitan's new film, "Always in My Heart," a charade patently devised to introduce a 15-year-old girl who sings. Her name is Gloria Warren, she is something of a protege of the discerning Rudy Vallee and she is blessed with the ability to behave naturally in front of the camera.

Any young lady who sings to our generation has to share her era with that pioneer of all young persons who sing, Deanna Durbin. This regrettable habit of the public mind to compare all comers with the ingenuous Miss Durbin unhappily is furthered by the film producers who insisting on placing their chirping debutantes in situations in which Miss D. frequently has found her film self.

Such situations invariably have our cheerful young lady the winsome daughter of two persons who have, as the old song puts it, drifted apart. In some fashion or other it becomes her duty to get them together, but only after sufficient time has elapsed for her to exhibit the voice that will bring them all the material chattel without which they have suffered these many years.

Huston Sings Title Song

Now it is not this home-lover's design to find fault with the admirable doctrine of this story; it is a heartening lesson the selfish always must be taught. As a film story, however, it has begun to lack conviction and suspense. Everything is fore-ordained.

Debutante Warren plays a young girl whose mother is about to make an advantageous marriage. She believes her father dead, but in reality he is just out of prison—to which he was unjustly confined—and she gets to know him as a traveling musician. For his part, he prefers his former wife to keep to her plans for a wealthy marriage. The wife hesitates but for the purposes of plot holds to her promising course.

Huston's honest simplicity brings credibility and vitality to every scene he's in; he even takes the opportunity, much as he did on the stage in "Knickerbocker Holiday," to recall his earlier career as a song-and-dance man. He introduces the theme song, Ernesto Lecuona's melodic ballad, "Always in My Heart." By his skilled simplicity he makes it the high spot of the picture.

Those Harmonica Rascals

Miss Warren should become a familiar film figure so long as she's given some less familiar stories. Her's is a winsome, natural personality; her voice, however, has that immaturity at its best in simple songs, not in the tricky operatic airs that it's wearing to hear the skilled sing, let alone the undeveloped attempt.

The supporting company is fair considering the lack of motivation in most of its roles. Kay Francis does what little she can as the muddled mother and Sidney Blackmer has the unrewarding part of the wealthy suitor. Frankie Thomas reminds us he is an able juvenile and Una O'Connor is a helpful maid.

It's good to have Borrah Minnevitch and his Harmonica Rascals back; their tunes and harmonics are as good as ever. Johnny Puleo occupies his traditional front-row spot and takes it on the chin as always.

Also on the Metropolitan screen are a "Quiz Kids" session; a Terry Toon, on the opening of the West, that's pretty silly and the Paramount News' gripping issue devoted to Army Day, a newsreel that will give you heart and make you proud.

Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai, India's Agent-General to the United States, addressed the Foreign Policy Association at the Ritz-Carlton in Philadelphia. The room was crowded with socialites—so crowded that reporters were seated in the hallway . . . After the meeting a Philadelphia Record reporter complained to Sir Girja—India's first diplomatic envoy to this country—about his inability to hear. "I'm sorry," said Bajpai. "Would you care to interview me privately in my room?" . . . The delighted reporter interviewed him privately and spoke of India's caste system. "Americans attach too much importance to that phase of India's life," said Sir Girja. "If I adhered strictly to the rules governing my caste, I would not have been able to eat or talk to your Foreign Policy group" . . . "I suppose I shouldn't even be here?" suggested the reporter . . . "Oh, no. You should," replied Sir Girja. "I shouldn't."

Gene Fowler, a veteran of the last war, hopes to get into the Army . . . Corey Ford took Edna Ferber to lunch at the 21 Club. Miss Ferber ordered oysters and found a pearl in the first one she opened . . . Margie Hart, the stripper, will appear in "Alias the Deacon," in the summer-stock theaters here . . . When Elizabeth Hawes, the fashion designer, heard of the new WPB regulations about women's clothes, she said: "Even God can't freeze a silhouette" . . . For his personal appearance stint at the Strand John Garfield will do a scene from "Four Daughters," his first movie.

Alfred Lunt now is a dishwasher and garbage-collector at the American Theater Wing's Canteen. Yesterday, while Lunt was confronted with a huge pile of garbage, a young actor approached him and said: "I applied for a role, when you were doing 'Design For Living,' but I was turned down" . . . "Is that so?" said the star. . . . "Yes," continued the actor, "and I almost was with you when you did 'Taming of the Shew,' but I was turned down" . . . "Is that so?" said Lunt . . . "And I almost was with you in 'Amphyitrion,'" the actor continued . . . "What're you doing now?" asked Lunt . . . "Nothing," said the actor . . . "Then get a pail," Lunt ordered, pointing to the garbage, "You're with me now."

Ben Cooper, 7 years old, is the newest replacement in "Life With Father" . . . Monday night, Howard Lindsay had to ad lib some lines, because the stage-manager forgot to put the catechism book on the table in the center of the stage . . . "What do you want me to read to you tonight?" Lindsay asked Ben—and then became fearful that the boy would answer "Superman," or some other modern book not in keeping with the Gay Nineties setting of the play . . . The youngster hesitated, then smiled reassuringly. "Read me," the 7-year-old ad libbed, "Gulliver's Travels.'"

Mrs. Maxim Litvinoff arranged this week for Random House to publish her autobiography. The arrangements were made at a luncheon with Bennett Cerf, the publisher. "I need a notebook," said Mrs. Litvinoff, "in which to jot down the stories, as they come to my mind" . . . Cerf took her to a stationery shop, where she selected a note book, and asked the price. The clerk informed: "One Dollar" . . . "That's outrageous," Mrs. Litvinoff protested. "Let's go" . . . "Oh no," Cerf insisted. "It'll be my treat—part of the luncheon. I'll pay for it" . . . "In that case," said Mrs. Litvinoff to the clerk, "I'll take two."

Conde Nast, the magazine publisher, was asked how the war had affected his publications. He revealed the instructions he had given to the editors of "Vogue," the fashion magazine, as an example of the editorial-policy to be followed: "You may say that Green will be the popular color for 1942. But don't make Green the most important subject of the year. First, in importance, is the war. Only then, and second to that, is Green—for 1942."

HEDDA HOPPER

And That's How Hits Are Born!

Hollywood, Calif., April 10. There've been so many slap-happy stories about how "The Invaders" was made that I thought I might just as well give you the true story. You know it was backed by the British government, under the direction of "Mickey" Powell, who worked in Canada for many months getting it absolutely true to life. Elizabeth Bergner, wanting to get out of England and over here, took the part of the girl, and was half way through when she was told she'd have to go back to England! so she stepped out, and across the border to America. The girl who played that part so beautifully was Glynis Johns, who's wanted by every picture company here. But with her job of acting, she also does war work, and won't leave England until after it's over. God bless her!

RAYMOND MASSEY

When they were half way through the picture, they felt that some of the scenes should have a better job of writing, and sent to Hollywood for Arthur T. Horman. By that time, the money was running short and they could only pay him a week's salary, but he was delighted to do it. Went up to Montreal and wrote the sequences for Raymond Massey, Laurence Olivier, and several others. But didn't think he had done enough to deserve screen credit.

While he was there, he and Roland Gillette, who's now hunting submarines in the Atlantic, but who used to be with Korda, got together in a night club one evening, and Gillette told him the story of "bush pilots," and Horman said, "That's a swell idea. I'll write it and give you half." He did, and sent Gillette $5000. That story you've seen as "Captains of the Clouds."

Then another picture occurred to Horman while up there, about six English prisoners trying to get out of Germany. That's now being done by Errol Flynn as 'Desperate Journey." So through a hands-across-the-border gesture, one of our best writers, Horman, has two pictures to his credit, because of a week's vacation in Canada.

Incidentally, the scenes of Leslie Howard in Canada were done by his double. And in order to photograph Niagara Falls, they got President Roosevelt's permission. When finished, Universal turned the picture down, Columbia got it for, I hear, around $200,000. And before it's finished, "The Invaders" will take in $5,000,000.

When I suggested that Monty Woolley would be buying a home here soon, he nearly threw a fit. "I have never rented, bought, nor lived in a house since I was grown—and never will! I detest responsibility, avoid it like the plague, and where, but in a hotel, could I get rare roast beef and ice cream at midnight?"

With metal taboo, a fan crocheted little green earrings for Kathryn Grayson, made in the shape of four-leafed clovers.

Walt Disney turned over the entire proceeds from his little mushroom character, Toy Low, to the United China Relief.

Zanuck loved "The Pied Piper" so much that he wanted its author, Nevil Shute, to come from Norway to collaborate on the script. But seems he's a lieutenant-commander in His Majesty's Navy, designs airplanes, works 14 hours every day, writes books for relaxation. Don't you wish could relax like that?

Time marches on: After 17 years Harry Langdon and Director Harry Edwards are making pictures together again.

At the House of Murphy the other evening, Bert Wheeler said he knew an actress who was such a good mother she shot her husband with a bow and arrow, so as not to wake the baby.

5-Point Program Is Offered by Byrd

Purchasing Agent Urged to Coordinate All U. S. War Buying

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, April 10.—A five-point program of essential steps to win the war was outlined here today by Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, in an address before the Maryland Committee for Representative Government.

Among his demands was establishment of a procurement director under the War Production Board so that all Government purchases of materials and equipment, both for defense and nondefense, would be made through a single head and competition avoided between Government agencies. Such a plan, he said, also would permit a uniform policy of profits and contract performance.

Other points in the Senator's program were:

1. Congress must eliminate profits on war contracts to a reasonable rate on invested capital and all bonuses and unwarranted salary increases must be prohibited.

National Labor Policy

2. Congress must adopt a national labor policy for war work, "so that bickerings between labor and capital will cease." "This labor policy, in my judgment," he added, "should provide for a 48-hour week and overtime on work after that. It should abolish double time for holidays and Sundays. It should freeze for the emergency the contentious question of the closed shop, so that this will be removed as an irritating issue.

"It should prohibit the effort of labor unions to force American citizens to join the unions and pay initiation fees in order to obtain work on Government construction and war contracts. It should outlaw strikes for the period of the emergency and provide that all disputes be arbitrated by competent authority under a national labor policy as adopted by Congress."

3. Elimination of every public expenditure not essential to our war effort. "It will be painful to do this," he said, "but two billion dollars of nondefense spending can be saved, if there is a will to do it."

Bans Special Privileges

4. Congress should proclaim that "no special privileges of any character will be granted to any class of our citizens, so long as the emergency continues, whether in excessive war profits or in special privileges to labor, to farmers, to pensioners, or to those on relief."

"Even our humiliating defeat at Pearl Harbor and the defeats that followed have not changed basically some of our policies," Byrd asserted. "We still stick to the 40-hour week, in the face of an overwhelming public demand for its repeal.

"For many months strikes impaired seriously the defense effort, and even now have not been outlawed. A national labor policy has not been adopted, although a member of the National Labor Relations Board has stated publicly that such a policy is essential for unity between capital and labor, and this is obviously true.

"For 30 months after the invasion of Poland, our war effort straggled along without a head," Byrd said, "resulting in confusion at Washington so fantastic as to be almost unbelievable.

Asks Aid for Russia

"I am confident that the appointment, immediately following the fall of France, of a head with power to act to control the war production program would have enabled this country to protect itself in the Pacific and at the same time enabled us to render much more valuable aid to those who are fighting for our joint cause in the west."

"Today, in this very hour, the greatest battle in all history is in the offing. Germany and Russia are mobilizing their vast resources of men and material, soon to begin a battle, the like of which the world has never known . . . If Russia wins, our task will be easier. We must help Russia to the limit of our capacity and this we can only do effectively by stripping our Nation for action."

Spanking Girl Cost Him $50

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

EUGENE GOLUB, 17, Harvard University student, is shown as he left court in Cambridge, Mass., yesterday after Judge Arthur P. Stone imposed a $50 fine and gave the youth a suspended reformatory sentence for spanking a 10-year-old girl in his dormitory room. Police testified Golub spanked the child to observe the psychological effect

U. S. Seamen Slain Climbing Into Lifeboats

By the Associated Press

Linthicum Heights, Md., April 10. Gov. O'Conor disclosed tonight that an Axis submarine recently "shot down in cold blood" American seamen as they crowded into lifeboats after their ship was sunk "at our very doors."

Bodies of 13 seamen were taken to Ocean City, Md., O'Conor said, adding that the sinking occurred "off the coast." The Governor said his announcement, made at a defense forum conducted by the Linthicum Heights Women's Club, was authorized by the Navy Department.

"The experience of these men was indeed harrowing," he declared. "Some of the seamen whose corpses came to Ocean City, as well as others whose lives were lost, were shot down in cold blood by the crew of the Axis submarine.

Stresses Need for Unity

"The Navy Dpartment and the Coast Guard, in unceasing vigilance, are affording every possible protection. Yet our people must realize the sinkings are occurring with losses of life and property.

"All this should call for a response from our citizens toward the unity and the complete participation in the war effort of all Marylanders as an absolute essential for ultimate victory."

The Governor told his audience that "along with the old mistaken idea of the invincibility of our Navy, we must discard once and for all the comforting belief that because America has never lost a war, she cannot lose one.

"We can lose this one, and we will lose it unless we give to the training of our men, to the production of arms and planes and all the other war necessities, all the vigor and enthusiasm that our great Nation of 130 million people can generate.

"The American who holds back from an all-out effort, who refuses to fight or to work or to give of his financial resources to the limit to insure victory over these devilish opponents, will deserve the worst that can befall him."

Schools to Expand Aviation Courses

of Education, he said.

A proposal for an intensive six-week refresher course this summer in physics, mathematics and physical education will be submitted by Dr. Holmes Monday to School Superintendent Frank W. Ballou, who was out of the city yesterday. The recommendation possibly will go before the Board of Education at its meeting Wednesday.

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the board, said she was "very keen" about the program to gear high schools to the elementary training of pilots.

"Speaking as a parent," she said, "I feel we all must have the responsibility not only of preparing our children to be good citizens, but of preparing them to serve the country."

Norden Bombsight Secret Is Still Unknown to Nazis

New York, April 10 (AP).—With Navy permission, it was revealed today that the secret of the deadly Norden bombsight, one of the most valuable of wartime instruments possessed by the United States, is unknown to the Nazis.

President Theodore H. Barth, of Carl L. Norden, Inc., closely guarded manufacturers of the instrument, said there was no truth in the frequent rumors that the Germans had gotten possession of the secret.

The bombsights which have been captured from the Germans are crudely made devices and haven't the slightest resemblance to the highly perfect Norden sight, Barth said.

Barth revealed that the late Capt. Colin Kelly used a Norden bombsight to sink the Japanese battleship, Haruna.

U. S. Will Get Overtime Pay At One Plant

By the Associated Press

Atlanta, April 10.—The regional office of the National Labor Relations Board announced today that a contract ending a dispute at a Tennessee factory provides that workers will give the United States Treasury all extra wages earned for overtime.

Oscar S. Smith, acting regional director, disclosed the agreement between a local of the United Handle Workers (C. I. O.) and the Sequatchie Handle Works of Sequatchie, Tenn., covering a plant now selling approximately 70 per cent of its output for defense uses.

Smith said the contract provides that all money above regular wages due workers under time and a half and double-time provisions is to be paid directly to the United States Treasurer "to help the United States Government to pay the employer for war materials produced by union members."

Other details of the contract were not made public.

Smith said that as far as he knew this was the first such contract signed in the Nation. Only about 20 workers are involved.

The regional director explained that the union favored paying the overtime money to the Government rather than omitting overtime provisions from the contract because the employer's selling contracts were figured on the basis of paying overtime and dropping of such wage provisions would tend to boost the employer's profits without benefit to the Government.

Holiday Overtime Pay Voted Down

Gloucester, N. J., April 10 (AP).—Delegates from locals of the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America (C. I. O.) today voted to forego premium payments for Saturday, Sunday and holiday work except when such is in excess of 40 hours a week.

The 200 delegates represent locals along the Atlantic and Gulf Coasts and Great Lakes.

D. C. Churches To Aid United China Relief

Washington churches of all denominations will take an active part during the next two weeks in the United China Relief campaign in the Nation's Capital as part of the Nation-wide movement to raise seven million dollars for the relief of millions of Chinese victims of five years' Japanese aggression.

At the request of Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, chairman of the Committee on Religious Life in the Nation's Capital, and also chairman for religious groups in the United China Relief Washington campaign, the message of China's plight and the need for aid for her suffering inhabitants will be sounded from pulpits all over the city.

Rabbi Gerstenfeld echoed the pleas of Honorary Chairman Daniel C. Roper and of Dr. Wilson Compton, active chairman of the Washington committee, that all aid possible be given to provide the tools of mercy to supplement the tools of war, which China is already receiving under the lend-lease plan.

The goal set for the Washington campaign is $75,000. An army of volunteer workers, under the direction of Dr. Compton, is already organized, and the roster of participants includes some of Washington's outstanding citizens and business leaders.

In bespeaking the assistance of Washington churches in the drive, Rabbi Gerstenfeld pointed out that clergymen throughout the country are participating.

"The humanitarian aspect of this movement needs no exposition," Rabbi Gerstenfeld said. "But with war in the Pacific at a crisis, there is an aspect which should be emphasized: Every Chinese soldier kept in the field means an American soldier freed for the gigantic task that confronts the United Nations."

Church Federation to Launch $33,000 Funds Drive Tuesday

By Robert Tate Allan
The Post Church Editor

Reorganized and strengthened to render greater service to local religious and civic life, the Washington Federation of Churches on Tuesday will launch its $33,000 financial drive with a dinner at Hamline Methodist Church, Sixteenth and Allison Streets Northwest.

The city blackout is not expected to affect the dinner, since it will start at 6:30 p. m. and be over by 9 p. m., when the test is scheduled to begin.

Slated to address the function are the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington; the Rev. Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, federation vice president; the Rev. Dr. John W. Rustin, vice president; Mrs. Joy Elmer Morgan, president of the Washington Council of Church Women, and others.

In a statement to the press about the present and future plans of the federation, Dr. Worth M. Tippy, acting executive secretary, said yesterday that the local churches and the Federation are "thinking, planning and working together."

Examples of Work

"While there are certain things that churches can do best individually, there are likewise other things that they cannot do alone," pointed out Dr. Tippy, explaining that the churches jointly support a Protestant chaplain at Lorton Reformatory.

Another example of the cooperative work is the setting up of religious services at Blue Plains Home for the Aged through the Washington Council of Church Women, said the secretary.

Among the most notable achievements of the federation's work during the past year has been in the field of aid to service men and the throngs of newcomers to the city in the national defense program.

That phase of the work is conducted through the federation's Defense Commission, directed by Grover L. Hartman, which serves as a liaison body between the churches and service men and churches and defense workers.

Helps Service Men

Through the commission, local church groups arrange tours, entertainment, dinners and other programs for men in uniform; help churches arrange worship and other programs at nearby camps with the cooperation of chaplains, and aid churches in reaching the crowds of workers, especially young people, in defense work.

Rendering a valuable service to Washington churches is the federation's Social Welfare Department, now headed by the Rev. Francis W. McPeek, who is proving a worthy successor to the Rev. John L. Mixon.

That department serves as a reference agency between Protestant churches and public and private social welfare and other community agencies. The department is Community Chest supported.

Presbyterians Won't Abridge Assembly, Dr. Pugh Says

There will be no abridgement of this year's Presbyterian General Assembly because of the war, it was announced today by the executive head and stated clerk of the Presbyterian Church, the Rev. Dr. William Barrow Pugh. "Some suggestions have been made since December 7 that the usual number of sessions be reduced, in the interests of more effective cooperation with the National Government, but it is for this very reason that adherence to the customary length of the assembly's meetings seems absolutely essential," Dr. Pugh said at his Philadelphia office, which is the national headquarters of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America.

"It is becoming increasingly evident," Dr. Pugh continued, "that unless America places a renewed emphasis on spiritual values, it cannot hope to maintain the ideals upon which the Nation was founded. Especially must the 154th general assembly, convening in Milwaukee next month, plan for the whole program of the work of the church at home and abroad. It will need to devote itself adequately to the spiritual welfare of the men in the services of the Nation, as well as of the populations of the industrial defense areas. It will find it necessary to concentrate much attention on the needs and program of the Presbyterian United World Emergency Fund, the Presbyterian Emergency Service Commission, and the Presbyterian Committee on Army and Navy Chaplains—and the usual week of meetings is none too long for this important task."

The general assembly will be held in the auditorium at Milwaukee for seven days beginning May 21. Two days of group conferences, May 19-20, are as usual to precede these business sessions. The assembly will be attended by 900 delegated "commissioners" and by 1000 or more visitors from all parts of the United States. They represent a church of 2,022,000 communicant members who live in each of the 48 States and in 16 foreign countries.

Three ministers are being mentioned by their friends as probable candidates for election as the moderator of the 154th general assembly. They are the Rev. Dr. Joseph M. Broady, Birmingham, Ala.; the Rev. Dr. Asa J. Ferry, Wichita, Kans., and the Rev. Dr. Stuart Nye Hutchison, Pittsburgh, Pa.

The administrative leadership of the world-wide activities of the Seventh-Day Adventist denomination has been changed from the presidency of J. Lamar McElhany to the acting presidency of William H. Branson, by a vote of the executive committee of the denomination.

"I WOULD BE TRUE"
- - - HOWARD ARNOLD WALTER - - -
I would be true, for there are those who trust me;
I would be pure, for there are those who care;
I would be strong, for there is much to suffer;
I would be brave, for there is much to dare.

Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS

This youthful message was not written to be a hymn, but a creed-poem, sent straight from the heart of a young man to his mother. It is the philosophy of a courageous son who glories in daring, not for himself alone, but for those who are weak and suffering. It is a personal challenge to youth everywhere.

Sunday School Leaders Plan Session Friday

MISS LEE

Throngs of Sunday school teachers, pupils, superintendents and others are expected to attend the local phase of the United Christian Education Advance on Friday at Calvary Baptist Church, Eighth and H Streets Northwest.

Part of a series of 130 similar meetings being held in 43 States and the District of Columbia, the convention will lay plans for sectional church leaders to participate in the advance to bring Christian education to more than 17 million school-age children and 30 million other Americans now "unchurched."

Nine teams of Protestant leaders, with membership varying from State to State, will bring the story of the three phases of the advance—home, church and community—to ministers, Christian educators and laymen from all Protestant churches in each area.

The Nation-wide drive to make Christian education available to the more than 45 million Americans without church ties was launched in February by the International Council of Religious Education and its 40 constituent denominations.

Sponsored by the District of Columbia Sunday School Association, headed by Dr. Charles F. Resser, the local convention will hear members of the national team from the International Council of Religious Education.

They will include Miss Elizabeth Lee, Dr. J. Quinter Miller, Dr. J. Fisher Simpson, Dr. N. C. Harner and Dr. Warren S. D. Bowman. The last named is pastor of the Washington City Church of the Brethren here, and a well-known authority on problems of the home and marriage in relation to religion.

This will climax two great services at 3 and 8 p. m. tomorrow under the direction of the Rev. Charles E. Fuller, nationally known radio preacher. Over 150 ministers and Christian laymen of the Washington and Baltimore area are cooperating in these evangelistic meetings. A large chorus choir from the churches of the city will sing at both services and also for the broadcast that night.

'Never Surrender,' Dad Radios Island Soldier

San Francisco, April 10 (INS). "Never surrender!"

That was the message a Kansas City father, veteran of the first World War, tonight sought to have radioed to his son with Gen. Wainwright's forces in the Philippines. In a telegram message to KGEI, General Electric's powerful short-wave station, the father, J. B. Burrowes, said:

"Please ask Gen. Wainwright to notify my son, Robert McBride Burrowes, to shoot straight and never surrender."

Kentuckians Rush To Colors After Bataan

Louisville, Ky., April 10 (AP).—Kentuckians' response to the fall of Bataan was an increase of 300 per cent in the rate of applications here for Marine Corps service and one of 30 per cent in Navy enlistments.

Lieut. G. E. Kincannon, jr., of the Navy, and Capt. F. S. Kieran of the Marines reported the accelerated rush to the colors during yesterday and today.

First Streamlined Train Being Scrapped

Omaha, April 10 (AP).—The City of Salina, described by the Union Pacific as "the world's first streamline train," is being reduced to scrap in an Omaha junkyard.

In service for eight years, the train was first inspected by President Roosevelt and placed on display at the Century of Progress Exhibition in Chicago.

The three cars will yield approximately 100,000 pounds of aluminum, to be sold to the Government to help in the war effort.

Mme. Litvinoff Refuses to Pose With Elsa Maxwell

New York, April 10 (INS).—Life is real, life is earnest for Mme. Maxim Litvinoff, aristocratic English wife of the Soviet Russian Ambassador to the United States. It is so earnest that she refused yesterday to pose for a picture with Elsa Maxwell.

"I like and admire Miss Maxwell very much, but I cannot pose with a gossip columnist," Mme. Litvinoff insisted when photographers asked the two to pose together.

"If you think I'm a gossip columnist you ought to see the real thing!" chortled Miss Maxwell.

Hankin Regrets Comment on Kutz's Attitude

Public Utilities Commission Chairman Gregory Hankin made public apology last night to Engineer Commissioner Charles W. Kutz for remarks he made about Kutz at Wednesday's public utilities forum.

Hankin confirmed to reporters that he had offered apologies to Kutz, his colleague on the commission, and "fully retracted" his assertions that Kutz's "attitude seemed to be that if the utilities wanted things they should get them without a hearing, but if anyone else wanted anything it could be denied without a hearing."

"It was unfortunate that I said that," Hankin stated last night. "It was unwise; I regretted it before I made it and still more after I made it."

He said that at an executive meeting the day after he had offered the public criticism of the Commissioner he told the Commissioner that he had felt compelled to make the comment by numerous things that had happened in the past; and that he hoped that there would be a more friendly attitude between them in the future.

"I told him I hoped there would be no occasion for any recrimination," Hankin concluded.

U.A.W. Wins Vote In Plane Plant

Columbus, Ohio, April 10 (AP).—The C. I. O. United Auto Workers Union won a National Labor Relations Board bargaining agent election at the Curtiss-Wright warplane plant tonight, getting 58 per cent of the votes cast and defeating the A. F. L. International Association of Machinists.

The results, announced by Philip G. Phillips, of Cincinnati, regional NLRB director, were: U. A. W., 1557; I. A. M., 382; neither union, 176. Only 2663 of the plant's 4206 employes voted.

Mothers May Have to Quit War Jobs Here

A plaintive appeal was sounded yesterday for working mothers, many of them in war agencies, who may have to quit their jobs because Washington has no children's day care centers within their financial means.

The situation is fast becoming desperate, said Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, chairman of the child care and protection committee of the District Defense Council.

From another source it was learned that the Commissioners have turned thumbs down on the committee's application for $80,000, which would have been obtained from the District's 50 million dollar Lanham Act appropriation, to launch three day nurseries.

One case cited by Mrs. Linzel:

A widow employed in the War Department has an 8-year-old daughter. She holds a responsible position, one that could not be refilled easily, but she may have to quit because of the child-care problem. She explains she can't get a maid who will work more than five and a half days a week. (The mother often has to work overtime and on Sundays.)

She can't afford to pay $50 a month to a boarding school. What she would like to have is the use of a day nursery, charging a reasonable fee, that would be in operation Sundays as well as week days.

"What are we supposed to do with our children?" the woman asked in a letter to Mrs. Linzel.

Another urgent case is that of a young mother who came here from Denver with her small son to take a Government position. She earns a moderate salary and faces the problem of what care—within her budget—can be provided for the child between the time he leaves school and the mother's return home from work.

Then there was the letter Mrs. Linzel received from a woman in Detroit, who wrote that her husband was due to start a Federal job here on April 15. Was there a place in Washington, she wanted to know, where she might leave her 7-month-old child for a few days while she looked around for a place to live? The answer was no.

What the child-care committee wants to do, said Chairman Linzel, is set up at least three nurseries for 2 to 5 year olds; have certain junior high schools set aside as centers to which elementary pupils might be taken for play until called for from 6 to 7 p. m. by working parents, and train women to go into homes to care for infant children while the parents are at work.

In all cases charges would be made in proportion to the patron's ability to pay Mrs. Linzel explained. She urged all persons desirous of obtaining any of these services to write—not to call—to the Child Care and Protection Committee, District Defense Council, Room 215, District Building.

Postlude

Gershwin Works Well Presented

By Ray C. B. Brown

Friday Morning Music Club presents a program of compositions by George Gershwin in Barker Hall. Artists: Gene Archer, barytone; Prudence Jackson Thomas, soprano; Claude Robeson, accompanist; Ethel Garrett Kaspar, pianist; Irene Lerch, pianist.

Presenting the last formal concert of the season yesterday, the Friday Morning Music Club devoted the program to the memory of George Gershwin, who in his short life of 39 years exemplified the typical American success story. His career as a musician began as a song plugger on Tin Pan Alley and ended as a member of the St. Cecilia Academy in Rome—an honor won by his larger works for orchestra and his folk-opera, "Porgy and Bess." Always a popular composer in the sense that he wrote music sung and whistled by the people, he composed musical comedies and follies for Broadway until ambition spurred him to become a "serious" composer.

Brown

Yesterday's program represented both phases of his work. Prudence Jackson Thomas and Gene Archer sang duets from "Let 'Em Eat Cake" and "Porgy and Bess." Mr. Archer alone offered "Loved Walked In" from the "Goldwyn Follies" and three numbers from the folk-opera: "I Got Plenty o' Nuthin,'" "Summertime" and "It Ain't Necessarily So." Ethel Garrett Kaspar gave a spirited reading of the F major piano concerto, assisted by Irene Lerch at a second piano.

Wistfulness is the predominant characteristic of Gershwin's music; it colors his melodies which are almost always harmonized with the pungencies of jazz and blues and set above syncopated rhythms.

The piano concerto, which was sympathetically interpreted and expertly performed by Mrs. Kaspar, exhibits an unevenness in structure and weakness in jointure. The themes are never developed into their potentialities, and the listener is continually awaiting some climax of emotion which does not occur. It abounds in attractive melodies.

D. C. Churches To Aid United China Relief

Washington churches of all denominations will take an active part during the next two weeks in the United China Relief campaign in the Nation's Capital as part of the Nation-wide movement to raise seven million dollars for the relief of millions of Chinese victims of five years' Japanese aggression.

At the request of Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, chairman of the Committee on Religious Life in the Nation's Capital, and also chairman for religious groups in the United China Relief Washington campaign, the message of China's plight and the need for aid for her suffering inhabitants will be sounded from pulpits all over the city.

Rabbi Gerstenfeld echoed the pleas of Honorary Chairman Daniel C. Roper and of Dr. Wilson Compton, active chairman of the Washington committee, that all aid possible be given to provide the tools of mercy to supplement the tools of war, which China is already receiving under the lend-lease plan.

The goal set for the Washington campaign is $75,000. An army of volunteer workers, under the direction of Dr. Compton, is already organized, and the roster of participants includes some of Washington's outstanding citizens and business leaders.

In bespeaking the assistance of Washington churches in the drive, Rabbi Gerstenfeld pointed out that clergymen throughout the country are participating.

"The humanitarian aspect of this movement needs no exposition," Rabbi Gerstenfeld said. "But with war in the Pacific at a crisis, there is an aspect which should be emphasized: Every Chinese soldier kept in the field means an American soldier freed for the gigantic task that confronts the United Nations."

Church Federation to Launch $33,000 Funds Drive Tuesday

By Robert Tate Allan
The Post Church Editor

Reorganized and strengthened to render greater service to local religious and civic life, the Washington Federation of Churches on Tuesday will launch its $33,000 financial drive with a dinner at Hamline Methodist Church, Sixteenth and Allison Streets Northwest.

The city blackout is not expected to affect the dinner, since it will start at 6:30 p. m. and be over by 9 p. m., when the test is scheduled to begin.

Slated to address the function are the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington; the Rev. Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, federation vice president; the Rev. Dr. John W. Rustin, vice president; Mrs. Joy Elmer Morgan, president of the Washington Council of Church Women, and others.

In a statement to the press about the present and future plans of the federation, Dr. Worth M. Tippy, acting executive secretary, said yesterday that the local churches and the Federation are "thinking, planning and working together."

Examples of Work

"While there are certain things that churches can do best individually, there are likewise other things that they cannot do alone," pointed out Dr. Tippy, explaining that the churches jointly support a Protestant chaplain at Lorton Reformatory.

Another example of the cooperative work is the setting up of religious services at Blue Plains Home for the Aged through the Washington Council of Church Women, said the secretary.

Among the most notable achievements of the federation's work during the past year has been in the field of aid to service men and the throngs of newcomers to the city in the national defense program.

That phase of the work is conducted through the federation's Defense Commission, directed by Grover L. Hartman, which serves as a liaison body between the churches and service men and churches and defense workers.

Helps Service Men

Through the commission, local church groups arrange tours, entertainment, dinners and other programs for men in uniform; help churches arrange worship and other programs at nearby camps with the cooperation of chaplains, and aid churches in reaching the crowds of workers, especially young people, in defense work.

Rendering a valuable service to Washington churches is the federation's Social Welfare Department, now headed by the Rev. Francis W. McPeek, who is proving a worthy successor to the Rev. John L. Mixon.

That department serves as a reference agency between Protestant churches and public and private social welfare and other community agencies. The department is Community Chest supported.

Presbyterians Won't Abridge Assembly, Dr. Pugh Says

There will be no abridgement of this year's Presbyterian General Assembly because of the war, it was announced today by the executive head and stated clerk of the Presbyterian Church, the Rev. Dr. William Barrow Pugh. "Some suggestions have been made since December 7 that the usual number of sessions be reduced, in the interests of more effective cooperation with the National Government, but it is for this very reason that adherence to the customary length of the assembly's meetings seems absolutely essential," Dr. Pugh said at his Philadelphia office, which is the national headquarters of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America.

"It is becoming increasingly evident," Dr. Pugh continued, "that unless America places a renewed emphasis on spiritual values, it cannot hope to maintain the ideals upon which the Nation was founded. Especially must the 154th general assembly, convening in Milwaukee next month, plan for the whole program of the work of the church at home and abroad. It will need to devote itself adequately to the spiritual welfare of the men in the services of the Nation, as well as of the populations of the industrial defense areas. It will find it necessary to concentrate much attention on the needs and program of the Presbyterian United World Emergency Fund, the Presbyterian Emergency Service Commission, and the Presbyterian Committee on Army and Navy Chaplains—and the usual week of meetings is none too long for this important task."

The general assembly will be held in the auditorium at Milwaukee for seven days beginning May 21. Two days of group conferences, May 19-20, are as usual to precede these business sessions. The assembly will be attended by 900 delegated "commissioners" and by 1000 or more visitors from all parts of the United States. They represent a church of 2,022,000 communicant members who live in each of the 48 States and in 16 foreign countries.

Three ministers are being mentioned by their friends as probable candidates for election as the moderator of the 154th general assembly. They are the Rev. Dr. Joseph M. Broady, Birmingham, Ala.; the Rev. Dr. Asa J. Ferry, Wichita, Kans., and the Rev. Dr. Stuart Nye Hutchison, Pittsburgh, Pa.

The administrative leadership of the world-wide activities of the Seventh-Day Adventist denomination has been changed from the presidency of J. Lamar McElhany to the acting presidency of William H. Branson, by a vote of the executive committee of the denomination.

The change has been necessitated by the illness of President McElhany, who on his own request was granted a leave of absence for six months in the hope of recuperation. Mr. McElhany has been president of the World Conference of Seventh-Day Adventists for the last six years.

"I WOULD BE TRUE"
- - - HOWARD ARNOLD WALTER - - -

I would be true, for there are those who trust me;
I would be pure, for there are those who care;
I would be strong, for there is much to suffer;

Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS

This youthful message was not written to be a hymn, but a creed-poem, sent straight from the heart of a young man to his mother. It is the philosophy of a courageous son who glories in daring, not for himself alone, but for those who are weak and suffering. It is a personal challenge to youth everywhere.

Sunday School Leaders Plan Session Friday

MISS LEE

Throngs of Sunday school teachers, pupils, superintendents and others are expected to attend the local phase of the United Christian Education Advance on Friday at Calvary Baptist Church, Eighth and H Streets Northwest.

Part of a series of 130 similar meetings being held in 43 States and the District of Columbia, the convention will lay plans for sectional church leaders to participate in the advance to bring Christian education to more than 17 million school-age children and 30 million other Americans now "unchurched."

Nine teams of Protestant leaders, with membership varying from State to State, will bring the story of the three phases of the advance—home, church and community—to ministers, Christian educators and laymen from all Protestant churches in each area.

The Nation-wide drive to make Christian education available to the more than 45 million Americans without church ties was launched in February by the International Council of Religious Education and its 40 constituent denominations.

Sponsored by the District of Columbia Sunday School Association, headed by Dr. Charles F. Resser, the local convention will hear members of the national team from the International Council of Religious Education.

They will include Miss Elizabeth Lee, Dr. J. Quinter Miller, Dr. J. Fisher Simpson, Dr. N. C. Harner and Dr. Warren S. D. Bowman. The last named is pastor of the Washington City Church of the Brethren here, and a well-known authority on problems of the home and marriage in relation to religion.

Largest Evangelistic Broadcast To Originate Here Tomorrow

406 Mutual Network Stations Will Carry Services to Nation

The largest evangelistic broadcast in the Nation, known as the Old Fashioned Revival Hour, will go out from the Uline Ice Arena, Third and M Streets Northeast, tomorrow from 9 to 10 p. m. over 406 stations over the Mutual Broadcasting System and affiliated stations. Another broadcast will be heard over WWDC from 3 to 4 p. m.

This will climax two great services at 3 and 8 p. m. tomorrow under the direction of the Rev. Charles E. Fuller, nationally known radio preacher. Over 150 ministers and Christian laymen of the Washington and Baltimore area are cooperating in these evangelistic meetings. A large chorus choir from the churches of the city will sing at both services and also for the broadcast that night.

F. Carlton Booth, widely known song leader over the Colonial network of New England will direct the choir and act as special soloist of the meetings.

The local committee, responsible for directing these services are Glenn W. Wagner, president of the Washington Bible Institute; Dr. C. E. Hawthorne, pastor of the Wallace Memorial U. P. Church; Dr. Gove G. Johnson, pastor of the National Baptist Memorial Church; Ralph A. Davis; the Rev. John M. Ballbach, assistant pastor of the Metropolitan Baptist Church; William C. Bond, president of the Laymen's Evangelistic Association; William S. Jones and August F. Ballbach. The public is cordially invited to attend these meetings, 9000 seats being available.

HankinRegrets Comment on Kutz's Attitude

Public Utilities Commission Chairman Gregory Hankin made public apology last night to Engineer Commissioner Charles W. Kutz for remarks he made about Kutz at Wednesday's public utilities forum.

Hankin confirmed to reporters that he had offered apologies to Kutz, his colleague on the commission, and "fully retracted" his assertions that Kutz's "attitude seemed to be that if the utilities wanted things they should get them without a hearing, but if anyone else wanted anything it could be denied without a hearing."

"It was unfortunate that I said that," Hankin stated last night. "It was unwise; I regretted it before I made it and still more after I made it."

He said that at an executive meeting the day after he had offered the public criticism of the Commissioner he told the Commissioner that he had felt compelled to make the comment by numerous things that had happened in the past; and that he hoped that there would be a more friendly attitude between them in the future.

"I told him I hoped there would be no occasion for any recrimination," Hankin concluded.

Mothers May Have to Quit War Jobs Here

A plaintive appeal was sounded yesterday for working mothers, many of them in war agencies, who may have to quit their jobs because Washington has no children's day care centers within their financial means.

The situation is fast becoming desperate, said Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, chairman of the child care and protection committee of the District Defense Council.

From another source it was learned that the Commissioners have turned thumbs down on the committee's application for $30,000, which would have been obtained from the District's 50 million dollar Lanham Act appropriation, to launch three day nurseries.

One case cited by Mrs. Linzel:

A widow employed in the War Department has an 8-year-old daughter. She holds a responsible position, one that could not be refilled easily, but she may have to quit because of the child-care problem. She explains she can't get a maid who will work more than five and a half days a week. (The mother often has to work overtime and on Sundays.)

She can't afford to pay $50 a month to a boarding school. What she would like to have is the use of a day nursery, charging a reasonable fee, that would be in operation Sundays as well as week days.

"What are we supposed to do with our children?" the woman asked in a letter to Mrs. Linzel.

Another urgent case is that of a young mother who came here from Denver with her small son to take a Government position. She earns a moderate salary and faces the problem of what care—within her budget—can be provided for the child between the time he leaves school and the mother's return home from work.

Then there was the letter Mrs. Linzel received from a woman in Detroit, who wrote that her husband was due to start a Federal job here on April 15. Was there a place in Washington, she wanted to know, where she might leave her 7-month-old child for a few days while she looked around for a place to live? The answer was no.

What the child-care committee wants to do, said Chairman Linzel, is set up at least three nurseries for 2 to 5 year olds; have certain junior high schools set aside as centers to which elementary pupils might be taken for play until called for from 6 to 7 p. m. by working parents, and train women to go into homes to care for infant children while the parents are at work.

In all cases charges would be made in proportion to the patron's ability to pay Mrs. Linzel explained. She urged all persons desirous of obtaining any of these services to write—not to call—to the Child Care and Protection Committee, District Defense Council, Room 215, District Building.

Postlude

Gershwin Works Well Presented

By Ray C. B. Brown

Friday Morning Music Club presents a program of compositions by George Gershwin in Barker Hall. Artists: Gene Archer, barytone; Prudence Jackson Thomas, soprano; Claude Robeson, accompanist; Ethel Garrett Kaspar, pianist; Irene Lerch, pianist.

Presenting the last formal concert of the season yesterday, the Friday Morning Music Club devoted the program to the memory of George Gershwin, who in his short life of 39 years exemplified the typical American success story. His career as a musician began as a song plugger on Tin Pan Alley and ended as a member of the St. Cecilia Academy in Rome—an honor won by his larger works for orchestra and his folk-opera, "Porgy and Bess." Always a popular composer in the sense that he wrote music sung and whistled by the people, he composed musical comedies and follies for Broadway until ambition spurred him to become a "serious" composer.

Brown

Yesterday's program represented both phases of his work. Prudence Jackson Thomas and Gene Archer sang duets from "Let 'Em Eat Cake" and "Porgy and Bess." Mr. Archer alone offered "Loved Walked In" from the "Goldwyn Follies" and three numbers from the folk-opera: "I Got Plenty o' Nuthin,'" "Summertime" and "It Ain't Necessarily So." Ethel Garrett Kaspar gave a spirited reading of the F major piano concerto, assisted by Irene Lerch at a second piano.

Wistfulness is the predominant characteristic of Gershwin's music; it colors his melodies which are almost always harmonized with the pungencies of jazz and blues and set above syncopated rhythms.

The piano concerto, which was sympathetically interpreted and expertly performed by Mrs. Kaspar, exhibits an unevenness in structure and weakness in jointure. The themes are never developed into their potentialities, and the listener is continually awaiting some climax of emotion which does not occur. It abounds in attractive melodies.

'Never Surrender,' Dad Radios Island Soldier

San Francisco, April 10 (INS). "Never surrender!"

That was the message a Kansas City father, veteran of the first World War, tonight sought to have radioed to his son with Gen. Wainwright's forces in the Philippines. In a telegram message to KGEI, General Electric's powerful short-wave station, the father, J. B. Burrowes, said:

"Please ask Gen. Wainwright to notify my son, Robert McBride Burrowes, to shoot straight and never surrender."

Kentuckians Rush To Colors After Bataan

Louisville, Ky., April 10 (AP).—Kentuckians' response to the fall of Bataan was an increase of 300 per cent in the rate of applications here for Marine Corps service and one of 30 per cent in Navy enlistments.

Lieut. G. E. Kincannon, jr., of the Navy, and Capt. F. S. Kieran of the Marines reported the accelerated rush to the colors during yesterday and today.

First Streamlined Train Being Scrapped

Omaha, April 10 (AP).—The City of Salina, described by the Union Pacific as "the world's first streamline train," is being reduced to scrap in an Omaha junkyard.

In service for eight years, the train was first inspected by President Roosevelt and placed on display at the Century of Progress Exhibition in Chicago.

The three cars will yield approximately 100,000 pounds of aluminum, to be sold to the Government to help in the war effort.

Mme. Litvinoff Refuses to Pose With Elsa Maxwell

New York, April 10 (INS).—Life is real, life is earnest for Mme. Maxim Litvinoff, aristocratic English wife of the Soviet Russian Ambassador to the United States. It is so earnest that she refused yesterday to pose for a picture with Elsa Maxwell.

"I like and admire Miss Maxwell very much, but I cannot pose with a gossip columnist." Mme. Litvinoff insisted when photographers asked the two to pose together.

"If you think I'm a gossip columnist you ought to see the real thing!" chortled Miss Maxwell.

U.A.W. Wins Vote In Plane Plant

Columbus, Ohio, April 10 (AP).—The C. I. O. United Auto Workers Union won a National Labor Relations Board bargaining agent election at the Curtiss-Wright warplane plant tonight, getting 58 per cent of the votes cast and defeating the A. F. L. International Association of Machinists.

The results, announced by Philip G. Phillips, of Cincinnati, regional NLRB director, were: U. A. W., 1557; I. A. M., 382; neither union, 176. Only 2663 of the plant's 4206 employes voted.

No Cream For Cream

Every milk consumer in the city has a vital interest in Roy Hendrickson's proposed amendment to the Washington milk-marketing order. For that amendment seems to be the only hope of avoiding an increase in milk prices in the near future. More important than that, however, it is designed to eliminate long-standing inequities in the marketing of milk which have worked to the disadvantage of the great majority of consumers.

Mr. Hendrickson is the agricultural marketing administrator who recently conducted hearings upon demands of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers for higher milk prices. Instead of approving the sharp increases requested, he suggested consolidation of Classes I and II, all the milk in those categories to be paid for at the price now in effect for Class I milk. The effect would be to raise the price paid producers for Class II milk (that used for cream) from $2.10 a hundredweight to $3.57. Since 25 per cent of the milk sold in this area goes into cream, this would mean a substantial increase in returns to the farmer to offset his higher costs of production.

To be sure, this revolutionary change in milk marketing practices would boost retail prices for cream. But it cannot be put down as a "soak-the-rich" device. For, as Mr. Hendrickson points out, the milk from which cream is taken is the same product and requires the same cost of production as Class I fluid milk. The truth is that the consumers of cream are now subsidized by the consumers of whole milk. And that is certainly contrary to sound public policy, for milk is an essential food for poor and rich alike, while cream by itself is a semiluxury. By all means the preference for cream should be eliminated.

Donald E. Montgomery, consumers' counsel for the Department of Agriculture, has rendered a real public service by raising this point. So has Mr. Hendrickson in making the principle of equal treatment the basis of a practical decision. If higher prices for fluid milk can be avoided by making cream pay its own way, that appears to be a happy solution of the problem.

Building Ban

Economic dislocations in plenty will come on the heels of the ban on new civilian building.

In 1941 the volume of residential construction was greater than at any time during the past 17 years. The increased demand for homes was due partly to the defense boom, which expanded the national income, and partly to extraordinary emergency housing needs arising in centers of defense industry. However, long before the close of 1941, residential building activity showed a sharp decline. This was due to the growing shortages of construction materials as well as to the refusal of the Government to give priorities assistance for nonessential building. So the Government's sweeping ban on all new building of a nonessential character—residential, commercial, industrial, etc.—merely substitutes outright prohibitions for various official restrictions and nonofficial obstacles that have been gradually choking off normal building activity.

The order should aid building operations certified by the WPB as essential to the war effort. In the District, for example, where a vast housing program for warworkers is projected, the ban on nonessential construction will have little effect on current building activity. Indeed, there is a possibility that the order will benefit local private builders by drawing to the city surplus building labor released in other parts of the country. District builders have feared their operations would be severely limited by labor shortages that would force them to pay the ultra-high "prevailing" rates set by the Government on public housing projects.

The effects of the ban on new building will not be felt immediately, since work now under construction will not be stopped except on special order. Moreover, a large percentage of current building belongs in the essential war category, and war needs will be insistent for some time to come. Only when warworkers are housed and various types of emergency construction work tail off, with no new projects in sight, will we fully realize the extent of the economic dislocations caused by the temporary submergence of the building industry.

Abused Liberty

Shocking tales of abused privilege and liberty turned into gross license continue to come to light as the grand jury investigating Nazi activities in this country proceeds with its work. On Thursday, for example, Charles B. Hudson, editor of a mimeographed sheet called "America in Danger," was sent to jail for three months by Justice Jennings Bailey of the District Court for refusing to tell the grand jury who printed a scurrilous card obviously intended to arouse distrust of the Government and to discourage participation in the war.

The card is more likely to excite anger in the average American citizen than to promote disloyalty. The really disturbing fact is that this card is being circulated through the mail along with a speech by Representative Clare E. Hoffman. And it is known that Congressman Hoffman's office supplied copies of the speech to Hudson who is using them to arouse distrust of our Allies in the war and to lend dignity to his own malicious propaganda.

It is important to maintain freedom of speech and of the press even in wartime. Our democratic system is strong enough to withstand any strain caused by honest discussion of sincere differences of opinion regarding national policy. But there is no reason to tolerate malicious attempts to undermine the loyalty of the American people. And when Congressmen stoop to the level of even permitting their facilities to be used by these purveyors of hate, distrust and suspicion, they earn the contempt of the American people.

We are pleased to note that the special grand jury is probing deeper into this subversive business, and that the investigations of Dillard Stokes, one of our own reporters, are a chief source of the evidence presented. Justice Bailey's fine attitude was amply demonstrated by Thursday's prompt action in sending Charles Hudson to jail. Special Prosecutor Maloney has been a tower of strength in ferreting out evidence for presentation to the grand jury. The Department of Justice is fortunate in having a prosecutor so well equipped for this special assignment.

Finally, Attorney General Biddle has shown good judgment in backing up Mr. Maloney in his efforts to enforce the sedition laws with vigor and determination. It is particularly appropriate that the department is pursuing this investigation right here in the Nation's Capital where alleged offenses are known to have been committed and where a good record in handling such cases has already been established.

India's War Spirit

A British-Indian agreement would take the curse off the British disaster in the Indian Ocean. Certainly the navy-air reverse is a severe blow to the cause of the United Nations. The sinking of the two British cruisers brings to fifteen the number of British cruisers sent to the bottom since the war began. The later news that the Hermes has also gone down makes the fourth British aircraft carrier to be sunk. Then a number of airplanes and merchant vessels are missing as the result of the same action. It is a bad defeat which only a complete agreement in India could in any way offset.

Such an agreement, of course, would be of more psychological than material help. In spite of the difference with Britain, India has never been laggard in the war effort, and there has been no letdown since the talks began. Indeed, just the contrary is the case. The spread of Japan into Burma and the Indian Ocean has put the subcontinent on the alert. Recruiting got an impetus, and enlistments in the Indian army are now at the rate of 50,000 a month. More would be forthcoming if there were more equipment. As it is, the Indian Army can now muster upward of a million men. Equally there has been no slackening but an intensification in the output of munitions, though India is short of facilities for making the tanks and planes for modern mechanized war.

The war spirit in India is illustrated in the comments of the Indian-owned press. After the bombing of Ceylon, the Hindustan Times, of New Delhi, which is edited by Gandhi's son, observed, "No Indian can believe that the Japanese are coming to India as our deliverers, whatever their professions." A similar note of realism appears in Nehru's paper, the National Herald, of Lucknow. "One thing is clear," says this paper. "There shall be no quarter to the attacker, no compromise with aggression." It is obvious that, agreement or no agreement, the people of India would put up as much resistance as they could summon against the Japanese. They know that there is no salvation for India in a Japanese victory.

Soon they may be called upon to show their mettle. The action in the Indian Ocean seems to be destined to pave the way for landings on India's coastline when the Burma campaign permits. It has always been our feeling that the Japanese are more interested in the conquest of India than in the conquest of Australia. Japan seeks primarily to be overlord of Asia. Strategically, moreover, she wants, and certainly Hitler wants to time the blow at India simultaneously with Nazi Germany's coming drive to the Persian Gulf. How to divert both Japan and Germany from this schedule is doubtless the subject matter of the high strategy talks in London in which General Marshall is participating.

On Prejudice

Mr. Somerset Maugham, the distinguished British novelist, finds that despite the war and the inseparable interest of his country and ours, the prevailing attitude toward his countrymen among a considerable section of Americans is "one of dislike." Writing in the current issue of the Saturday Evening Post, Mr. Maugham seeks to analyze this phenomenon from both the British and American standpoint. As for the British, they are simply bewildered when they realize the existence of this dislike. From the American side Mr. Maugham finds the British accused of self-satisfaction, parsimony, bad manners, inhospitality, snobbery and, of course, lack of humor.

Of this last charge Mr. Maugham speedily acquits his countrymen. Certainly all reasonable men will agree with his point that "a nation which has produced Falstaff, Mr. Micawber, Sam Weller"—and he might have added many characters to the list—cannot justly be accused of national lack of humor. As to the other indictments, he finds that these, too, are based mainly, though not entirely, upon mutual misunderstandings arising from different standards.

He admits, for example, that by American standards the Briton is close-fisted, though by French standards quite extravagant. What Americans may consider superciliousness or bad manners may be merely characteristic English social shyness. And he goes on to point out, what Americans are so often loath to recognize, that the English have at least the qualities of what to us seem their defects.

This frank little essay of Mr. Maugham's makes very salutary reading at a time when so many poisonous efforts are being made to aggravate existing prejudices. Some, indeed, may consider his analysis rather superficial, since it takes no account of various historical, philosophical and even religious factors which also play a part in creating prejudice. And even on the surface of things, it seems to us that Mr. Maugham has overlooked one very important prejudice, namely, the unpleasantly artificial effect produced by Americans who go to such lengths to habituate in themselves English mannerisms and speech. Among the most dangerous enemies to Anglo-American rapport are those natives of Brooklyn, N. Y., Muncie, Ind., Albuquerque, N. Mex., who persist in saying "shed-yule," "labor'try," "sekret'ry" and "bawthtub."

Silver Loan—New Style

The ruling by Attorney General Biddle that the Government has legal authority to "lend" its uncoined free silver to industry does not go far enough to enlist our useless silver hoard in the war effort. Yet it is helpful. It permits the release of 1,360,000,000 ounces of the metal for important war uses. Otherwise the Treasury's silver hoard would have to remain idle in underground vaults. For under the law it may not be sold for less than the absurdly high statutory price of $1.29 per ounce.

However, there is a vast amount of useless silver in storage that presumably no sort of legalistic legerdemain can make available to industry. That is the silver bullion securing our silver certificates and the silver dollars held by the Treasury. Release of this silver, which constitutes the bulk of Treasury stocks, would not impair the soundness of the currency system, since the silver backing is largely fictional. In fact, the unsubsidized value of the silver behind outstanding certificates as well as the value of the silver dollars does not remotely approach the exchange value of the money in question.

Now, if ever, is the time to get rid of the whole body of our preposterous silver laws which not only compel the Treasury to keep buying silver at artifically high prices but also make silver unavailable for pressing war needs after acquisition. As Governor Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board stated in a letter to Senator Vandenberg, "In view of the war situation, it is all the more urgent that the inflationary effects of the silver program be removed, and that so far as possible the materials, machinery and labor now devoted to silver production be utilized in the war effort." With that end in view, repeal of the Silver Purchase Act is essential. And, in addition, Congress should specifically authorize the Treasury to sell its accumulated silver on reasonable terms to war industries.

MESSAGE IN THE SKY

Gold into steel into slate into jet:
Slowly the day is dissolved;
Slowly the night is evolved
Out of the gold of a sun that has set,
Into a heaven of darkness—and yet
Stayed by a Wisdom that never has let Darkness' victory bold:
After a little, the shroud is withdrawn;
Night is dissolved into hope—into dawn—

Restricted Services

Oh joy, oh peace, oh glorious day! Oh beautiful Easter morning! How inspiring to be arisen and out in God's own outdoors, and to be able to go to the sunrise services at Arlington! What a privilege! Yes, indeed, we found out that it is a privilege. In this most Christian Capital of this most democratic Nation, we stood like dumb sheep, herded behind ropes while those more privileged than ourselves went through to take their seats in the Amphitheater. What undreamed of indignation, what never before felt class consciousness arose and quickly snuffed out the "glad to be alive" glow of Easter morning. Dear God, did you mean us to be seething, boiling inside with rage on Easter morning? Is this the country we are praying that you will help us save? GAY NELSON.

Washington, April 5.

Easter morning I arrived at the Arlington Memorial at five minutes before 7 a. m., when the sunrise services were supposed to begin. At that time there were hundreds of people on the outside of the Amphitheater denied admittance. It appeared that admission to the Amphitheater was by card only. Later additional thousands were similarly disappointed. It would be interesting to know what proportion of the seats in the Amphitheater, if any, were available to the general public. Apparently, it is a private party given by some organization for the benefit of the members and their brass-hat friends. If such is the case the advance publicity should so indicate. W. H. D.

Unwilling Desk Men

I feel that I must correct K. L. M.'s misapprehension concerning officers at desks.

Men who are trained as aviators, infantrymen, artillerymen, etc., bitterly dislike being tied to an office desk. They would like nothing better than replacement by average officers and by civilians, and their own release to field service. However, since they are soldiers, they obey orders.

Success to K. L. M.'s idea. Nobody likes being a "brass hat." M. O.

No Politics, Please

Uncle Sam shouldn't blame us for being anxious about just how he's going to prosecute the war. Of course we can't expect him to tell all his nephews his exact plans, but we're worried about some things.

Somehow we don't have the highest admiration for all of those who are now in position to exercise a lot of power. We can't have any more gross negligence by our men in high places, affecting the interest of 130 millions of us. We don't want much playing politics either, for we're only interested in one party right now—the win-the-war party.

From now on our officeholders have got to drop the old cherished idea that the most important thing is to hold their jobs. What we want to be sure of is that our officials are made of the right kind of stuff. If they aren't, well, we'll discharge 'em and get us some good ones; and we expect our generals not to adhere too much to their "armchairs." In other words, we want plenty of action, but it must be wise.

Appreciating Allies' Qualities

"Oh, no thanks, I see enough of the British during the day without having to sit across the table from one in the evening." How many times have we Americans working and living here in Washington heard those words or words similar to them? What makes us come out with such comments? And why do we usually nod understandingly when we hear them?

The British people have accomplished a magnificent job in the defense of their homeland: that much no one denies, not even the Nazis. We admit it and know that in doing it they have given our factories and industries a head start in war production. Nevertheless, there seems to prevail throughout this land a feeling that the British have done a rotten job in this war and now that we are in it, we will have to pull them out and finish the job for them. This tenet is largely due to the appalling lack of knowledge on the part of most American criticizers. The average man feels that he knows all the answers when, in all reality, he has a very limited knowledge of military affairs due to the censors and almost no knowledge of the conditions under which the events he seeks to criticize occur. There are those who scoff at Dunkirk, calling it a terrible blunder and a near massacre. They fail to see that a victory is the successful culmination of a series of maneuvers. Britain's plan at Dunkirk was to evacuate an entire army under overwhelming odds and they did it masterfully; thus Dunkirk is a great victory; the desired end was arrived at and the plan perfectly executed.

We Americans are too apt to fly off the handle and condemn the British for bungling and losing battles. It is true that they have bungled and they have lost battles, but can anyone name one of their bungles that is equal in consequences or anything else to Pearl Harbor? British forces were unassisted and unrelieved at Hongkong and that bastion fell. Did not our own Marines suffer the same fate at Wake and Midway? Did not the British hold under torturous conditions at Tobruk in the same manner that our men have done on Bataan?

We must remember that the Axis powers are fighting with their backs to the center of a large circle. From the focal point of that circle they can easily transport troops, materials and arms to any part of the fighting front without going into hostile zones, or faking any great chances of losing a single man or piece of equipment. On the other hand, Britain is on the outside of the circle, spread all over the map, trying to hold onto and consolidate what she has. Her battle area embraces the entire globe and many fronts are completely cut off from the others. The supply lines to these remote points are in constant danger and open to attack by the enemy, making them always difficult to traverse. Yet all these fronts must be armed and supplied with the materials of war as well as the men.

Just let us stop and ask ourselves "What would we do to smash Hitler in North Africa for instance? Should we take so many men from Australia and armored equipment from the British Isles and then send them to Egypt?" Of course not. Anyone knows that Australia is under attack from Japan now and needs all the man power she can muster to defend herself. As for the armored equipment, that is only enough for each spot to have so much and no more. Thus there is nothing that we can do. There are too many places that must be held and insufficient man power and armored equipment to mass enough in any one place to deliver a knockout punch. Now with the United States in the war that punch is forthcoming, but it will not be any setup merely because we are in it. We need Britain and Britain needs us. Alone neither one of could win out. Together we can and will.

Now if that clears up the complaints about various fighting abilities, how about the old American complaint known as the "typical Englishman?" Unfortunately there is such a sort, the British snob. He is the Old School Tie boy living in the reflected glory of his dead ancestors' deeds and looking down his long nose at Americans with that "I smell something rawther nauseating, Old Bean" look on his face. He makes no bones about the fact that he feels vastly superior to an American because he is British and he has an old cultured knack of making this point very obvious and pointed. Now the Yankee hates this, naturally, and knows that Britain today has any right but the right to get high handed with America or Americans. The sad part about it is that many of the British people sent over here are of this type. The Home Government in London should never have allowed this to happen as these people are doing Anglo-American relations nothing but harm when they should be cementing the two nations closer together. All men sent here by London should be trained to be as pleasant as possible to Americans and how to get on with us if for no other reason than getting what they want in the most facile manner. There are other reasons for this training in American ways, one in particular.

After this war is over, our two nations will, of necessity, be much closer together than ever before. On our shoulders will fall the policing of the world with our other allies until it can be put back together again on a decent way of life and for trade purposes. The future of us all lies in the agreeable working together spirit of the English-speaking world. So why in the name of Heaven don't the British over here realize that and see that they have a golden opportunity to know us, learn our ways and above all sell us England? Our arms and equipment will go to them now that we are in the war, but would they not like it better if they knew that America was giving to them not only for that reason but because we like them and want to help. Instead of fostering this feeling, many of them are doing their best to erase it. It is a pity.

We Americans have a job to do also. We must sell them America and show them that they are years behind the times in assuming that we are an uncivilized race of money mad industrialists. After all, we are fighting a war against class distinction, against the idea that some men are better than others and the rest fit only to look down upon. We are in this together and for the sake of the ultimate victory we must pull together as allies should, and for the sake of the world to come, we must learn to appreciate each other's qualities as well as faults. THOMAS B. HUSBAND.

This Singing Land

Music and the fighting man have been inseparable companions down through the ages. A song has always been a surefire prescription for chasing the war jitters, wherever the conflict. And in this one essential the present war departed from the accepted rule. Hostilities in Europe began without benefit of singing; the silence grew deep and long. Here in safe America we wondered. There were those who called this a phony war, and they compared the listless attitude of the present conflict with the wild emotion that characterized the years 1914-18. Then troops marched away singing, and their songs were borne across the Atlantic so that long before our nation entered that conflict the notes of "Tipperary" were enough to set huge crowds cheering. The veterans of that war shook their heads; the enlisted man of today is an enigma, they thought to themselves: he is silent. He has not yet spoken. Certainly he has done no singing. What does he really feel?

Pearl Harbor brushed aside this wonder along with a lot of other things. The fighting forces found their voices; at last America is singing. The barrage of ballads goes on ceaselessly and Tin Pan Alley is working overtime, pulling new and timely ditties out of their respective magical pianos. Yesterday I heard a song about the dauntless MacArthur; tomorrow there may be a new tune on the airways lauding our lads in the armed service Down Under. Of course you have heard the tuneful query that bears the official approval of the Treasury Department, "Any Bonds Today?"

As in past wars the demand for song is growing, fighting songs with the thumbs-up spirit; cheerful songs, comic songs (remember, "Good-morning Mr. Zip Zip Zip," of the last war and what a nifty that was?); sweet sad songs that serve as a release for pent-up emotions.

Washington's Continentals marched the wilderness roads to the strains of "Yankee Doodle." This air, probably of French vintage, was first sung in mirthful derision by the British, for the sight of the unkempt Colonials had been too much for their sense of humor. What a weird, fantastic foe this American soldier was, to-be-sure! Yankee Doodle with a wild feather in his coonskin cap and fringe on his leather jerkin. They held the sides of their impeccably tailored red coats and bent almost double with laughter! American macoroni's! But the song proved a boomerang. The provincials were well aware that their appearance aroused derision, but they were hardy souls whose feelings were not easily hurt.

The Civil War was strangely replete with song. Literally thousands of songs were written and sung in both North and South; and it is a curious fact that while the people behind the lines sang the songs whose warlike flavor was stronger such as "Dixie," "The Bonnie Blue Flag," "Battle Hymn of the Republic" and "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp the Boys Are Marching," the man at the front sang of love. For the Civil War soldier, whatever the color of his uniform, was the most sentimental man who ever shouldered a gun. He believed in lost love and pressed flowers, flounced muslins and gold chains, in curls and in rosemary. "When This Cruel War is Over," sung by both Blue and Gray, made him pensive and tender.

In the War Between the States "Lorena," a lay guaranteed to bring tears to the eyes of the hardiest veteran, became the theme-song of the '60's; it was sung around more than 10,000 camp-fires; it grew into a low tremendous wave, the sound of so many soldiers voices: "And what we might have been, Lorena, Had but our loving prospered well!" In these nostalgic lines lives the secret of Lorena's popularity. She was the soldiers' own "true lost love."

The Spanish-American War was not prolific in songs, and such as there were were maudlin in nature and so did not long survive the conflict. "Just Break the News to Mother" is an example. "Just break the news to mother; she knows how dear I love her. And tell her not to watch for me, For I'm not coming home." No one remembers this song today; not even the contemporaries of the period recall it. But the stirring days of 1914-18 more than made up for the deficiency. The lads sailed for France to the resounding notes of "Over There" and "Goodbye Broadway, Hello France." The Yanks were on their way. Yes sir, you could not mistake them, for their song carried on ahead. Who can ever forget the plaintiveness of "K-K-K-Katy," or "Wee Wee Marie" which pled in such wistful doughboy French, "will you do zis for me?" What tune has ever completely matched the sturdy confidence of "Long Boy?" This homespun lay had its feminine counterpart in the song "If He Can Fight Like He Can Love." They had something there, too. Then there was that audacious warning, "Keep Your Head Down, Fritzie Boy," wrapped up in a song and sent booming across no man's land, sans love. The World War generation sang and smiled with "Smiles," and the soldier had his loves—for there were two, "Madelon" (Madelon, it is for you we carry on); and "The Rose of No Man's Land." There was an outstanding quality about the songs of the last war, their total lack of belligerence or vituperation; and this quality has served to integrate them into the songways of the Nation. Some of the newer songs of this war have displayed a flagrant disregard of this attribute and Tin Pan Alley might well take note.

The soldier sings the songs that come most natural to him, and because of this reason they become the battlesongs of a Nation. As a Nation we may still be a bit off-key but we have found our voice. Soon we will catch the beat of the music and if so far we have produced nothing comparable to that delightful nonsense beloved of the doughboy 20 years ago, "Hinky Dinky Parlay Voo," do not dispair: the right song will appear in due time. Walt Whitman has written "I Hear America Singing." To this might be added, America singing is America unconquered.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

After Bataan

THE FALL of Bataan is no easier to bear because we have known that it was only a question of how long the Filipino and American forces could hold out. Some supplies it was possible to send, but no reinforcements to the weary men. So there was never a chance that they could last until they could be relieved and the siege raised by the reconquest of the Western Pacific. For their powers of resistance were measured in weeks and our power to counterattack in force is almost certainly to be measured in months and years.

LIPPMANN

SO THEY fought knowing that they themselves had no hope. This is the very heart of courage, transcending all other acts of which men are capable, and the surest proof that man is more than his flesh, his blood, his bones and his appetites. On this proof as on a rock, that there is in all men a capacity to live and a willingness to die for things which they themselves can never hope to enjoy, there rests the whole of man's dignity and the title to all his rights. Were man not the kind of creature who can pursue more than his own happiness, he would never have imagined his freedom, much less have sought it.

For that reason men can never accept finally an order of things in which, as in all the devil's work, the nobility of man, his selfless courage, is used to destroy the grounds and origins of his courage. Whatever the fanatical courage men show in an evil cause, we need never doubt that its energy is limited. For the fanaticism of an evil cause cannot draw upon the whole nature of men, and it is doomed, therefore, as always in the past, to wither and rot away.

THE FALL OF Bataan marks the end of one phase of one campaign in one theater of the world-wide war. Those who could not or would not see it earlier must see now that the successes of Japan are due solely to the fact that all her enemies have been deeply engaged in the struggle with Hitler. No one will wish to minimize, if for no other reason than out of pride in the heroism of our men, that the Japanese campaign is brilliantly conducted. But the fact remains that none of the western nations has been able to devote itself to the war with Japan. Britain, Russia, and the United States have in Hitler a far more formidable enemy, and what Japan has done is to take full advantage of Hitler's war.

Japan has never yet had to deal with the whole power of the United Nations. The day of reckoning for Japan will be the day when she must deal with the whole power of the United Nations. No one knows this better than the Japanese themselves, and, therefore, their greatest preoccupation is to divert us and confuse us into adopting a strategy of dividing and scattering our forces so that we shall never fight unitedly and effectively anywhere.

TO ACCOMPLISH this end the Axis leaders rely, not without reason, upon the fundamental weakness of democratic nations—their vulnerability to pressure groups. From every place that is threatened, actually or potentially, the pressure is exerted to send ships, planes, troops for the defense of that place. The net result is to force the hands of those who are responsible for the war, to force them to dissipate at scattered places the power which they need to concentrate in order to strike at the enemy.

It is not the business of civilians, because they cannot possibly judge the situation correctly to say whether the war should be fought at this place or at that one—from Australia, from Alaska, from Africa, from England, from Scandinavia. But it is very much the business of civilians to protect their commanders from the pressure and the propaganda of other civilians. It is very much the business of the civilians to stand guard against sectionalism, jingoism, or political and journalistic clamor seeking to impose strategical plans upon the responsible commanders.

This will be one way to stand by the men who have fallen at Bataan.

Fair Enough

Itinerant Workers

Tucson, Ariz.

AT FORT HUACHUCA, an old frontier post in the mountains and desert southeast of here, much construction of pine barracks and the auxiliary buildings of a modern, rush-order Army cantonment is still proceeding for the accommodation, during their training, or activation, of a division of Negro soldiers. The post is in a God-forsaken area almost constantly whipped by strong winds which raise the desert dust in high spirals and is destitute of any such town amusements as ordinarily are accessible to soldiers, but the colored men in uniform, nevertheless, will be better off in all practical respects than the white civilians who have flocked in to slap the buildings together.

They have a fine U. S. O. center and other recreation buildings, whereas many of the construction men and their families are living in shacks, tents and trailers or a brick-dry flat in a settlement called Fry, without any more effective local civil government than that which, by common consent, they observe among themselves.

About 3600 of the civilian construction men are housed in contractors' barracks, at $1 a day for food and lodging. These are the stags and, obviously, the stag has a more orderly and economical life than the man who drags his family from job to job around the country with him. The stag's family, who stay put in their home town, would appear to be much better off, too. On straight time, the men earn $80 a week and, if they live in the barracks, should be able to lay up some.

THE GYPSY families, on the other hand, keep house as they go and, in a general view, conform to the impression which John Steinbeck gave us of the Okies in California. At a glimpse their camps seem horribly squalid, but on closer view the people are not at all the dull-eyed, emaciated and degenerated monsters who were carefully selected and pictured as horrible examples of the failure of America in the photo-propaganda volumes of the early '30s.

The children are as clean and bright as children anywhere, the women around the camp are not markedly different from the wives of American workmen anywhere else, and the sanitation surely can be no more dangerous to health than that which still exists in the laggard sections of some Southwestern cities where people live in little detached houses.

At any rate, there has been no outbreak of disease around Fry, although the venereal rate is high among both soldiers and civilians and whether the families save money while the work lasts would seem to be up to them. Before very long they will pull stakes again, load their household duffle and scatter to other jobs, or to God knows where.

THE CONSTRUCTION workman has changed his way of life in the last 50 years or less. In other times he went single and light, building railroads and boom towns, saved, squandered or gambled his money away and was a mobile man. Some still do this; but many, such as those in Fry, are pioneer types and almost all native Americans who preserve the family group even where there are no decent accommodations nor adequate schools, regardless of the disadvantage to the families. Still, it is a free country and men and women who take to the road and just roam from job to job, living much in the open, are not necessarily to be pitied or mothered back into cities and towns by Government agencies. They would be pretty sure to resent it.

Last week near Benson, Ariz., two leathery ancients were seen creeping along the highway in a ragged little covered wagon drawn by two drowsy, plodding burros. Almost a week later the same two passed along the Oracle Road west of Tucson and rested while the old woman busied herself with a frying pan over a little fire. They had done perhaps 70 miles, but seemed to be in no hurry and might have resented as an intrusion any attempt to bawl over them as pathetic waifs of a negligent civilization. They were extremely untidy old people and, close up, might have had B. O., which was their business, too, but they seemed to be very tough, independent citizens, unafraid of the night air, stickups, snakes or the tax collector.

As workmen, the drifters on the Huachuca job are too various to be described as good, bad or indifferent, in the mass. Some are first-class men, others hammer-and-saw carpenters of no particular skill, but fairly willing, and others, as workmen, simply aren't worth their room. There is considerable loafing—three men loading brick by hand into a truck but two of them resting and the driver standing by, waiting. Or one carpenter setting a door-frame while two others lean against the wall, talking things over. They can be fired for loafing, of course, but only to be replaced by others and only to drift along to the next job which, nowadays, isn't hard to find over the next range.

British Empire

A Reply And An Exposition

"THE AMERICANS came from Europe: they invaded the United States, tortured and exterminated the red Indians and carried on a nefarious slave trade, exchanging rum for African blacks until they were stopped by Lincoln on his march from the log cabin to the White House (sic). Thousands of gangsters commit dreadful murders everywhere and pay money not to be punished. Every man is allowed several wives and can divorce them as often as he likes. They eat the barnacles from the bottoms of ships (clams?) with strong liquor called cocktails; speak English but through their noses; live in high buildings called skyscrapers. The capital is New York but the Government is carried on at Hollywood; and the national hero is a youth called Booker Washington, who killed King George 3d, with a small hatchet and would not confess it. He was beaten by his father till he was dizzy and black and blue, and this was the origin of Stars and Stripes."

This is what a European high school girl wrote in an examination on "What you know about America." And it is no more absurd or inaccurate, and much more inocuous than Howard D. Woodson's fantastic remark about the British Empire in his letter in your issue of April 7. And from internal evidence it appears that Mr. Woodson is not an American high school boy but a very elderly gentleman whose education must have ceased about 100 years ago, so out of date is his information. No, even earlier, for slavery was abolished throughout the British domains about the year 1780, and Mr. Woodson seems to think it still exists.

May I trespass on your space to offer enlightenment to him and other possible Mr. Woodsons on certain points in connection with the "British Commonwealth of Free Nations" as it is now commonly called. My excuse for doing so is that it is of the utmost importance for all the English-speaking peoples of the world to know each other better. Without knowledge there cannot be understanding; without understanding there cannot be appreciation, friendship or affection; and without real friendship there can scarcely exist that close and enthusiastic cooperation which is essential for complete and speedy success in any joint enterprise whether of business or war. An idealistic and democratically minded young American soldier cannot fight with maximum effect if his heart is not in his cause and the cause of his Allies.

IDEAS are the foundation of action. Hitler has appreciated this more than any of the belligerent leaders and it has been the greatest source of his strength. He has spent a billion dollars on a vast organization manned by his cleverest knaves, under the yoke of Goebbels, to propagate his ideas. He knows that whether the peoples of Germany or their adversaries are to put their backs into the struggle or not depends on the ideas they hold. One of the lies he has been most active in putting over is that Britain "owns" and exploits the British Empire for her personal profit and to the disadvantage of so-called "have-not" nations. Far from this being the case, Britain does not even govern the empire. By far the largest and most important part of it—the "Dominions"—consist of entirely independent countries, equal in all respects with Britain herself. It has long been British declared policy to give similar independence to the "Colonies"—smaller and less advanced territories—as soon as they are capable of maintaining it. As to India, there is not an intelligent man or woman in England who has not long desired that she, too, should acquire the status of Canada and the other dominions. If Britain freely conceded independence to Australia and Canada, why should she wish to withhold it from India and the colonies?

That India has not already achieved independence is due solely to the failure of the various sections—Hindus, Moslems, native states and "Untouchables"—to agree on a workable constitution. It may be added that the degree of self-government in the provinces of British India has been for some time in all the essentials equivalent to that of the States of the United States. Only in what corresponds to federal matters does Britain exercise supervisory powers over India as a whole. One simple illustration of the benefit of British rule in India is that during the past 40 years the population has increased by no less than 115 millions. This is the result of British construction of vast irrigation and transportation ways which have increased fertility of soil and food production and thus prevented famine, and of modern British medical methods and public utilities which have greatly reduced the incidence of deadly tropical epidemics.

NO PART of the British Commonwealth pays taxes or tribute of any kind to Britain. Every penny raised in taxes is spent on the inhabitants. Britain, on the other hand, makes free grants of money to the colonies.

No part of the British Commonwealth is obliged to buy from, or to sell to, Britain. These "owned" colonies, in fact, buy only 25 per cent of their imports from Britain and trade freely with other countries. British India buys less than one-third of her imports from Britain and puts heavy import duties on the entry of British goods. Germany was one of her largest customers. The United States is another.

ANY foreign nation is free to invest capital in any part of the British Commonwealth. The average return on British capital investments in India is less than 5 per cent—a low return, having regard to the risk. There is twice as much British capital invested in a single foreign country—the Argentine—as in all the British colonies. There is more American than British capital in Canada.

In the British Commonwealth there are colored cabinet ministers, colored high court justices, colored Anglican bishops and colored naval and military officers of high commissioned rank.

The British Commonwealth is a huge experiment in internationalism—a league of nations which works. It consists of nations which are completely independent and other member-states which are being guided and helped to the same goal. Its basis is liberty and progress.

Matthew Page Andrews, the eminent American historian, has written: "In every essential the democracy of the British dominions resembles the democracy of the United States today. If anything the present American concept since the War Between the States is the more imperialistic, for here no State may withdraw from the American union as against that right freely accorded to the British dominion."

PRICE COLLIER, the distinguished American journalist, who knew England intimately wrote: "Again I repeat: England is the most democratic country in the world, where the rights of the individual are more respected, where the individual has more of personal freedom and where the individual is less trammeled by barriers of birth or class in his efforts to rise, than anywhere else in Christendom."

England has begun to teach American history seriously in her schools and universities, and it is to be hoped that America will extend the study of the modern history of the British Commonwealth. But much more than this is needed, for it will be 20 years or more before the rising generation is playing an effective part in public affairs. The adults of both countries need to be instructed in the manners, customs and history of each. Some sort of British institute should be set up in the United States, and an American institute in England, each financed generously by the country in which it is situated, and devoted to the dissemination of information, the promotion of understanding and the propagation of cultural, historical and political study each of the other.

Much more knowledge of each on the part of both is urgently demanded if we are to win the war and the peace.

Argentine Industry

By David Saavedra

Restricted Only By Markets

ONE FREQUENTLY reads in newspapers and magazines in the United States that the Argentine could not become an industrial nation for the simple reason that "she entirely lacks iron, coal, manganese, copper and timber; that her petroleum deposits are uncertain." To this chapter of industrial inhibitions should be added that the country has no prospects of securing a substitute for coal with the use of hydraulic power.

Are basic metals and fuel the most important materials in the manufacturing program of a nation? Is it necessary that mines should be located at the back yard of the plant in order to set up a mill?

The scarcity of some raw materials for manufacturing purposes could be offset by a series of apparently unrelated factors. To this number belongs the foodstuffs which are, in my opinion, one of the greatest elements to consider in the survey of the industrial possibilities of a nation. In this aspect, the Argentine stands at the head of all countries in the Occident. She has evolved a substantial agrarian production and is oversupplied with foodstuffs for domestic consumption. Consider the importance of this item in the economic fabric of a nation. About 20 years ago, New England used to buy foodstuffs outside her own territory to the amount of about 800 million dollars to one billion dollars annually.

THE LAST World War set in motion the industrialization of the Argentine Republic. Since 1914 the country has been slowly developing a healthy industry based primarily on the manipulation of the abundant raw materials produced at home and, in some isolated cases, in the importation of foreign ones. The world economic crisis of 1931 marked the second stage of the industrial upsurge of the River Plate nation. The republic found herself with vast stocks of raw products for which there were no consumers. Prices went to the bottom in the chaotic days of depression. New mills were established to use these materials. The importance of this movement may be gathered from the fact that imports of manufactured goods into the country in 1938 dropped to 26 per cent as against 40 per cent in 1914. The value of finished products (1938) was equal to about 3,442,474,838 Argentine pesos, the output of 49,635 establishments. The report for 1938 showed 49,381 establishments, a gain of about 9000 plants in two years. The value of finished products amounted to about 4,709,089,883 Argentine pesos, a gain of over a billion Argentine pesos over the previous period.

As irony of fate, another World War is the overwhelming force driving the Argentine to accelerate her industrialization plan and to take up the production of heavy machinery. The first carload of South American manufactured machine tools arrived in the United States in July, according to a telegram published in the New York Times, July 17, 1941, from Cleveland (AP) "The Lempco Products, Inc., of Cleveland represents in the United States three machine tool concerns from Buenos Aires. Shapers, drill presses, punch presses, die filling machines and screw machines are among the numerous items."

Let us now examine the position of the Argentine with regard to fuel. "Increased Argentine domestic production reduced the nation's dependence upon foreign sources of crude oil to about 15.4 per cent of total consumption in 1940, as compared with 20.4 per cent in 1939. The drop in value of crude petroleum sales was almost counterbalanced by the 64 per cent gain in the value of coal sales to the Argentine, which amounted to $1,600,000 in 1940, as compared with $976,000 in 1939 and only $81,000 in 1938." U. S. Department of Commerce.

THE ANALYSIS of the Argentine fuel bill is not at all negative. On the contrary it is highly encouraging. Let us put the question another way: Suppose that the Argentine, as in the example of New England, had had to purchase her foodstuffs abroad, would not this huge sum have surpassed the paltry sum spent in fuel to run her mills? Notice that the Argentine's population today is about twice that of New England two decades ago.

There are at present in the Argentine about 580,497 manual workers in the mills, the total number of workers being 663,906. The greater number of industrial establishments are engaged in the manufacture of domestic raw products—wheat, sugar, textiles, wool, footwear, breweries, tanneries, etc. A very limited number is listed under "metallurgical plants."

In order of importance the output of the leading industries in 1938 was: Meat products accounted for 528 million dollars, textiles for 320 million dollars, wheat and wheat flour for 258 million dollars, construction for 234 million dollars, ready-made clothes for 201 million dollars, etc. Total investments in the domestic industry amounted to $4,134,000,000.

Returning to the point of fuel and basic metals. Granted that none of these raw materials is found at home, they are, on the other hand, close to the mills and, in some cases, closer to Buenos Aires, which is the leading industrial center of the Argentine, than some of the raw products are to the mills in the East in the United States.

Take copper, for example. This metal is on the other side of the Andes Mountains about 1000 miles from Buenos Aires. There is a transandine railroad and transandine motor road between the Argentine and Chile. On the other hand, the Eastern smelteries in the United States have to pay twice as much freight for the ore at the mines of Butte, Mont. When the ore is brought in from Alaska, on the northern Pacific, or Chile or Peru in the southern Pacific, to the cost of sea transportation should be added overland freight across the continent.

TIN and manganese, considered strategic metals in the United States, are also imported into the Union from remote places; the former from Malaya and Bolivia; the latter from Russia, British India, Cuba and Brazil. Before the war, Russia, British India, China and the Philippines sent large shipments to America.

As a contrast to this excessive cost of transportation of some raw materials, the Argentine has to pay an almost negligible bill. Almost every metal she could obtain from her neighboring sisters, Chile, Bolivia, Paraguay and Brazil. Paraguay possesses the rich iron mines of Ibicuy, exploited in 1863 by the tyrant Solano Lopez to maintain his forges in his war against the allied forces of the Argentine, Uruguay and Brazil. Bolivia is one of the leading producers of tin in the world and the manganese mines of Brazil are very rich. Paraguay, as well as Bolivia, is connected with the Argentine by a railroad. The Argentine-Bolivia Railroad, 1636 miles long, is owned by the Argentine state.

The Argentine could not be more fortunate in the matter of fuel. There is a pipe line running straight from the southern Bolivian oil fields into the northern part of the Argentine, the Chaco region. This line was the subject of a bitter controversy a few years ago between the Standard Oil Co. and the Boliviar government.

On the steady flow of this fuel the Argentine can rely in peacetime as well in wartime. The petroleum deposits are located in the hinterland of Bolivia, a landlocked country and, therefore, there is no risk of submitting shipments to the penalties of a blockade or a blacklist. The same reasoning could be applied to other metals that could be transported overland. Brazilian railroads, for example, make connections with those of Uruguay.

The Bolivian oil could supplement the domestic production of the Argentine wells at Comodoro Rivadavia estimated at about 17 million barrels a year. In addition to this oil, the Argentine could draw on the immense coal deposits of Brazil. The other day a large shipment of Brazilian coal was bought by the Argentine. Though it is of an inferior quality, if it were submitted to certain improvements, it could be used for industrial purposes. Incidentally, let us recall that Japanese coal is not richer than Brazilian, and yet it feeds in part the huge Nipponese industrial machinery.

Probably those who have predicted that the Argentine could never become an industrial nation for the lack of basic metals, forgot to glance at a South American map. For at either border of the country there is a veritable treasure of metals. Moreover, no maritime power could interfere with these shipments.

In surveying the industrial potentiality of the Argentine, let us remember that the country possesses in abundance cotton and wool, the essential raw materials required for textile which is the leading industry in almost every manufacturing nation in the world. It was textile, controlled by England formerly and now in the hands of Japan, which gave impetus to the new Nipponese industry.

ANOTHER POINT to be weighed is the absolute freedom of the Argentine from importation of foodstuffs. The country is the granary of the Occident and the producer of foodstuffs in such vast quantities that meat, bread, cheese, butter, wine and vegetables are sold at low prices, the lowest in America, which are within the reach of even the poorest consumer. Foodstuff substitutes, for example, sausages or hot dogs, a combination of cereals and meat, which are staple products in the United States, are unknown on the River Plate.

To distribute the products of her nascent industry, the Argentine owns the longest mileage of railroads in the continent below the Rio Grande. The Province of Buenos Aires, focus of the activity of the country and the largest industrial center of Latin America, is served by a splendid railroad system so spread that no point within the province is over 25 miles distant from a railroad. To these transportation facilities must be added the use of motor trucks over the highways crossing the pampa.

Unlike the United States and the large industrial powers, the Argentine could not expect to resort to mass production and will have to content herself with a restricted production of manufactured goods. The marketing of the products is very serious. Surrounded by Brazil and Chile, both of which have gone earnestly into the industrial field, the Plate Republic will have to confine herself to supplying her own domestic market plus the market of the river states of Paraguay and Uruguay. All told, the probable consumers will amount to about 16 million. Manufacturers can pick up here and there some odd orders in southern Bolivia and southwestern Brazil, but these peoples are rather poor consumers. Even Paraguay, with one million people, is a poor prospect.

Concede that the Argentine could control with her merchandise the markets of the River Plate basin by the right of neighborhood, can she at the same time maintain her supremacy as the leading agricultural and pastoral nation of the southern continent? Could she expect to export to Europe after the present war is over as much foodstuffs as she did in the past? Could she hope to sell and not to buy from her European customers?

Of all the Latin-American states which undertook the industrial course, the Argentine is the strongest, the richest and the most promising star of the new mercantile constellation. I am not speaking in terms of area, or in terms of population; in both aspects she is well below Brazil, the size of a continent and the population of a great power. But the purchasing capacity of the Argentine and the standard of living of the people are the highest in the New World after those of the United States and Canada.

The Gallup Poll

Average American Expects War Will Continue Two to Three Years Longer, Survey Indicates

By George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., April 10—The average American thinks it will take another two or three years at least to whip the Axis powers.

Since the fall of Singapore and Java, and the renewed Jap drive in Burma, Americans have been setting their sights for a longer war than they previously thought. Only one person in seven believes the fighting will be over in anything less than two years, while one in four thinks it will take another three years or more, including a substantial number who say it will take five years.

Guesses Compared

The public's guesses, which are based on its own analysis of war events plus what political and military writers say, are shown below. Guesses recorded in January are likewise shown for comparison.

"About how much longer do you think the war will last?"

Less than 2 years	15%	21%
2 years	22	29
3 years	16	16
More than 3 years	28	22
Unwilling to guess	19	12

In the latest study, 17 per cent thought the war would last five years or more, as compared to 12 per cent in January.

The medium average falls between two and three years. That would mean somewhere toward the end of 1944 or the beginning of 1945.

No one, of course, not even Hitler himself can tell when the war will end, although the Nazi Fuehrer has given many promises to the German people, all of which proved false. The guesses of the American public are important in that they bear a direct relation to attitudes on the many issues related to the war. The individual's willingness to make sacrifices, his attitude toward the speed of war production and many other factors are bound to be affected by whether he himself believes this will be a short war or a long one.

One explanation of the fact that the American people have taken in their stride the recent military reverses of the United Nations is undoubtedly that so many are conditioned to the idea of a long, grim war in which victory is not immediately expected.

The public's conception of a long war likewise helps to explain its willingness to adopt total mobilization and rigid and far-reaching price and wage control.

Education a Factor

The greater the amount of a man's education, the more likely he is to believe the war will be long.

That is clearly shown in today's Institute survey in a special tabulation. The survey inquired of each voter how many years of schooling he had had, and the results were correlated with his guess as to the length of the war.

Among persons with a college education, only 9 per cent think the war will be over in two years, as compared to 18 per cent among persons with less than a completed high school education.

Thirty-four per cent of the college group thinks the war will go on for another three years or more, as contrasted to 25 per cent of the group with less than a completed high school education.

A. Gordon Jones Estate Valued Over $130,000

An estate valued at upward of $130,000 was left by A. Gordon Jones, 85-year-old railroad executive who died March 25, it was revealed yesterday in a petition for probate of his will.

He left about $120,000 in personal property and approximately $120,000 in real estate—including the Whiteoaks estate near Warrenton, Va.

Two U.M.W. Leaders Resign From Kentucky C.I.O. Council

By the Associated Press

Louisville, Ky., April 10.—Two district presidents of the United Mine Workers of America Union in Kentucky have resigned from the State council of the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

Resignation of Ed J. Morgan, of Madisonsville, president of District 23, U. M. W. A., as regional director of the C. I. O. in Kentucky, was announced today a few hours after Sam Caddy, Lexington, president of District 30, revealed he had submitted his resignation as president of the council a few days ago.

Caddy's district covers one of the largest coal mining regions in eastern Kentucky, while Morgan is head of a western Kentucky district.

In an interview at Lexington today Caddy said he resigned because of "unfair attacks by influential members of the C. I. O. on John L. Lewis, president of the U. M. W. A." "and because of "friction" between the two labor organizations.

Solidly Behind Lewis

Caddy said the U. M. W. A. still remained a member of the C. I. O.—at least in name—but what happened in the future was "in the laps of the gods."

He indicated that if C. I. O. attacks on Lewis continued, some move to withdraw might be considered, but he expressed hope no decision would be forced during the war.

Caddy declared his U. M. W. A. group was solidly behind Lewis and would follow his lead.

He said also that he had it from Lewis himself that the U. M. W. A. leader was "all out" to win the war and that as long as he continued he (Caddy) would give him his support.

Of the approximately 80,000 C. I. O. workers in Kentucky, about 60,000 are members of the U. M. W. A. In addition to districts 23 and 30, there is district 19, which covers the Harlan coal fields.

C. I. O. Won't Fold Up

John Grigsby, Central City, secretary-treasurer of the C. I. O. council, pointed out that the United Mine Workers of America is "the main artery of the C. I. O. in Kentucky," but emphasized that "even if they withdrew, that doesn't mean the C. I. O. in Kentucky will fold up . . . and I don't know and am not even intimating they will withdraw."

Flying Cadets in City's First War Parade

Stepping high to the martial music of a brass band, 168 newly enlisted flying cadets marched off to training yesterday in Washington's first World War II parade to compare with those of 1917-18. The young men, first to join the Army Air Force in Washington for flight training under new enlistment regulations waiving strict educational requirements, took the oath of allegiance in a mass ceremony at the aviation cadet recruiting station, 919 H Street Northwest.

Then they paraded to Union Station and entrained for Fort Maxwell, Ala. Members of the Elks Club, which houses the aviation cadet recruiting station, gave the boys a send-off luncheon.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Although Woman Has Worn Brave Face to World, Since Losing Her Husband a Year Ago, She Feels 'Dead Inside;' Is There Respite From Such Grief?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a widow, 43, and life was very good to me until a year ago when, after 20-odd years of happy married life, death stepped in and the other half of a very "going concern" was taken from the picture. The necessary adjustments were promptly settled and when I got around to counting my blessings, they were these: My children grown and "on their own," successfully building happy lives; enough income to supply the essentials of existence; a job to keep me busy and afford expensive "extras;" a house that is neither too large nor too small for me to keep; financial independence or security for old age practically guaranteed; and a lot of memories of past happiness. But bitter-sweet memories, that still tear me apart, although a year has passed.

A fortune teller to whom I went as a lark, with a visiting friend, phrased my state most aptly, when she said: "You smile with your face, but your heart is full of tears." Such is the case. Is there ever a panacea for this horrible feeling of empty loneliness? Don't prescribe work. I do that. And I participate in what outside activities are possible in the remaining time. I have purposely driven myself until physical weariness makes further effort impossible. Don't tell me I am suffering from self pity. I can and have put that emotion from me. I have never moaned to my friends. They have never seen me without a smile, nor immersed in my own affairs. In fact, they remark,—or used to,—on how well I "bear up."

I realize that I am much more fortunate than many persons, whose problems are material,—and nightmarish to cope with. But don't tell me that if you have ever been happy, you can never be unhappy.. I have thought of all the platitudes myself.. And I have analyzed all. the angles. I am not unhappy. I am just "dead," inside. A sort of emotional zombie. Naturally, I hesitate to force my company on friends who have husbands to share their leisure hours. I guess I am developing an inferiority complex in that respect, for I dread being the "extra woman;" and my time for frivolity is very limited.

My children are loving and considerate, but they live elsewhere and are busy with their own affairs. They have little time to visit me and I have little time to spend with them, although they always urge me to come and seem to regret my departure. However. I have never interfered in their lives and since they were old enough to make decisions of any sort we allowed them to do so, and they certainly justified our trust. I want them to want me, always; and I realize the way to achieve that is to refrain from interference and from "wearing out one's welcome."

You see, I realize I am fortunate. I recognize my blessings. I do not have too dull a time. But even in the midst of a crowd I am so terribly, terribly alone. Do you think people ever recover from this state? It seems a year should take the edge off. But time has effected no cure as yet. Tell me, have you found that "tears in the heart" ever cease to be felt?

J. A. F.

The Great Heart Turns From Its Own Grief

DEAR J. A. F.: Have you, indeed, appraised the import of your loneliness "from all the angles?" If death had taken you—instead of your husband—"from the picture," would you have expected him to rally completely from that loss within the brief span of one year? Is not the measure of your seemingly inconsolable grief the measure of what he meant to you? Would you, if you could, wipe from the slate all the good that went before, in order to be spared the current accounting? Would you be so shallow in nature, or so little welded in soul to your husband, as not to feel devastated to the core by his final departure from earthly scenes?

You say, "Don't tell me I suffer from self pity. I can and have put that emotion from me." Not so, my friend. You may wear a brave face, to earn the world's applause and hold your friends' (and children's) esteem; but your manner of cherishing the fortune teller's words,—the words of her who professed to look into your heart and find it "full of tears,"—is strongly self pitying. Hearts that weep, weep for themselves. Those that react indomitably to absolute grief are sternly tearless.

The emotionally corrosive luxury of "sweet sorrow" is not for them, while fierce anquish holds full sway. The great heart completely eclipsed by bereavement is like a locked and empty vault—from which the total energies of the invincible personality spontaneously turn away, seeking full and immediate reinvestment in living experiences. Grief is outgrown rather than "put down;" and the outgrowing process involves a metamorphosis of personality, a gradual transition into a revised and larger edition of one's former self, with the result that yesteryear's aching void at the soul's center is irresistibly and indirectly invaded by positive, creative emotions of subsequent origin and present significance—so that again the heart opens and flowers, with a renascence as natural as the recurrence of spring.

For 20-odd years, no doubt, your every thought and action had reference, direct or indirect, to your husband,—and his actual or supposed need of you. When he died, it seemed that your reason-for-being died also; and your prideful determination not to seek emotional alms of friends and offspring intensified your sense of "terrible aloneness." Prior to becoming a widow, you had been psychically independent of them, as they of you. Thus, you can know that they don't really need you, any more than you needed them, when you had your husband. Yet the instinct to be indispensably important to someone or something, and to give of yourself in response to that need and thrive in the giving cries for expression and finds no outlet. And because of this frustration, you experience the negative sensation of being "dead, inside."

Your failure to achieve, through some slight growth, some expansion of the self, a margin of peace during the last year, probably means that you have been consistently more vainglriously concerned with "putting on an act" of gallantry, than with honestly and simply seeking surcease from sorrow by quietly practicing the immemorial prescription of ministering to the needs of those more burdened, stricken and unfortunate—serving them either as one individual to another, or as a tireless participant in a "cause." You have never ceased being the central and dominant figure in your own thoughts, recollections and forecasts. While professing externally to be "living above" your grief, you have actually been keeping a continuous secret rendezvous with it.

In view of the fact that bereavement, violently inflicted, is the universal visitor of womankind today—as men of all nations do each other to death on battlefields that encircle the globe—how can you be so arrogantly self engrossed as to hold your suffering unique? Can you not transmute your self pity into compassion for all who sorrow, and relate yourself significantly again to the living by making it your purpose to give some happiness to those who might never know it, except through you? M. H.

'Nerves' Are Unpatriotic, Says Actress

Cure Them by War Work, Advises Miss Skinner

By Ida Jean Kain

WHICH do you have, nerves or nerve? With the whole world a stage for war, it's the latter that is being dramatized. We have to be able to "take it."

To express our growing aversion to jitters, in the words of Cornelia Otis Skinner, noted actress: "I think that no one has any tolerance for people with nerves these days. Nerves are a luxury you can indulge in when times are prosperous and easy but very out of place now. Anyone who has them should get into war work."

There's part of the answer—every woman is enough of an actress to decide in advance whether she wants to play the role of a fluttery, unstable person or that of a descendant worthy of our pioneer ancestry. Knowing that nerves are not going to be given any sympathy should help considerably in making the right decision.

It can't be purely mental, however. It is just as important to have a way of living that makes for health. Without health, emotional and nervous stability are impossible. When I talked with Miss Skinner it was not my intention to have her set an example of wartime living, but the plan she follows for the hectic world of the theater will do very well for this purpose.

Sleep and Rest

She gets 9 hours' sleep every night while working and always rests for an hour, sometimes longer, before going to the theater in the evening. She is convinced that every woman benefits in health—and also in looks—from such a routine. She does not "diet" but avoids fats and starches, which amounts to the same thing, and keeps a careful watch on the scales. She is 5 feet 7 and weighs 136 pounds or thereabouts. Her limit is 139 pounds and "when the indicator gets up there, I get panicky. I used to weight 145 pounds, but one day I got a good look at myself in the mirror and decided to stop that."

With a glint of humor she admits that she is forever starting some exercise program, always with great enthusiasm, then slowly abandoning it. Once she took up Yogi exercises "but couldn't possibly do all those bends and twists." If you have seen some of the pretzel bends of these exercises you can understand that! But at least, she tried. More recently, she and the whole cast of the company on tour took up defense calisthenics and did them faithfully every day. As steady exercise, she relies on walking. She gets in at least one good walk a day. That is a simple program. But it's a good one.

CORNELIA OTIS SKINNER

Zest for Living

"I believe the greatest single factor in a woman's personality is a zest for living—that is contagious and it gives people around her a lift. It's something like charm. Someone said that if a woman has it, nothing else matters, and if she hasn't, nothing matters."

What are her recommendations to the average woman for beauty? They will surprise you! "I'd start a crusade to make them wash those round spots of rouge off their cheeks and to have every woman after 35 use less make-up. I don't believe men object to cosmetics—only to the way they are applied. I would also try to get women to throw away their glasses, at least in public. If they do have to wear them, I favor the obvious shell-rimmed kind. Of course, my doctor says I am getting 'trombone eyes' from holding books far enough away to see to read."

Take it or leave it, there's advice from an outstanding actress and humorist. And even though you disagree with her views, you'll admit they are interesting.

Patchwork Skirt For Teenage Girl

Out of the rag bag comes colorful patchwork skirt for the teen age girl. She's ripe for fads and frills, and loves anything that seems a little crazy to the grown up at first thought. The truth is that sometimes her fads are practical too. Witness last year's broomstick skirt which required no ironing. This year her yen will be for a dirndl skirt made of the remnants of last year's cotton dresses.

Trouser Complications

QUERY—Now that we men have been put into cuffless trousers, where should the trouser legs break? Is there any regulation as a guide, or is there no longer to be such a thing as a "break" in men's trousers?

ANSWER—Although cuffs have been removed from men's trousers, it is still smart for them to drape to the shoe tops—with or without a break, according to personal preference. By no means should they be short enough to show socks, or long enough to look sloppy. On the average fellow, however, WPB restrictions on trouser lengths will probably prevent this danger.

Jane Driscoll

If trousers are the proper length with a cuff, it is advised that they be made one-half inch longer in back with the removal of the cuff. Thus, a trouser that measured 31 inches with a cuff, should still measure 31 inches in front upon removing the cuff and 31½ inches in back. This assures additional weight so the cuff will not flop about.

Post-War Buying

QUERY—I shall soon be called into the service, but want to buy a new suit to wear until that time. What type would you suggest that could be worn now and later when I again return to civilian life?

ANSWER—The buyer for a men's shop suggests that a conventional suit, such as flannel in a solid gray, chalk stripe or royal blue, a tweed suit or Shetland would be wearable now and several years hence. He pointed out that this type of suit has been in style for years and would continue to be made. Since men are still wearing single or double breasted models, according to WPB orders, there is no chance of either type of coat becoming antiquated. The freakish styles are gradually being eliminated by WPB rulings and these are also the styles to shy away from, if the suit is to be good five years from now.

The fact that trouser cuffs are cut off of the new suits need not concern a man who expects to wear his suit after the war. Formerly when cuffs were the style, less than an inch was turned up underneath. Now about 2 inches is turned up to give weight to the trousers. With that amount it will be possible to make a French cuff later on.

Good Form in Uniforms

QUERY—When an enlisted fellow comes into town is it permissible for him to wear sports clothes, or must he wear his uniform at all times?

ANSWER—An enlisted man in the Army or Navy must wear his uniform at all times. There is no exception made for sport clothes, except in attire worn for athletic events. An officer in the Army or Navy must also wear his uniform outdoors at all times, except when he wears athletic sports clothing during participation in active sports. Inside he must also wear his uniform when two persons or more are present.

Miss Driscoll will be glad to help you with your personal clothes problems. Write her in care of this paper.

Vanity Tables Made of Boxes

DON'T neglect your bedroom! There are still lovely cotton fabrics and there are still wooden boxes, so combine them to make this delightful vanity—and make a matching bedspread, too.

For the popular Federal or Early American style bedroom, choose a creamy percale or chintz, flowered in soft violets, green and pinks. For a modern room—dashing stripes.

Just a few licks are needed for the vanity table itself. Sandpaper rough places on the outside of your two crates and paint or stain; paper or paint the inside. Screw on boards for top.

A nicely full skirt will measure 1½ times the distance round front and sides of table—but a beautifully ruffly skirt will be double the distance.

Wash Summer Clothes Properly To Aid Budget, Save Fabrics

By Martha Ellyn
The Post Household Editor

SUDSABLE fashions were never smarter, so no matter what happens to cleaning fluids or your budget, you can keep up your morale with clothes impeccably fresh. But you can't toss lovely ginghams, piques, rayons, seersuckers, voiles and other washables into the tub along with sheets and overalls. Sudsable doesn't mean scrubable!

Miss Silverthorne

To learn all the newest wrinkles about washing summer apparel, I consulted Miss Kathryn Silverthorne, fashionist and washability expert, Lever Brothers, who gave advice to shoppers this week at a local store. As commentator at a fashion show given by the store, she showed the guests that cotton and rayon dresses could retain their original beauty through proper washing.

"To conserve certain dyes for defense, new types are being used in many familiar fabrics," she said. "They are lovely, they are practical, but they are not meant to be boiled or scrubbed. Treat cottons and rayons as you do other fine fabrics, washing them in lukewarm suds with gentle tissue thin soap flakes.

Need Gentle Care

"Delicate fabrics need the same gentle care you give silk. Hot water and strong soaps may easily harm them. Always test the temperature of the water with the back of the wrist to be sure it is only lukewarm. Then use plenty of mild, soap flakes and rinse several times in lukewarm water. For especially soiled places, such as the back of the neck or accidental spots, work a very few flakes in with your fingertips or a soft cloth, but never, never rub with a cake of soap.

"Rayons are temporarily weak in water, so support the weight of the garment with your hand and squeeze the suds through it gently—no wringing. After rinsing, remove excess moisture by rolling in a Turkish towel, remove the garment from towel immediately, then iron with an almost cool iron. Some rayons, especially acetates, become shiny if the iron is too hot, so play safe and turn the temperature control down as far as it will go."

Tumbler Test

Miss Silverthorne advises that before washing any fabric for the first time, a tumbler test be made for color-fastness by squeezing a sample of the garment in lukewarm water for several minutes. If the color is safe in water, it will be safe in the suds.

Here are her rules for laundering washables in lukewarm or cool water with mild soap flakes:

Hosiery—Silk, nylon or cotton. Wash after each wearing. Turn inside out, squeeze rich suds through hose. Don't use hot water, don't rub. Rinse thoroughly in lukewarm water; roll in Turkish towel; knead out excess moisture. Unroll at once, ease to shape. Dry indoors, hanging by garter band, or over rod or line—never on radiator.

Lingerie—Wash after each wearing. Turn wrongside out. Don't rub, squeeze lukewarm suds through fabric. Rinse as for hosiery. Ease to shape.

Foundation garments—Turn inside out. Dip up and down in extra-rich lukewarm suds. Work dry soap flakes into stubborn spots with soft face cloth. Rinse as for lingerie and ease to shape. Roll in Turkish towel. Unroll immediately and hang over line away from direct heat. Leave garters unfastened. Don't iron elastic sections.

Gloves—Leather. Be sure gloves are marked "washable." Wash in cool rich suds wit gloves on hands. Chamois and doeskin OFF hands. Roll gloves from wrists, rinse in cool water, finally in fresh light suds. Remove excess moisture with Turkish towel. Puff into shape by blowing into gloves. Dry away from heat. When almost dry, "fingerpress" by gently working leather between fingers.

Gloves—Fabric. Wash fabric gloves off the hands in cool suds. Don't soak. Rinse several times in clear water. Lay flat on Turkish towel, pat out moisture. Ease to shape. Hang to dry. Iron cuffs if desired. Dry knitted gloves flat or hang evenly over a line.

Cottons and Linens—Test for color-fastness. Take measurements. Turn wrongside out. Squeeze lukewarm suds through fabric. Don't soak or rub. Rinse thoroughly in lukewarm water. Roll in Turkish towel. Knead out moisture. Unroll at once. Dry colors in shade, press while slightly damp with warm iron. Iron dark colors on wrong side.

Rayons—Wash and rinse as for cottons and linens. Ease to shape. Dry knitted rayons flat or evenly over line. Press on wrong side when dry, or almost dry, with barely warm iron. Rayons should be partly dry before easing to shape.

Costa Rican Minister, Wife Entertain at Reception

By Elizabeth Henney

Washington paid tribute yesterday to the little country of Costa Rica, (first to declare war against Japan during the bombing of Pearl Harbor) at the reception given by the new Minister of Costa Rica and Senora de Fernandez. The event, honoring the Minister of Finance of Costa Rica Carlos Escalante, who has been visiting in Washington for several days, took place at the Carlton Hotel, durng the dusk to dark hours of 6 to 8 o'clock.

State Department, official and Latin American diplomatic socialites comprised the guest list for the most part, and as one guest expressed it, "It's one of the most delightful parties Washington has seen in many a day, because for once there is room to move about."

Receiving at the door of the Carlton Room were the guest of honor, the Minister of Costa Rica and Senora de Fernandez, and the Fernandez' daughter, Senorita Leda Fernandez. Senora de Fernandez was gowned in floor length black crepe, fashioned with a peplum beaded in jet. With it she wore a corsage of gardenias. Senorita Leda Fernandez wore also a floor length, peplumed frock of fire-engine red lace.

Inside the Carlton Room guests found tables loaded with tea-time dainties, substantial supper fare, tea, coffee, rum punch and Scotch and soda. Arranged to run the entire length of the room, the tables were easily accessible to all. Attracting considerable attention and comment was the patriotic theme of the floral decorations, red and white carnations and blue iris, the colors of Costa Rica as well as the United States. Another center of attention was the gurgling fountain of rum punch, which reminded one of the fountains of Versailles.

Warren Lee Piersons Among Early Arrivals

Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Vice President, was one of the early arrivals, and made the rounds. Wearing a wool frock of olive green with a matching hat, she topped the costume with a short sable jacket.

Mrs. Phillip Bonsal, costumed in beige with a beanie hat to match, was among the early arrivals as were the President of the Export-Import Bank Warren Lee Pierson and Mrs. Pierson. The latter, chirpily attired in a spring suit, had pinned to her salt-and-pepper plaid sailor hat a gay cluster of simulated tropical fruit. She matched it with a similar cluster pinned to the lapel of her suit.

Mrs. Thomas Burke, center of a gay group, was feeling completely overwhelmed at the compliment of a friend, who said she was looking lovelier every day. "It's the first time since we've been in Washington," said Mrs. Burke, "that anyone has complimented me. The very day after we arrived in the Capital a newspaper column reported 'Handsome Thomas Burke of the State Department, and his wife were there,' and that is the way it has been ever since," she added with a twinkle in her dark, lumnious eyes.

Very much the center of attention and the subject of admiring "ohs" and "ahs" from feminine guests was Lieut. Col. Felipe Munilla, Military and Air Attache of the Cuban Embassy. Col. Munilla, who has recently been promoted from major, was turned out in full military regalia and was kept busy explaining the meanings of all the magnificent decorations on his uniform.

Mme. Escalante, Daughter Look Like Sisters

Looking just like twins as they made their entrance were Senora de Escalante, wife of the Venezuelan Ambassador, and her daughter, Mrs. Kempel Fronius. Both wore small veiled hats of clusters of violets and silver fox capes over their dark frocks. Mrs. Sumner Welles and Mrs. Adolf Berle, the latter in a tweedy outfit, were among other representatives of the State Department family. Strikingly handsome Mme. Martins, wife of the Brazilian Ambassador, was gowned in black and set off her costume with a wide-brimmed hat of pastel blue felt.

Still others there were the Minister of Honduras, Dr. Julian R. Caceres; the Minister of Guatemala and Senora de Racinos, the Ecuadorean Ambassador, Capital Colon Eloy Alfaro; Senora de Castillo Najera, wife of the Mexican Ambassador; Mrs. Walter Wyatt, Dr. and Mrs. William O'Donnell, Mrs. Barnet Nover, Col. Winant Johnson, Dr. and Mrs. Charles McEnerney, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Morris, Miss Luisa Teetz and her fiance, Harold Miner, and many more.

Helen Collins Is Wed to Lieut. Wheeler

A number of Washington friends of Miss Helen Eugene Collins and Lieut. Lester Brown Wheeler, U. S. N. R., went down to Warrenton, Va., last evening to be present when the couple were married at a quiet ceremony at the home of the Rev. D. M. Brown.

White spring flowers and ferns were used throughout the house. The Rev. Mr. Brown, formerly of Cumberland, Md., and an old friend of the bride's family, read the vows at 8 o'clock.

The bride, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Elverson Collins, of Washington and Cumberland, wore a powder blue street dress with matching lace trimming its sweetheart neckline and pleated apron which draped the full length of the skirt. Her hat was blue flowers with a matching veil, and she wore a corsage of gardenias and liles of the valley.

Historic Homes In Georgetown To Be Shown

In the days when aristocratic old Georgetown looked down condescendingly on crude and muddy Washington, St. John's Episcopal Church on O Street was the fashionable place of worship. The ground for the church was given by the Deakin family in 1796, but the church was not built until some years later. Thomas Jefferson was a subscriber to the building fund and both Francis Scott Key and his uncle, Philip Barton Key, were vestrymen.

Back in 1811, according to an old writer, the church "was thronged to an overflow with all who were most elevated in station and wealth . . . the street before the church filled with glittering vehicles and liveried servants."

This historic church is sponsoring the tour of old Georgetown houses this coming Friday and Saturday afternoons, April 17 and 18, when ten of Georgetown's beautiful houses will be shown each day, in addition to the church with the monuments of historic interest, the epitaph of the first rector, written by Francis Scott Key and the great stone in the churchyard with the name of Ninian Beall, father of Georgetown.

Mrs. William B. Kerkman, jr., chairman of the tour committee, has arranged for hostesses in each house to point out to visitors the historic treasures and architectural beauties.

The complete list of houses to be shown will be announced by Mrs. Kerkman later in the week. The hours have been set from 2 to 6:30 each day in order to accommodate visitors, many of whom may be unable to go on the tour until after office hours.

Tickets will be available at all leading hotels, at the A. A. A., the Keystone Automobile Club, Francis Scott Key Bookshop in Georgetown, or at any of the houses listed.

Women of Venezuela Banding Together in Groups to Combat Propaganda of Axis Powers, Reports Senora de Valentine

WAR IS MAKING the women in Venezuela club conscious. Never the "joining kind," they are now banding together in groups or clubs to oppose and defeat Axis propaganda, according to Senora Maria Jose de Valentine, president of the United Women of the Americas.

Senora de Valentine

"Women in my country are so furious with the Axis powers," she said, "that we think it is time to stop talking and to act. And we're getting ready to do our part."

Senora de Valentine came to Washington Thursday on the Good Will Commission of her organization, which has headquarters in New York. The commission came for the purpose of presenting victory emblems to Mrs. Roosevelt, D. Leo S. Rowe of the Pan American Union, the Inter-American Commission of Women and the Latin American diplomats.

The idea of the victory emblem originated with pretty Senora de Valentine, who designed it herself and saw to it that the pins were completed. The emblem of Victory consists of the American Continent resting on a large "V" inscribed "All America United for Victory," with a color scheme of gold, white and blue on silver and enamel.

By establishing a solid base of firm and sincere inter-American fraternity, Venezuelan-born Senora de Valentine, who married a North American, thinks that all Axis influence can be routed in the Latin-American countries.

Interested in obtaining more freedom and equal rights for women in her country, the slim, chic senora is now more concerned with winning the war. "But," she explained in an interview Thursday when cornered at Miss Minerva Bernardino's tea, "I do hope the North American women will go to Venezuela to encourage our women to use the privileges and rights that they now have but do not exercise."

Also at Miss Bernardino's tea, which she gave in honor of the group on the Good Will Commission of the United Women of the Americas, were a number of diplomatic wives and club women. To mention a few of those seen—Senora Elena de Castro, wife of the Minister of El Salvador; also, Miss Julia McLean of the Pan American Union and handsome Mrs. Marion Smith Davis, who is definitely Pan-American minded.

Mme. Chautemps Guest Artist

MME. CAMILLE CHAUTEMPS, wife of the former French Premier, and widely known in European musical circles, will be a guest artist at the National League of American Pen Women's regional art exhibit tomorrow at the Willard Hotel. She will appear during the dinner for league members and their guests. Clarke Paulsen, baritone soloist, will sing.

Mary Ivonne Axelson, youthful radio star and screen actress (by special request), will repeat the "Buy a Bond" reading that she gave at a previous Pen League tea Wednesday. Her dramatic appeal to buy a bond will be made to stimulate the sale of war bonds. The sale is to be conducted in collaboration with the Treasury Department, with Mrs. Nathan Hurwitz, a Treasury volunteer, in charge of bond sales.

Pan American Day Dance

THE MINISTER of El Salvador, Dr. Don Hector David Castro, and the Minister of Honduras, Dr. Don Julian R. Caceres, will be guests of honor at the Pan-American Day dance to be held by the Americas Society tomorrow evening at 9 o'clock in the ballroom of the American Legion Club, 2437 Fifteenth Street. The dance will feature the popular New York orchestra leader, Velasquez, and his rumba band.

U. W. O. Ready for Action

READY FOR action. That's the way Mrs. Curtis Shears, president of the United Women's Organizations of the District of Columbia, describes her group. And a big group it is—approximately 50,000 women strong made up of Democrats, Republicans, D. A. R.'s, Catholics, Protestants, Jews and representatives from the Girl Scouts, the C. I. O. Women's Auxiliary and many, many more.

Holding its final meeting of the season Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock, at the Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Club, the United Women's Organization will be called upon to indorse and to participate in two specific war measures. These are, to give 100 per cent participation and indorsement to the Women Division Defense Saving Committee's work, of which Mrs. Wilson Compton is head, and to give 100 per cent cooperation to the salvaging committee of the War Production Board.

Mrs. Curtis Shears

"Our organization," said Mrs. Shears, who organized the groups in May, 1941, "has a tremendous potential value to the Government in the war effort if it come be utilized. So far we haven't had an opportunity to throw our whole potential influence into the war effort."

The only chance that the District United Women's organization has had to function in a large way, she pointed out, is the setting up of an inter-communication system among the organized women's groups and Col. Bolles office in Civilian Defense. All bulletins issued by the OCD were announced and read at meetings of individual clubs.

Chief purpose in forming the United Women's Organizations of the District was to refute subversive propaganda of disunity in the United States, according to Mrs. Shears.

The mere achievement of bringing together so many women's groups that are so vastly diversified in interest is sure proof that the women of the District are uited to help win the war, in Mrs. Shears opinion.

Mrs. Shears, president of the Women's National Democratic Club, has serving with her Mrs. Dolly Curtis Gann, president of the National League of Republican Women. The former is president of the United Women's organization and the latter vice president.

N. J. Workers Win Pay Rise, Union Security

Copyright by Chicago Sun

The National War Labor Board yesterday ruled that the wage increase asked by employes of the Walker-Turner Co., a New Jersey concern producing war materials, should be fixed with regard to the company's ability to pay and approved a new formula for union security which avoided decision on the closed shop question.

The board's finding was concurred in by its four labor members, despite their dissatisfaction with the union security provision. It was opposed by the employer members with the assertion that it conditioned the right of an individual to work for an employer upon his continued membership in a labor organization.

The union involved in the dispute is the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, a C. I. O. affiliate.

The order was signed by William H. Davis, George W. Taylor Frank P. Graham and Wayne L. Morse, representing the public; Thomas Kenney, R. J. Thomas, George Meany and Martin P. Durkin, representing labor, and Roger D. Lapham, George H. Mead, R. R. Deupree and E. J. McMillan, representing employers.

Security Formula

By the union security formula approved in the board's order all members of the local union in good standing as of November 27, 1941, or who have since become members, are to remain members in good standing, as a condition of continued employment with the company.

The union had demanded a general wage increase of 10 cents per hour, a union shop and increases in the starting rate from 40 to 65 cents an hour for men and from 37 to 55 cents an hour for women.

An investigating panel found that the company's wages were below standard, but took into consideration its contention that a price-freezing order of OPA would prevent adjustment of income to the increase demanded.

The board's order approved an hourly wage increase of 8 per cent and an increase in the starting wage rate from 40 to 52 cents for men, with an additional 6 cents within three months, and from 37 to 40 cents for women with an additional 5 cents within three months.

Won't Use Coercion

In accepting the union security formula, the union agreed not to intimidate or coerce any Walker-Turner employes into joining. In originally demanding a union shop, it contended that the company was antagonistic to the union. The investigating panel asserted that the company's attitude toward organized labor in general and the Plainfield C. I. O. local in particular was "certainly not one of cooperation or helpfulness."

Under the formula, while employes cannot be forced to join the union, those who do must remain in good standing for duration of the contract with the company.

Chairman Davis said the union had been losing its membership and that 25 per cent of the union members were delinquent in their dues because of a feeling that the leaders were unable to do anything to aid the membership.

Girls at Home Swear to Be True To Fighting Men

St. Paul, April 10 (AP).—The sweetheart of the first Yank to land in Ireland with the A. E. F. of World War II, 20-year-old Iola Christensen, Hutchinson, Minn., blonde, laid campaign plans today for the girls who have sworn to remain true to their Army boy friends.

Plump Miss Christensen was drafted as national commander of the "Always in My Heart Club," an organization with members now in 23 cities, each member pledged to keep faith with her fighting sweetheart.

Iola wasted no time in telling the girls what their objective should be. "Everything will be kept status quo until the boys come home," she remarked. Any girl who promises to be true to her soldier is eligible for enrollment. While they may go out on dates, the serious side is out for the duration, Iola said.

Tires for All

Butyl Rubber Seen as End To Shortage

Butyl rubber, the synthetic developed by American chemists from petroleum by-products, will end the rubber shortage, Vice President Henry A. Wallace predicted yesterday.

"The butyl process is fast," he said. "There need be no waiting around to build factories."

He spoke as a committee was appointed from the Petroleum Industry War Council to bring pressure for 300,000 tons of synthetic rubber above the Government's present program of 700,000 tons, the additional tonnage to be for civilian use.

W. R. Boyd, jr., chairman of the council, announced selection of the committee in line with a resolution adopted at the council's meeting earlier in the week.

Boyd said that "to speed action, the committee is authorized to make an immediate study of the problem, especially that of butyl rubber, and it is directed by the chairman to develop and prosecute without any further action by the council a program designed to obtain synthetic rubber for essential civilian use."

Wallace said he has a particular interest in the synthetic product because chemists in the Bureau of Agricultural Chemistry were largely responsible for the development of butyl. Experiments in the polymerization of isobutylene and butadiene, which resulted in butyl rubber were made while Wallace was Secretary of Agriculture.

The Vice President said he was "surprised" at the lack of interest displayed in butyl rubber—both in Government circles and by the public. He said he has known of butyl's possibilities for more than three years and that in recent weeks he has arranged conferences between War Production Board Chairman Donald Nelson, Dr. Henry G. Knight, chief of the Bureau of Agricultural Engineering, and other officials and chemists interested in finding an adequate rubber supply.

Security Rights Of Soldiers Safe, McNutt Declares

New York, April 10 (AP).—Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security Administrator, said tonight that means for protecting the Social Security benefit rights of men in the armed forces had been considered and "they shall be protected in full."

He spoke before the fifteenth national conference of the American Association for Social Security.

"Every worker and every worker's family must be protected, regardless of where he works," he said.

Reviewing the status of Social Security, McNutt told the association that old-age rolls did not include nearly so many beneficiaries as actuaries predicted a few years ago—a proof, he added, of the conservatism upon which the system was built.

Walter D. Fuller, chairman of the board of the National Association of Manufacturers and president of the Curtis Publishing Company, declared that "we can save America from social insecurity only by more and more production" to win the war.

Torpedo, Fired By Accident, Hits Ship at Newport

Newport, R. I., April 10 (AP).—A torpedo ran wild for almost six miles in Narragansett Bay, struck and damaged the 4070-ton Navy cargo vessel Capella and injured eight of her crew, some seriously, the Navy disclosed today.

The accident occurred last evening, when a short circuit in a safety switch caused the accidental discharge of the torpedo from a motor torpedo boat, which was engaged in practice exercises.

The explosion of the underwater missile against the side of the Capella shook houses on shore.

Navy tugs assisted the damaged vessel to shoal water as she was settling by the stern. The injured men were taken to the Newport Naval Hospital by motor torpedo boats.

Pension Plan Tax Opposed At Hearing

By Samuel W. Bell

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

The House Ways and Means Committee virtually agreed yesterday to end public hearings on the tax bill next week, its members showing plainly they hope to write a simon-pure revenue measure. That the committee is preparing to sidetrack a series of tax "reforms" recommended by the Treasury was made apparent by their manner in reacting favorably yesterday to testimony opposing the Treasury's proposals to eliminate exemption for pension trusts.

More than a score of witnesses, representing both industry and labor, appeared before the committee today opposing the taxing of private company pension plans and trusts. The majority of them from New York, New Jersey and New England, spoke in behalf of the pension plan of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. in operation since 1913.

Pensions Threatened

Keith S. McHugh, vice president of the A. T. & T., said the Treasury recommendations would make it necessary for A. T. & T. to "terminate" a pension plan applying to 380,000 employes.

James L. O'Neill, vice president of the Guaranty Trust Co. of New York, said the Treasury proposals would "jeopardize the continuance of our bona fide retirement plan."

Randolph E. Paul, tax adviser to the Secretary of the Treasury, testified that it was not the Treasury's intention to "impair or destroy" pension trusts already established. He said the proposals were "all in the interests" of employes.

Jeremiah J. Coughlan, Boston, president of the International Brotherhood of Telephone Workers, an independent labor organization, said his group had no objection to the Treasury proposals if they did not lead to termination of A. T. & T.'s pension plan, while Miss Mary E. McGarrahan, Boston, vice president of the New England Federation of Telephone Workers, said her organization also opposed the Treasury's recommendations because of fears of liquidation of the plan.

Others Join Opposition

Frederick A. Thomas, vice president of Central Hanover Bank and Trust Company of New York, and Henry B. Bryan, executive vice president of the Philadelphia Electric Company, joined in the opposition on what one member of the committee said "must be pension day."

H. Walker Forster, of Towers, Perrin, Forster and Crosby, Philadelphia, who said his firm had acted as consultant on pension plans, testified that he believed the Treasury proposals were intended to "impose certain social reform philosophies" in a revenue-raising measure.

He said he doubted whether many pensions trusts were intended as tax-avoidance systems or that much revenue was lost through them.

"I am certain," he added, "that in an attempt to curb a few border-line trusts we should not jeopardize bona fide, legitimate plans."

Paul E. Griffith of Chicago, president of the National Federation of Telephone Workers, expressed his organization's opposition to the Treasury proposals. He said his group feared the termination of A. T. & T.'s retirement plan.

Rep. Roy O. Woodruff told Griffith that he felt he could say there would be no changes in the present law.

'Washed Up'

MGM Done With Ayres, Schenck Says

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., April 10.—Nicholas Schenck, president of the film company which employed Lew Ayres, said today the actor is "washed up with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer" as a result of his refusal to bear arms in defense of the United States.

Schenck said that in the days before Ayres left for a conscientious objectors' camp he pleaded with the actor "for hours at a time" to abandon his views against war.

"Under no circumstances," said Schenck, "do I wish to be put in the position of defending conscientious objectors who cannot find it in their hearts to fight for their country.

"I sympathize with the man, but not with his views. It's some sort of phobia with him—this not wanting to take life."

Schenck said Ayres' aversion to killing was so strong that for years he did not eat meat or fish.

Nags Head, N. C., April 10 (U.P.).—The crew of an airplane on anti-submarine duty off the coast here, may not have sunk any U-boats, but a 51-foot-long whale which was beached here today bore the marks of the crew's accuracy.

The crew dropped a depth bomb which scored a direct hit just behind the dorsal fin of the huge mammal.

U.S. Seeks to Free Five Men Held by Japs in Indo-China

The State Department last night revealed it is seeking by diplomatic proceedings to bring about release of five American soldiers held by the Japanese in French Indo-China.

Admiral William D. Leahy, American Ambassador to Vichy, was instructed to urge the French government to continue its efforts to persuade the Japanese to return the soldiers to custody of French authorities.

Arrest of the Americans, who were swept to sea in a 45-foot launch while transporting supplies and ammunition from Bataan to Corregidor and landed in Indo-China, was reported Thursday by the Office of Facts and Figures, on the basis of an official Tokyo radio broadcast recorded here.

OFF announced that the broadcast stated the men were "handed over" to the Japanese by French authorities.

In reporting the matter to the State Department, however, the French foreign office contended that local French authorities attempted to keep the Americans from falling into Japanese hands and have made numerous demands upon the Japanese to obtain release of the Americans to French jurisdiction.

Najera Sees Pan-Americanism As Guide for Postwar World

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, April 10.—Dr. Francisco Castillo Najera, Mexican Ambassador, speaking here today, pictured Pan Americanism, which has substituted "the force of law" for the "law of force," as the forerunner of a post-war creed guaranteeing the peace by the "will of nations."

First, he told the Acadamy of Political and Social Sciences, the war must be won and "will be won."

"To military and industrial mobilization must be added spiritual mobilization," he continued, so that free men of the world will comprehend the magnitude of their peril.

The envoy, who sat on the League of Nations Council, spoke on the subject of "Organization of the Peace" and sketched an outline of a democratic world in which nations voluntarily joined together to preserve peace.

Danger Bolsters Solidarity

The solidarity of the American republics, he said, "strengthened by the danger that threatens them all, their cohesion and interdependence based on mutual respect, will contribute in the hour of triumph toward the future institution of a world concert."

Democracy, he found, is the common denominator of Pan Americanism and "our nations are juridically equal and for the 'law of force' we have substituted the 'force of law.'"

He declared that "continental unification," dream of Europe, was a reality in America, adding:

"Perhaps the next step upward toward this lofty goal will be the United States of the World."

Sees End of Aggression Peril

"The full weight of the influence of the Americas must, and I feel confident it will, be thrown toward the establishment of an international system which will be ruled by law and from which the danger of aggression will be eliminated," Dr. Rowe said. "Thus will the New World perform its greatest service to the old. . ."

Dr. Rowe, president of the academy from 1902 to 1930, listed these four fundamental American contributions:

That no matter how difficult or delicate the controversy may be, it can be settled peacefully.

The principle that any menace to one of the American republics is a menace to all.

Application of the principle of economic and financial cooperation.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Hamilton Now Chief Of Intelligence Unit

Fowler Hamilton, who worked up the case against Standard Oil and other American industries having tie-ups with German trusts, has quit Thurman Arnold's Anti-Trust Division to become chief of the new Intelligence Division at the Board of Economic Warfare. He has arranged to use his old staff at Justice for BEW work to prevent a duplication of effort. Creation, however, of the Intelligence Division is merely one of the moves made in the reorganization of BEW.

Two assistant directors were appointed, Col. Roy B. Lord, who is to have charge of export control, requirements and allocations, and Morris Rosenthal, a former New York exporter, who was placed in charge of the geographic sections and the intelligence division. The policy committee, office of operations, export price ceiling committee were among the outfits abolished. J. C. Foulis, former fiscal officer of Surplus Marketing, was appointed assistant to Col. Lord.

Other appointments: Dewey Anderson, executive officer of the old TNEC committee, will do economic work for the board; Col. Francis R. Kerr remains as chief of the export control branch; J. A. Panuch, formerly with SEC, is the new chief of the requirements branch; E. Kelso Peck will head up the allocations branch; George Reynolds, another who worked with Perkins at Surplus Marketing, was appointed acting chief of the Raw Materials Division, and Jack Fischer, former Washington newspaper man, will direct the work of the European and African Division.

Civil Service Commission also has been reorganizing. It has set up an Applicant Supply Section within its examining division to coordinate the work of its many recruiting sections. Oliver Short, personnel director of Commerce, will head up the new unit. Mary Mathis, formerly personnel director of Farm Credit, will assist him. Under the new section will be the Interdepartmental Placement Service, which has in its voluminous files pertinent information on nearly a million Federal workers: the National Emergency List, which clears applicants for war jobs who haven't qualified through Civil Service tests, and a similar war list of Federal employes in non-war jobs as well as other lists.

Scientists, Specialists Also on Roster

Also the National Roster of Scientific and Specialized Personnel, which lists the names of more than half a million scientists and technical people; the War Transfer Unit, set up several weeks ago to transfer Federal workers to war work; the Decentralization Unit, created to assist employes of decentralized agencies to get other jobs here and the special interview unit which was set up to conduct interviews on the spot with people who apply for jobs that pay $2000 and more.

William H. Kushnick has been appointed personnel director of the War Department to succeed Heath Onthank who is now Lieut. Col. Onthank. The division of training headed by Kushnick has been merged with the personnel division. James Dodson, personnel director and business manager of Wage and Hour, yesterday was sworn in as chief clerk of the Labor Department. He entered the department as a $500 messenger in 1918. Dodson succeeds Samuel Gompers, son of the late great labor leader.

War Production Board has quietly put the squeeze on many Federal agencies including the harassed National Youth Administration, Civilian Conservation Corps, and Farm Security Administration. These New Deal agencies and many others can't get priorities on most equipment and supplies. They simply must do without if they can't get a magic priority number. Incidentally, the President soon will ask Congress for funds to operate NYA and CCC during the new fiscal year that starts July 1. No recommendation was carried in the President's annual budget message to Congress. It's reported the President, in his message, will asked Congress to merge the war functions of the two agencies and scrap their peace-time functions.

Better Luck Next Time

Palmyra, Mo.—George Duame, station master at the railroad depot, was alone working at his Morse key, when he heard a strange noise. Fearing a robbery attempt, he hid the money and doused the lights, all the while sending a frantic S O S to the dispatcher 100 miles away. Finally he hurled himself at the door, desperately, he sank his teeth into the antagonist's neck—a goat.

Built to Bite the Japs

Boston, April 10 (AP).—Teeth kept Charlie Donehue, 33, from enlisting in the Navy yesterday—he had too many.

A medical officer told him that he had four more molars than normal.

"I'll take care of that," replied Charlie.

D. C. Traffic Death Toll Jumps to 37

Boy Killed as His Bicycle Hits Truck; Motorist Dies Of Crash Injuries

D. C. traffic deaths this year.... 37
Deaths this date last year.... 24
District total last year.... 95

The Capital's traffic death toll jumped to 36 for the year yesterday when a bicyclist was killed by a truck, a pedestrian was fatally injured by a street car, a motorist succumbed to crash injuries and a coroner's jury decided that the death of a streetcar motorman was due to a traffic accident.

Meanwhile, three other persons were critically injured in accidents here yesterday.

The latest victim of Washington traffic was Emmett Bryan, Negro, 15, of 150 Rhode Island Avenue Northwest, who was killed instantly when he rode his bicycle into the side of a District trash truck in the first block of R Street Northwest at 2 p. m. yesterday.

Emmett, according to police, rode from an alley without stopping and was knocked under the wheels of the heavy refuse conveyor. The truck was driven by Roy Fewell, Negro, 33, of 1135 Sixth Street Northwest, and was westbound on R Street.

Hand Brake Declared Poor

Brakes on the truck were tested by members of the Accident Investigation Unit and it was found the hand brakes were bad. The driver will appear before a coroner's jury next week.

Emmett's death was recorded as the thirty-sixth because a short time before a coroner's jury had decided that the death Wednesday of Franklin Dungan, 35, of 126 E Street Southeast, a streetcar motorman, was attributable to traffic and held another motorman responsible.

Dungan died at Casualty Hospital of injuries received Monday when he was pinned between two streetcars in the barn at Seventh and L Streets Southeast.

Taylor R. Anthony, 25, of 641 Park Road Northwest, was ordered held for Police Court action under the Negligent Homicide Act in connection with the death.

Operator Held Negligent

It was testified that Anthony was operating a streetcar west on L Street and that the car swung left into the barn when it was supposed to pass. Anthony's trolley struck one that was half in and half out of the barn, shoving it into a third car. The latter crashed into a fourth one, crushing Dungan between them.

The jury decided Anthony was negligent in that he drove into the switch without observing its position.

George A. Stone, 35, of New York City, succumbed at Casualty Hospital shortly after midnight yesterday of injuries received when an automobile in which he was riding crashed into a tree at Fifteenth Street and Benning Road Northeast, April 10.

He was riding, according to police, with Dorothy Simmons, 35, of 2434 Sixteenth Street Northwest. She also was injured and is still confined at Casualty.

Man Hit by Street Car

A man tentatively identified as Frank Clarke, 30, address unknown, suffered a fractured skull last night when struck by a streetcar in the 1300 block Seventh Street Northwest. He died several hours later at Emergency Hospital. The motorman, police said, was Benjamin F. Hawkins, of 4513 Arkansas Avenue Northwest.

Injured when a bus he was driving collided with a Standard Oil Co. gasoline tank truck, Joseph L. Bean, 25, of 213 Nineteenth Street Southeast, was in critical condition at Casualty Hospital last night.

He suffered a fractured skull and both his left leg and left arm were broken and had to be pried from the wreckage.

The tank on the truck was pierced, gasoline spreading over the intersection, and firemen were called as a precaution against the fuel igniting.

The bus was traveling east on M Street and the truck, operated by Albert S. Lawrence, 49, of 122 Eleventh Street Southeast, was going north on First.

No charges were placed against the drivers and police said the case would be presented to the corporation counsel later.

Mrs. Annie Brown, 51, Negro, of 1435 Corcoran Street Northwest, was also critically hurt when hit by an auto at New York and New Jersey Avenues Northwest. She was taken to Freedmen's Hospital with a compound fracture of the left leg and severe head injuries. Police listed John Bowen, 36, of Capitol Heights, Md., as the driver and charged him with reckless driving.

At a second inquest yesterday, Andrew B. Johnson, Negro, 44, of Capital Heights, Md., was exonerated in the death of Shirley Ann Everett, Negro, 2, of 2004 Rosedale Street Northwest, who was killed in front of her home Wednesday.

The jury decided the death was accidental after it was testified the child was playing in the street.

House Group Inspects Institutions

Improvement Noted At Blue Plains As Committeemen Make Study Tour

Lest the millions of dollars they appropriate each year for the District become only figures on paper to them, a delegation of the House Appropriation subcommittee on the District yesterday toured several local institutions to see at first hand how the taxpayers' money is being spent.

Accompanied by the District Commissioners and local budget officials, they visited chiefly institutions for the underprivileged, preliminary to starting hearings next week on the 1943 District budget of 55 million dollars.

Representative Mahon (Democrat), of Texas, the subcommittee chairman, said at the conclusion of the trip that he had been most impressed by improvements made at the Home for the Aged and Infirm at Blue Plains.

Improvements Needed

Both he and Representative Stefan (Republican), of Nebraska, ranking minority subcommittee member, agreed, however, that there is still need of further improvements.

As the group inspected everything at the Home from infirmary to kitchens, Superintendent Otto J. Cass explained that repair work on the buildings has not yet begun. Under the first deficiency appropriation bill approved last February $48,000 was granted the institution for repairs and $45,000 for additional maintenance, besides funds for 31 more employes.

In the infirmary where beds were closely packed, separated in many instances by only about two feet, Cass declared, "There are 47 persons in this one ward. There should be only 35."

Asked what diseases were treated there, he replied, "Everything. It's particularly bad in winter when colds and flu are prevalent. The nurses work under great difficulty."

Kitchens Are Clean

The wards and kitchens were obviously clean, greatly improved over a year ago, Commissioner J. Russell Young remarked.

At the new District Jail the Congressmen were notably surprised at the dimensions and well-finished interior of the building.

"What I can't understand," said Representative Stefan, "is why a lawbreaker should come to such fine surroundings as this and the poor should be shipped down to a place like Blue Plains. It ought to be the other way around."

In the kitchens he paused before an aged prisoner.

"What are you in for?" he asked.

The man looked embarrassed.

"How do you like it?"

"It's all right, sir, until you look out of the window."

The party was conducted through the building by Superintendent of Penal Institutions Ray L. Huff.

Average 1140 Patients Daily

Dr. Edgar A. Bocock, superintendent of Gallinger Hospital, told the group as they toured the institution's wards that the hospital has averaged 1140 patients daily in the course of the past eight months. Of the average 75 persons who enter the municipal hospital daily, seven are found to have tuberculosis, he said.

From the roof of the administration building he pointed out old frame houses built on the grounds during the Civil War where many tubercular patients must be housed because of overcrowding.

The hospital delivers approximately 2500 babies annually, he said, of which about 65 per cent are Negro and 35 per cent white. The group found the reception room for expectant mothers to be a tiny room measuring about 10 by 20 feet. A nurse said that frequently three women will be there at the same time awaiting entrance to the delivery room.

The Congressmen remarked that "something should be done" to increase the obstetrical wards' capacity.

Before concluding the tour McMillan Reservoir and the Kramer School now under construction in Anacostia were viewed.

Accompanying the subcommittee members were Commissioners J. Russell Young, Guy Mason and Charles W. Kutz; Budget Officer Walter Fowler and Deputy Budget Officer William G. Wilding.

Boy's Warning Of Fire Saves Father's Life

If little Frank W. Cockrell, 5, had not wanted another toy to play with yesterday, his father, Frank S. Cockrell, 27, might have been burned to death at 1355 Queen Street Northeast.

Cockrell, a trainman working nights for the Capital Transit Co., was asleep in a basement apartment when Frank entered from a house next door where he was playing, to get another toy. Fire had broken out and the basement was filled with smoke.

Without waiting to arouse his father, the boy ran upstairs and told a maid, Lena Green. She awakened the man and he fled barefooted from the house, but not before his eyebrows and hair had been singed.

The blaze ignited a container of kerosene and spread to the first floor, doing about $800 worth of damage to the building, furniture and personal belongings, it was reported.

Mrs. Leah Cockrell was at work and two other children, Nelson, 3, and Judy, 2, were next door playing at the time.

Exact cause of the fire was not determined by firemen from No. 10 Engine Company, who extinguished the flames, but it is believed it may have originated in a furnace.

Victory Sidelights

Only Emergency Cars to Run During Tuesday Blackout Test

Only emergency vehicles on assignments incident to Tuesday night's blackout test will be permitted to operate during the test, Col. Lemuel Bolles, District defense director, said last night.

These will travel at a speed not to exceed 15 miles an hour and have been cautioned to avoid "any and all sorts of accidents," Col. Bolles said, stressing his hope that the first total blackout test here will be free from not only fatal accidents, such as have occurred in other cities during tests, but also from minor ones, as well.

Several special red emergency stickers have been issued to persons active in the civilian defense services, Col. Bolles said, but not all of these will be good Tuesday night. "The driver must be so identified he can prove he is on definite assignment," the director declared.

Motorists on their way through the area will be stopped at the metropolitan boundaries, according to blackout regulations. Trains and airplanes will operate as usual, but taxicabs to bring passengers to hotels will be stilled for the period, which is not to exceed 30 minutes and will be some time between 9 p. m. and midnight.

The air raid sirens will be sounded for this blackout and the new signal pattern tried out. When it is time for the warden services and citizenry generally to go on the alert, the sirens will start sounding in "fluctuating blasts" that will be of 6 seconds' duration and continue for an over-all period of 2 minutes.

The all-clear signal will be a long, continuous blast of 1 minute and 40 seconds.

A second false air-raid alarm within 24 hours sounded yesterday in the American University Park area, where a short circuit set off an alarm at Janney School, Forty-second and Albemarle Streets Northwest.

Half of $6000 Fund Raised in Friendship

Leonard Tucker, chairman of a committee seeking to raise $6000 for air-raid wardens' equipment in the Friendship Heights civilian defense area, announced last night that half of the goal has been attained at the halfway mark of the four-weeks' drive.

Philatelic Mail To Army Posts Banned

Because the volume of philatelic mail reaching Army postoffices for cancellations showing the official postmark of the units has reached such proportions that it has "seriously interfered" with handling of normal mail for the armed forces, immediate discontinuance of the practice has been ordered by the Postoffice Department.

A notice issued yesterday by the Postoffice Department added: "In order to provide expeditious handling of regular mail to and from our armed forces, and to insure secrecy to military operations, the forwarding of philatelic mail for cancellation to Army postoffices is hereby discontinued, effective immediately. Requests for the postmarking of philatelic covers will be returned to the senders without the desired treatment in the future."

Rescue Squads Need 250 Able-Bodied Men

Two hundred and fifty men physically able to withstand tedious and heavy work under poor conditions are urgently needed in rescue squads being formed for civilian defense service, Deputy Chief Daniel C. Long announced yesterday.

Besides having physical strength, a volunteer for the rescue squad must be prepared to take 30 hours of first-aid training, 18 hours of training in gases and bombs, 6 hours of general instruction, 2 hours of drill, and 10 hours of fire defense. After class work is completed, he must do practice work for two hours a week.

"Obviously the conditions will be hard and personnel of these squads must be able to 'take it,'" Long said, urging willing applicants to come to 2539 Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest right away to enroll.

50 Drivers Inducted Into Transport Service

"No unit of the Washington civilian defense system has greater emergency responsibilities and none will be required to contribute more work hours than the Emergency Transport Service," J. A. Brown, director of the Transport Division of the Office of Civilian Defense, declared last night.

Speaking at the induction ceremonies of 50 specially trained drivers into the District Defense Service at Roosevelt High School, Brown said that the new drivers must regard themselves as being on 24-hour duty for the balance of the emergency.

"There can be no letup for your group—you will be the only dependable connecting link in the entire civilian defense system when all else fails," Brown told the new drivers.

The induction ceremonies marked the close of an 80-hour training period conducted by the A. A. A. for the transport unit. The inductees were required to complete courses in first aid, blackout driving, map reading and automobile repair and maintenance.

Graduate Nurses Urged To Attend Institute

As part of the preparation for war nursing, the Nursing Council on Defense of the District of Columbia yesterday urged all graduate nurses of the city to attend an institute on treatment and nursing care of eye diseases and injuries.

The institute will be held at Episcopal Hospital, Fifteenth and M Streets Northwest, at 8 p. m. April 20 through April 24, Secretary Edith M. Beattie announced.

Jury of Lawyers Will Try Montgomery Assault Case

Preliminary legal sparring out of the way, the stage was set yesterday for the first trial of a case by a jury of lawyers in the history of Montgomery County and probably of Maryland.

Wilson Claggett, Negro, 67, who was found guilty of assault and battery on his daughter, Annie May, 20, last February by Trial Magistrate Hugh M. Frampton in Bethesda Police Court, will be the central figure in what probably will become one of the celebrated cases.

State's Attorney Ben G. Wilkinson and Defense Attorney Bernard T. Welsh, better known in the tennis world as "Barney," yesterday agreed to the trial by a jury of lawyers. They will petition Judge Charles W. Woodward to summon a venire of 20 lawyers from which the 12 good men and true will be selected.

Claggett had noted an appeal following his conviction in the lower court and under Maryland law is entitled to an entirely new trial by jury in the Circuit Court. Maryland law also is unique in that the jury is the judge of the law as well as the fact and for once a jury of lawyers will have a chance to tackle the intricacies of jury room procedure.

The idea was born at a meeting Thursday night when the bar members were aiding selectees to fill out questionnaires at the courthouse in Rockville, Md. As is not unusual, the talk turned to "shop" and one lawyer remarked that a jury of lawyers would not have turned loose a defendant they were discussing. "Barney" Welsh spoke up and said he had a defendant whom he would not fear to try before a jury of lawyers. Judge Woodward put on his best judicial attitude and finally filed the strictly "curbstone opinion" that it would be legal. His ruling was understood to be agreed to by the law tomes and thus was born case of the State of Maryland versus Wilson Claggett versus the Maryland Bar.

Rise in D. C. Realty Levy To Be Studied

House Committee Hopes to Produce 8 to 10 Millions More in Revenue

Legislation to raise the District's real estate tax rates will be considered by the House District fiscal affairs subcommittee when it begins soon a study of Washington's tax structure, Representative Hunter (Democrat), of Ohio, the subcommittee chairman, said yesterday.

At the same time the group will consider a sales levy which has been proposed by the Commissioners to meet an expected local government deficit of 13 million dollars in the new fiscal year beginning July 1.

Representative Hunter emphasized that "all possibilities for raising the necessary money through taxation will be explored."

All Channels to Be Explored

It is believed, however, that Congress will look with more favor on an increase in local real estate taxes than on a sales tax. It has been pointed out that a sales tax would most directly effect the pocketbooks of low-income groups.

The increased real estate tax, proposed by Representative Schulte (Democrat) of Indiana, would not affect property assessed at $7500 or less, whose present rate is $1.75 per $100.

For property assessed at between $7500 and $15,000 the rate would be increased to $2 per $100, and to $2.25 for property over $15,000, under the Schulte plan.

8 to 10 Millions Goal

Between 8 and 10 million dollars additional would be provided the District if the real estate tax were increased, it has been estimated, Representative Hunter said.

Pending action by the House Ways and Means Committee on new Federal tax legislation, no tax measures will be reported out by the District subcommittee, he added, pointing out it would not be wise to impose a District sales tax if a national sales tax were enacted.

Nelson's 67 Earns 1-Stroke Lead in Masters'

Another 68 By Sam Byrd Takes 2d

Runyan, Demaret And Smith Trail By Four Strokes With 140 Totals

By International News Service

National Golf Club, Augusta, Ga., April 10.—Byron Nelson, the long-legged Texan playing out of Toledo, Ohio, stayed hot today in the Masters Golf Championship, and the result went into the record books as he moved in front of the field for the final and decisive rounds to be played tomorrow and Sunday.

Having shot a 68, or four under par, for his opening round on Thursday, Nelson came back today with a 67 for a two-day total of 135, which equalled the two-round tournament record established by Henry Picard in 1936.

Right on his spiked heels came Sam Byrd, the former New York Yankee outfielder, with 68, 68—136, to continue in the midst of the tussle for the crown which has begun to totter on the blond head of big Craig Wood. The defending champion, who also is the Open champion, added a 75 to his opening 72 for a 147 and for a place back in the ruck.

Two-Man Tourney

It was all Nelson and Byrd today. The others who previously had shot good scores fell off, compared with the leaders, and those others who had low scores today were fettered by opening duffer rounds.

Back of Nelson and Byrd after today's firing was over stood Paul Runyan, Jimy Demaret and Horton Smith, all with 140's. Runyan had a 67-73; Demaret a pair of 70's and Smith a 67 and a 73.

For any of the rest to catch the two big leaders—Nelson and Byrd—or even those other three would be something in the nature of a miracle. Next come Jimmy Thomson and Ben Hogan, each with a 143, with the rest still another stroke or more farther behind.

Notables Back

Among the latter were such notables as Bobby Jones with 72, 75—147 Gene Sarazen, 80, 74—154; Bud Ward, the National Amateur champion, 76, 73—149; Sam Snead, 78, 69—147; Henry Pickard, 75, 72—147; Lawson Little, 71, 74—145.

But none of these can be counted now in the final outcome, which must be decided among Nelson, out in front, Byrd in the second spot, and Runyan, Demaret and Smith, next in order.

The champion must be among them unless they all falter and Hogan suddenly gets hotter than he has been.

Nelson remains the man to beat. He was over par on just one hole today, the fifth, and played three birdies and five pars on the rest. He is capable of doing that tomorrow and Sunday, too.

He is a former United States Open, Professional and Masters champion, and one of the toughest competitors in the game today any time he has even the remotest chance. He now has supplanted Hogan and all the rest as the No. 1 man in this tournament.

Gonzaga to Stage Spring Football Drill

First practice of the spring for Gonzaga High's football team has been called for Monday at 3 p. m., with Coach Sam Richards again in charge. The Eagles anticipated a large turnout, including numerous holdovers from last season's excellent club.

Roosevelt May Not See Opener Here

Clark Griffith Hopes President Can Attend, However; Nats Play Phils Here Today

For the first time in his ten years as President of the United States, Franklin D. Roosevelt may not attend the opening game of the major league season at Griffith Stadium.

At least he gave no assurance that he would occupy the Presidential box for Tuesday's inaugural battle between the Nats and the Yankees when Clark Griffith, Washington club owner, yesterday presented him with a gold-plated pass to all 1942 games.

Griffith, who visited the White House in company with National League President Ford Frick, invited Mr. Roosevelt to attend the opener, but the President was noncommital. "I hope he will attend," said Griffith, "but it's up to him."

In previous years at the pass-presentation ceremonies, Mr. Roosevelt always accepted Griffth's invitation to attend the game.

Mrs. Roosevelt was given a handbag as the gift of the major leagues, accompanied by a complimentary pass to all games.

Today at Griffith Stadium, the Nats will make an unofficial bow to Washington fans in an exhibition game with the Phils starting at 3 p. m. A game between the two clubs scheduled for yesterday was canceled on account of weather conditions.

Wilson to Pitch

Big Jack Wilson will take the mound for the Nats against the Phils, making his first Washington appearance since being acquired from the Red Sox last winter in the deal for Ken Chase.

Manager Bucky Harris scheduled no workout for the players yesterday, due to ground conditions. "Also," said Harris, "it was an opportunity for the players to find themselves places to live during the season." The single men are being quartered at the Wardman Park Hotel, but players who have families are still on the hunt for living quarters.

The Nats hold a four-game winning streak over the Phils and today Harris will continue his experiment of playing the veteran Ossie Bluege at second base. On Bluege's playing condition will depend his presence in the opening game line-up. At this point, according to Harris, it is a toss-up whether the Nats' second baseman on opening day will be Bluege or Jimmy Pofahl, converted shortstop.

Croucher Ailing

Harris' second base troubles are being caused by the mysterious sore arm of Frank Croucher, originally assigned to the job. In an effort to hasten the recovery of his ailing arm, Croucher underwent a long examination by the club physician yesterday.

Washington's opening-game pitcher will be Sid Hudson, Harris reiterated yesterday. The last time Hudson faced the Yankees was on the last day of the 1941 season when he won a 1-0 game, allowing only four hits.

Harris has brought back to Washington a surprising squad that won the Grapefruit League championship in spring training with 19 victories in 26 games against major league opposition. Bruce Campbell in right field; Stan Spence in centerfield, Bobby Estalella at third base; Bob Repass at shortstop, and Croucher, when he is able to take over second base, will be new faces in the Washington line-up.

After 30 Years Bowler Finally Beats 1800 Score

Columbus, Ohio, April 10 (AP)—The first 30 years are the hardest, even in bowling, it was attested tonight by slight, bald Frank Carr, 49-year-old bowling proprietor of Fort Wayne, Ind.

Carr appeared yesterday and today in his thirty-first consecutive American Bowling Congress tournament. In the first 29 tournaments he never scored as high as 1800 for nine games. But last year at St. Paul he tossed in an 1873.

Today he spilled 1927 and took over sixth place in the all-events listings on series of 643 with the team, 658 in the doubles and 626 in the individual event.

Nats Spend Day Off at—the Ball Park

Nats' Mexican Rookie to Play 2d in Opener

A Mexican youth who had not figured in the Washington Ball Club's 1942 plans until yesterday, will play second base for the Nats in the opening game with the Yankees on Tuesday.

Jose Louis Gomez, signed by Washington Scout Joe Cambria on a Mexican talent hunt during the winter, unexpectedly reported to Griffith Stadium yesterday after weeks of delay caused by passport difficulties.

In the absence of Frank Croucher, who is still troubled with a sore arm, Manager Bucky Harris plans to install Gomez at second base at the start of the season.

Harris will get his first look at Gomez in action today when the Nats play the Phils in an exhibition game at Griffith Stadium, but on the lad's record the Washington manager is willing to induct him into the line-up immediately.

Gomez has had major league experience. He played for the Washington-owned Chattanooga club in 1933 and later was traded to the Giants and the Phils. Last season he gained his release from Jersey City after taking a petition to Commissioner Landis. Cambria signed him after watching him star with Mexican teams during the winter.

Novotny Paces Amateur Field

French Lick, Ind., April 10 (AP).—Gus Novotny, the diminutive sporting goods salesman from Memphis, Tenn., today showed the way to 450 amateurs in the first round of the eleventh annual Midwest amateur golf tournament here by carding a 77 over the tough French Lick Springs Hotel hill course.

In second place with a 78 was Johnny Lehman, of Chicago, and three Simon-pure linksmen were tied for third with 79, Charles (Chick) Evans, of Chicago; Walter Cisco, of Jeffersonville, Ind., and E. O. Schildberg, of Chicago.

4 Local Scholastic Games Are Called

The weather again stymied Washington's scholastic baseball program yesterday, four games being either canceled or postponed. A St. Albans-Wilson clash was put off until April 25; Gonzaga's clash with National Training School was reset for today at Gonzaga Field at 3 p. m., and Anacostia-Bethesda and Episcopal-Roosevelt games were postponed indefinitely.

Bannockburn Trustee Sale Set April 25

Trustees' sale of Bannockburn Golf and Country Club on Wilson Lane and MacArthur Boulevard, near Glen Echo, Md., to be held April 25 at 11 a. m., was announced yesterday in publication of the sale in county newspapers.

The publication notice asserts that the sale is by virtue of a deed of trust dated June 1, 1927, from Bannockburn Golf Club to John R. C. Boyer, trustee, "default having occurred in the payment of the indebtedness secured thereunder."

The advertisement carries the name of Joseph B. Simpson, jr., of the law firm of Simpson & Simpson, as substituted trustee. The sale includes the clubhouse and the grounds, with two tennis courts and an 18-hole golf course, "with water supply to 17 greens." The sale will be held at the front of the premises and contains the proviso that the tract must be sold as a unit.

Haight and Brown In Skeet Farce For Navy Relief

As a special attraction on the Elks Skeet Club's benefit shoot for the Navy Relief Society tomorrow, Walter Haight, The Post's racing expert, and Art Brown, radio announcer, will stage a challenge match for a large stake.

The event will be only a part, however, of a program which will last from 9 a. m. to sundown. Shooters, which will probably include the best in this vicinity, will participate both as individuals and teams, with 50 targets being allowed each marksman.

Defense Stamps Will Be Shoot Prizes

Continuing a highly popular policy, the Washington Gun Club will again offer defense stamps as prizes during its regular Saturday shoot today at Bennings range. Starting time will be 2:30 with 50 and 25 target events scheduled.

The Babe Is Safely Past Crisis; Wants To Get Up Already

By the Associated Press

Hollywood, April 10.—Babe Ruth, evidently safely past the crisis, was clamoring late today to get out of the bed in which he landed Wednesday with a bad case of pneumonia.

His temperature is only a degree above normal, reported his physician, Dr. R. Nichol Smith. He's cheerful and X-rays show his lung condition is clearing up well.

"From all indications," Dr. Smith said, "he's past the crisis and barring complications his recovery should be steady."

Navy Athletic Head Ordered To Sea Duty

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., April 10.—Capt. T. Starr King, Naval Academy athletic director since 1940, has been ordered to sea duty and his successor probably will be named tomorrow, Rear Admiral John R. Beardall, Academy superintendent, said today.

Temporarily, Commander L. S. Perry, graduate manager of athletics, is acting athletic director, Admiral Beardall reported.

Star tackle on Navy football teams of 1909-10, King was graduated from the Academy in 1911. He also was a member of the varsity crew and received an "N" star for outstanding gridiron play.

He succeeded Capt. E. W. McKee as athletic director in the spring of 1940. Last January King was named acting Academy superintendent when Vice Admiral Russell T. Willson went to Washington as chief of staff to Admiral Ernest J. King, now commander in chief of the United States Fleet.

6-Year-Old Wins $10,000 Tropical 'Cap

Eitinger Campaigner Smashes Track Mark; Haskell Has Leg Up; Our Boots Is Third

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., April 10.—The front-running Sir Marlboro, next to the longest shot in a field of eight, brought a smashing finale to the Florida racing season today with victory in the $10,000 Tropical Handicap before 8857 fans.

Mrs. J. Eitinger's six-year-old, a champion on grass, broke the track record as he barely edged out the heavily-favored Mioland. Our Boots, the public's second choice, was third.

Sir Marlboro's time for the mile and one-eighth was one minute and 49 seconds, two-fifths of a second faster than Mioland's record performance in winning the Ponce de Leon Handicap March 21. He paid $50.50 for a $2 win ticket.

Mioland, coupled with Porter's Cap in the parimutuel pool, returned $2.50 and $2.20 to place and show.

Woodvale Farm's Our Boots, a contender all the way, was a half-length behind Mioland when the camera caught the finish. The show price was $2.80.

Sir Marlboro's place and show returns were $10.50 and $4.10.

Ridden by Haskell

Jockey Lee Haskell gave the horse a brilliant ride, taking him to the front at the start and holding him there while an accident to Mioland's stablemate, Porter's Cap, threw the rest of the field off stride.

Porter's Cap stumbled to his knees, but regained his feet without tumbling. Jockey N. L. Pierson hit the dirt, but rolled over and came out of the mishap without serious injury.

The incident, near the half-mile pole, came just as Leon Haas started making his bid with Mioland. The great Charles S. Howard horse made a brave bid in the stretch, but just missed catching Sir Marlboro.

The horse, claimed by Mrs. Eitinger for $5000, won the $5000 Miami Beach Handicap on Hialeah's grass course this winter, and was the class of the Florida season in every turf start.

He slumped somewhat, and showed to poor advantage in his Tropical Park outings. Today's victory was worth $7625.

J. W. Dial's Llanero was fourth, far off the pace.

Decrease in Betting

Decreases in both betting and attendance as compared to last winter were disclosed.

Total attendance at Tropical and Hialeah Parks this season was 795,143, compared to 867,253 in 1940-41. Mutuels play dropped from last season's $40,992,490 to $38,735,324 for 1941-42.

The season got off to an auspicious start and Tropical Park's fall meeting had an increase of more than one million dollars in total wagering as compared to the corresponding meeting in 1940.

But after Pearl Harbor Florida's tourist season slumped and racing slumped with it. Many horsemen expected the decreases to be even greater, and it was generally felt that the presence of big-name thoroughbreds brought here after California tracks closed prevented the Hialeah and Tropical spring meetings from being more disappointing.

A's Turn Back Pirates, 6 to 4; Johnson Hero

By the United Press

Hutchinson, Kans., April 10.—The Philadelphia Athletics cut loose with a 14-hit barrage that included three home runs today to defeat the Pittsburgh Pirates, 6 to 4. Bob Johnson hit two four-baggers for the A's—one in the second with none on and one in the third with one on. Frankie Hayes hit the other with none on in the second.

Vince DiMaggio connected for a home run for Pittsburgh in the first with one on while Pitcher Ken Heintzelman found the range with the bases bare in the seventh.

Dick Fowler, rookie right-hander from Toronto of the International League, who is up with the Philadelphia Athletics for spring trial, was sent to a hospital for X-rays today when he was hit in the right elbow by a batted ball.

Cubs, Chisox Play Today

Chicago, April 10 (AP).—The White Sox and the Cubs were foiled by the weather today in their efforts to continue their spring series on home territory, but went ahead with plans to play tomorrow at Wrigley Field and Sunday at Comiskey Park.

Manager Jimmy Dykes, of the Sox, held a clubhouse meeting after today's tilt was postponed and announced his pitching choice for the local series opener was still Johnny Rigney.

Durocher Has Troubles

Brooklyn, April 10 (AP).—Cancellation of today's baseball game with the New York Yankees because of the weather gave Manager Leo Durocher of the Brooklyn Dodgers a headache today instead of a day of rest.

Durocher had hoped to send Whitlow Wyatt, his ace right-handed pitcher, against the Yankees for four innings as a final prepping for the National League opener against the New York Giants Tuesday.

POVICH

A team probably capable of winning the pennant in either big league is now serving in the Army and Navy. If it would help to win the war, which it wouldn't, President Roosevelt could place on the field a ball club that would be a potent contender for the 1942 pennants.

Mr. Roosevelt's ball team would not be long on pitching, but it would have quality. On the day that Petty Officer Bob Feller pitched it would have the best pitching in either league. Also available to take a regular turn would be Hugh Mulcahy, who was able to pitch winning ball even for the Phils, which is a mark of greatness. Thereafter the team would have to get along with such as Bill Posedel, of the Braves, and Mickey Harris, of the Red Sox, with help from such rookies as Steve Peek and Charley Stanceau, who had threatened to make the Yankees' staff.

Uncle Sam's big league ball team would have the best first baseman in baseball—Sergt. Hank Greenberg, who qualified for that label before he moved to the outfield in his last season. And it would have the best shortstop in a Camp Wheeler, Ga., private named Cecil Travis, who when last seen in the American League was slugging away at a .357 pace for a full season, the second best hitter in the league.

Second base on the United States armed forces ball team would not be one of its strong points, but the manager could struggle along very well with either Johnny Berardino, of the Browns, or Benny McCoy, of the Athletics, in the job. Third base wouldn't be a defensive strong point, either, with Private Buddy Lewis, of Kelly Field, Tex., on the job, but Lewis' bat would offset his fielding deficiencies.

Would Have Fashionable Outfield

The catching would be good enough, thanks to Frankie Pytlak's enlistment in the Navy yesterday. If the club needed more hitting than Pytlak's it would be an easy matter to call up Private Don Padgett, who wields a big bat in addition to a catcher's mitt. Ken Silvestri, of the Yankees, is available as a third-string catcher.

That ball team could have a powerful sort of outfield, with Sam Chapman, late of the Athletics, ranking third only to Ted Williams and Joe DiMaggio among American League outfielders last season. Joe Grace, hard-hitting outfielder of the Browns, would be another fixture on Uncle Sam's ball team. And very shortly now, since he has been given an A-1 rating in the draft, Pete Reiser would be available. Reiser did all right last year with Brooklyn. He led the league in hitting and was the best center fielder in the league otherwise.

A manager? That's easy. He would be the only commissioned officer on the squad—a naval lieutenant now attached to the Great Lakes Station. Mickey Cochrane is the name. He did all right in 3½ years as manager of the Tigers, when he led his ball club to two pennants.

Our ball club might be capable of winning the American League pennant, although the Yankees would probably still be the favorites, but we think it could win the National League pennant without too much trouble. In the National League it would have no Yankees to contend with, and it could probably overpower either the Cardinals or the Dodgers.

War Service May Blight Careers

Baseball can take pride in its service record in this war, in contrast to World War I, when the charge of slacker was hurled at numerous players with some justification. There was a rush by the ball players to the shipyards in 1917-18, but already organized baseball's contribution of personnel to the armed service in this war exceeds the number of players in military uniform in the last world embroglio.

The pity is that if the war endures for as long as two years more the men who went into the service as baseball stars won't be able to recapture their places in baseball in 1944. They will have lost that fine edge demanded of ball players, despite the fact that they will probably be better physical specimens for their Army training.

Hank Greenberg recently made the confession to this department that he couldn't swing a bat with anything like the power he used to, after one year in the Army. "The bounce has gone out of my swing," said Greenberg. "I'm muscle bound around the back and shoulders and I can't bring a bat through like I could. If I were discharged from the Army now I could get a masseur to break up these hard muscles, but next year or a couple of years from now I know it will be too late."

Bob Feller's plight, if the war continues for as long as two more years, will probably be much the same, perhaps even more tough. A pitcher, as much as a batter, probably more, uses his back and shoulder muscles, and he takes great care to have them rubbed and kneaded daily to keep them long and pliable. There are no baseball trainers in the Army and Navy to give Feller the daily massaging he used to get with the Cleveland Indians. If Feller returns to baseball it probably will not be as a great pitcher, but as a great pitcher of recent memory.

With CONSIDINE

New York, April 10.—SPORTIN' AROUND:

Moe Berg's short-wave propaganda speech to the Janpanese people, in the Japanese language, was deemed important enough by the Japanese to issue a Nip denial of his assertion that Jap war lords could be overthrown by the common people of Japan . . . Berg's first port of call on his impending trip to Latin America will be Brazil. The former catcher has been brushing up on his Portuguese . . . It hurt Jack Doyle more than it did Horace Stoneham, when the Broadway odds-maker pronounced the 1942 Giants a 20-to1 shot . . . It is the lowest rating Doyle ever gave his favorite team . . . Capture of the Stanley Cup by the Detroit Red Wings, a fifth-place team during the regular season's play, might be pretty thrilling to Detroit fans—but it serves only to drive a few more thousands of fans away from a sport where, idiotically, little or no premium is placed on consistent class.

CONSIDINE

That was an interesting story about the duties of ball players in case of air-raids. They are to continue playing, to guard against panic in the stands. Presumably, the Phils, in case of an air raid, will stop playing, to guard against panic in the stands . . . Billy Conn is more convinced than ever that he can beat Joe Louis. Can hardly wait for June to come. The two privates will give a portion of their purses to Army Relief.

The war, plus the many disappointments in connection with Lew Thompson's $100,000 tennis tour, will cook the goose of pro tennis for years . . . Smart guy, that Bucky Harris. With Buck Newsom and Dutch Leonard beginning to develop a polite feud over which would pitch the opening game in Washington next Tuesday—before President Roosevelt—Harris pleased both of them by nominating Sid Hudson. And at the same time built up Hudson's spirit. Clark Griffith would have done something with that Washington team this year, if the Army had not taken Buddy Lewis and Cecil Travis . . . Several sports events on the Pacific Coast have beaten Gen. DeWitt's order limiting crowds to 5000, by announcing attendances such as 4950, though perhaps twice as many were present . . . after the 80 he took on his first 18 holes in the Masters, Gene Sarazen should adopt Sam Snead's barefoot boy tactics instead of blasting same . . . Welterweight Champion Freddie Cochrane was strolling between two cemeteries on something called Farewell Lane, in Newport, when that car hit him some time ago.

The Yankee-Dodger game tomorrow at the Yankee Stadium—first exhibition played there since 1934—may draw the biggest exhibition crowd in years . . . Heartily endorsed: Phil Rizzuto's story (as told to Milton Gross) in the current SEP. Among other things, it's a fine outline on why Joe McCarthy, in his quiet way, is a great manager.

And favorite sports names: Maj. Ednyfed Williams. Ednyfed isn't pig-Latin, either. He's a member of the steering committee of the Thoroughbred Racing Association . . . When the Aga Khan sold Blenheim II to Warren Wright, A. B. Hancock, Jock Whitney, etc. for a quarter of a million dollars, he swore by the pink-toed prophet that he would never unload his other great Derby winning sire, Mahmoud. P. S. Mahmoud—is now standing at the C. V. Whitney farm at Lexington, Ky.

Glad the bock beer season is waning. We never suffered more acute embarrassment than listening to Jack Dempsey—long an idol—making a horrible baaaaa'ing sound for his radio beer sponsor . . . Year in and year out the Cards seem to get a better preseason press than any club, not excepting the Yanks . . . Dolly Stark's ailing knee probably will keep him out of baseball for another year . . . The Preakness people are hoping that their famed old race does as well this year as it did in another war. The 1918 Preakness field was so big—34 horses—that it had to be run in two sections. The heats were won by War Cloud, ridden by Johnny Loftus, and by Jack Hare, jr., the equine, not the biped.

Longshot Comes Through to Break Track Mark

New Coach Calls Football 'Incidental'

Ex-Stanford Mentor Expects Physical Training to Become Almost Compulsory

Clark Shaughnessy, who rocketed to fame as a football coach at Stanford, set up headquarters as head of athletics at the University of Maryland yesterday and declared that football will be only incidental in Maryland's sports program.

"I have a bigger job to do at Maryland than coaching football," said Shaughnessy. "I want to turn out the sort of men the armed forces need and that is the job I'm going to dedicate our program to. We won't neglect football, but that game is only a part of our plan."

Shaughnessy's first move, he said, would be to enroll all of the 1500 R.O.T.C. cadets on the Maryland campus into athletic units. "There are 1000 other students who are not in the R.O.T.C.," said Shaughnessy, "and they will also take physical training. I think we can come pretty close to making it compulsory."

Now the Reason

The man who installed the T-formation in Stanford football and converted a victory-less team of one year into an undefeated Rose Bowl champion the following season, explained why he left Stanford to take the Maryland position.

"At Stanford, I was only coaching football," said Shaughnessy. "I wanted more responsibility. I wanted to have a part in training young men for any war duties they may have to face. That is more important work than coaching football and at Maryland under President Byrd I have been assured that I can have full sway in producing better men, physically."

Each of the 12 R. O. T. C. companies on the Maryland campus will sponsor a football team, according to Shaughnessy's plan, as well as teams in other sports. "Football and boxing particularly appeal to me as the games of fighting men," said Shaughnessy. "I like the strenuous sports."

Plans Coaching School

Shaughnessy revealed that he will conduct a football coaching school, starting within two weeks, designed to staff the R. O. T. C. units with coaches. "I hope to have about 500 men in football uniforms next fall, and of course we'll teach the T-formation," Shaughnessy said. "Despite all the things that are said and written about the T-formation, I believe it is the easiest to learn and teach."

Shaughnessy anticipates no difficulty in installing the formation with the Maryland varsity next fall, and is hopeful that Maryland football will show rapid improvement. "We don't have a big-time schedule," he said, "but that is no reason why we can't have a big-time football team."

Red Sox Release Pitcher Dickman

Boston, April 10 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox returned home from their spring training trip tonight, announcing upon arrival the unconditional release of Pitcher Emerson Dickman.

In four seasons with the Red Sox, Dickman, a righthander, won 21 games and lost 14, including an even split in two games last season, when he was farmed out to Louisville in midseason.

Manager Joe Cronin said that because Dickman had been unimpressive in training and expected a call to service momentarily, he had been let out to make a deal for himself. Dickman enlisted in the Navy in December and is awaiting call to duty.

Terp Lacrosse, Track Teams Busy Today

Maryland's track and lacrosse teams face probable test this afternoon in the doubleheader with V. M. I. and Baltimore A. C. at College Park. The powerful Cadets and the Terp track squads will clash at 2 o'clock and the stickmen will battle it out starting at about 3:30.

For the first time in years Maryland will be the underdog to the V. M. I. track squad, which has walloped William and Mary and beaten Virginia by 25 points. The Terps tied Virginia Tech, 63-all, in their only test.

Maryland was without Tiny Horn, soph shot put and discus ace, and Bob Montgomery, quarter miler, in the meet with the Gobblers. Horn will be on hand today and Montgomery may be able to compete.

Horn and Carlos Englar, soph pole vaulter, are likely to set new Maryland and Byrd Stadium records. Horn has tossed the discuss much farther than the present mark and Englar has vaulted higher in practice than the existing record.

Maryland, which may be a slight favorite in the lacrosse game, will be battling to get on even terms with B. A. C., which has won two of the past three games. All have been tight affairs and the teams are exactly even in goals scored.

Jack Faber and Al Heagy have been working hard on the Maryland offense this week, which showed some bad faults in the easy wins over Harvard and Loyola. The Terp attack appears potent enough to hold its own in any company.

Two Md. Games Forced to BeCalled

Lexington, April 10 (AP).—Tomorrow's scheduled baseball game between Washington and Lee and the University of Maryland has been indefinitely postponed, Athletic Diretcor R. A. Smith said today. Smith said the game would be played later in the season when Maryland could battle V. M. I. and Washington and Lee on successive days.

Mrs. Whitney Halts Robbery Of Tack During Auction

Men Caught Stealing Valuables; Sale Of Horses Brings Return of $23,837

By Anne Hagner

Upperville, Va., April 10.—With eyes blazing, Mrs. M. E. Whitney added a bang-up finish to the dispersal sale of 49 of her own horses and 15 of Dr. Lewis M. Allen's, which netted $23,837 at her Llangollen Farm near here this afternoon.

Dynamic "Liz" prsonally rounded up two men who had spent the afternoon quietly removing saddles, bridles and valuable silver from the big trophy room not far from the sales ring. While the auction was in progress, Bernard Brosius, of Rockville, Md., noticed the men smuggling out trophies, put a friend on their trail, and summoned Mrs. Whitney.

$372 Is Average Price

Average price for the 64 horses was $372, with $3772 going for Dr. Allen's stock and $20,065 for the Llangollen consignment.

As was expected, Mrs. Whitney's The Bear topped the sale when $2700 was paid for him by William L. Jones, of Pottsville, Pa. His new owner plans to show him extensively in Pennsylvania, and has invited Mrs. Whitney to have the mount on him.

Cherry Bounce, brilliant little Llangollen hunter hack, was bought by H. O. Firor, of Towson, Md., for $1300. Firor also paid $675 for On Trial, good hunter and open jumper.

Strong Tea Included

A gray 2-year-old filly by imported Belfonds—Marge brought $1000 for Dr. Allen's best price of the day, paid by Crompton Smith, of Middleburg, who was acting as agent for another buyer.

Mrs. Whitney's well bred broodmare, Far North, by Display—Glacial, went to M. O. Moss, of Durham, N. C., for $1000 to lead the prices for matrons.

Other Whitney show horses included Strong Tea, which went for the unexpectedly low price of $700 to Mrs. John J. Farrell, of Darien, Conn.; Rose Valiant, bought by Charles Freeland, of Baltimore, for $725, and Brave Bonnie, shown extensively in California, which went to Joseph Cunningham, of York, Pa., for $750.

Screen Star Gene Autry sent a mailed bid of $500 on Tiger Heart, which went to him for that price.

Prices ranged from $22, for an elderly matron in the Allen consignment, to the $2700 paid for The Bear. Washington and Maryland buyers included Dean M. Rathbun, who purchased a handsome 2-year-old by Coq d'Esprit from Dr. Allen for $250; Eric Atterbury, of the Landon School, who paid $250 for the old Whitney campaigner, Bon Diable; Mr. and Mrs. Martin Vogel, jr., who purchased Game Chaser for $200; Mr. and Mrs. Donald Bradley, who took home a yearling and a 2-year-old, both by Bonne Nuit—Womilie, because they already have a 3-year-old, Night Flight, of the same breeding and markings.

Augustus Riggs, of Cooksville, Md., concentrated on racing prospects, paying $750 for Falconiere, $525 for College Widow and $425 for Tipper Dipper.

Track Meet Tops 10-Event Navy Program

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., April 10.—Navy's spring sports squads brace a heavy ten-event program tomorrow at the Naval Academy, highlighted by the debut of Coach Earl Thompson's tracksters.

Victor in nine of ten contests since the season began two weeks ago, the Middie varsity squads hope to add eight more rivals to the imposing list of victims. These include Pennsylvania's baseball squad, Villanova's and Catholic's sprinters, Penn State's lacrossers, Temple's tennismen, and dinghy fleets from Pennsylvania, Haverford and Lafayette.

Navy plebe aggregations are scheduled against Baltimore City College in golf, Temple's frosh in tennis, Duke's frosh in track, and Maryland's freshman nine. The Middie junior varsity lacrosse squad meets Virginias Jayvees in the tenth event.

Impressive in two important indoor meets last winter, Navy's trackmen inaugurate their campaign against two unknowns and minus the services of Gene Flathmann, regular shot and discus man, now in the hospital.

Villanova's mile relay squad trimmed the Middies in Catholic's indoor classic last month, but Navy responded with a grand slam in the hurdles to edge the Philadelphians, 20 to 19. Navy's brightest hopes for a successful cinder campaign are Sprinter Jack Tingle; Capt. Art Newlon, hurdler, and Milers Bill Goode and Howie Johnston.

Davis Probable Pitcher

Steaming along with three straight triumphs, Navy's diamond hands seek to add to one of the most sparkling records ever assembled here. In the last three games, after losing to Harvard, Navy pitchers have yielded only one run and eight hits, turning in successive two-hitters over Vermont and Rutgers.

Sophomore Jack Davis, southpaw curver, may receive his second straight assignment against Penn's sluggers unless Coach Max Bishop decides to save him for the test with the Baltimore Orioles next Tuesday. If Davis doesn't oppose the Quakers, veteran Phil Hurst is Navy's logical slab choice.

The Middies' sparkling lacrosse contingent is expected to turn back Penn State for victory No. 3, while the undefeated tennis crew faces a real threat in Temple in the other varsity features.

Sam August Rolls 170 Game In League

A 470 game by Sam August, Foundry, and Wes Fredette's 395 set for West No. 2 led the Navy Yard League at Fort Davis with the latter team taking all three from Tool Shop No. 1. Hugh Crawley, F. & A. No. 1, had 375 to spark his boys to a sweep over Drawing Room No. 3 and into the league lead over Miscellaneous who dropped three to East Shop when Ed Barrett came through with a 361 effort. Foundry and F. & A. No. 1 split team honors with respective totals of 617 and 1723.

BROOKLAND

Agnes Schotter was the leading pinswoman in the Brookland Ladies League with her 158 singles which she followed with a 340 set, the two scores inspiring her DePerini Delicatessen girls to win three games from R. J. O'Neill and post team highs of 582 and 1596 as well. The three victories gave the league lead to DePerini by virtue of pinfall, although Gemeny's Flowers equals them in games won and lost. Jack & Jill School also won a sweep over opponents.

CLARENDON

Don Comer, Dan Wilson Plumbers, and Henry, Gibson Grays, were the leaders in the Clarendon Commercial B loop last night with a 149 game and 381 set, respectively. Henry's team took high game with a 596 score while the Clarendon Barber Shop boys posted a 1667 total to win high set honors.

Valdina Farm's Orphan Takes Keeneland Handicap

Derby Eligible Easily Beats Field Of Candidates for Churchill Classic

By the Associated Press

Keeneland, Ky., April 10 (AP).—Valdina Farm of Emerson F. Woodward, Texas sportsman, today served its second warning in as many days that it must be considered where the Kentucky Derby is concerned as Valdina Orphan scored impressively in the Dr. Edward Hagyard Handicap.

Yesterday afternoon Hollywood gave reason to believe he might be a formidable contender in the coming Churchill Downs classic, but his stablemate was even more impressive today, considering that every member of the field which trailed him to the wire is eligible for the Derby.

Driving hard in second place, but no match for Valdina Orphan, was More Than Few, three and a half lengths back. The latter held on stubbornly to take the place from the tiring pacemaker, Black Raider, from the Milky Way Stable of Mrs. Ethel V. Mars.

Following in the wake of the placed trio and losing considerable caste in defeat were Jean Ferrante, Put It, Emolument, Sir War, Radio Joe, Transformer and Patriot in that order.

Valdina Orphan stepped the 6 furlongs, coming from behind in the stretch, in 1:14, identical time as that registered by Hollywood yesterday, also over a muddy track. The Hilltown colt backed into late favoritism, rewarded at $6.40, $3.20 and $2.50.

64 Major Leaguers Now In Khaki and Navy Blue

American League Has Given 42 Players; Nats Have Dozen Men in Services

By Judson Bailey
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, April 10.—When the major leagues rap for attention Tuesday at least 64 players who might have been capering in baseball uniforms before the big opening day throngs will be found instead in Army khaki and Navy blue.

The American League has given 42 men and the National League 22 to the armed services since Selective Service began. This group ranges from stars like Sailor Bob Feller and Soldier Hank Greenberg to rookies who had hoped to get their first spring training trip with a big league club this year.

There will be more to go, of course, during the season and the draft is as likely to decide the pennant races as anything the clubs do on the diamond. Thus far the National League has been touched lightly but the call to colors has eliminated both Detroit and Cleveland as contenders in the American League and may have pushed both back to the second division.

Besides Feller the Indians also have lost Outfielder Clarence Campbell and the Tigers in addition to Sergt. Greenberg have sent Outfielder Pat Mullin and Pitchers Fred Hutchinson and Bob Uhle to the service.

Sturm Missing

The world champion Yankees will be without regular First Baseman Johnny Sturm, Pitchers Charles Stanceau and Steve Peek and Reserve Catcher Ken Silvestri, but this threat to their standing was minimized by the Boston Red Sox' loss of two southpaw pitchers, Earl Johnson and Mickey Harris, and a couple of other reserves. The Sox also lost Catcher Frank Pytlak to the Navy.

The Washington Senators, St. Louis Browns and Philadelphia Athletics all have been hit hard.

The Senators have transferred a dozen men, including Cecil Travis and Buddy Lewis, to baseball's defense list; the Athletics have yielded Sam Chapman, Benny McCoy, Al Brancato and several others, and the Browns John Berardino, Joe Grace, George Archie and John Kramer among others.

The Chicago White Sox, alone of all the American League teams, have not lost a regular. In the National League Cincinnati, Pittsburgh, St. Louis and New York have given up no regulars and the Chicago Cubs no players at all.

Lavagetto Gone

Brooklyn's champion Dodgers will be without Cookie Lavagetto and Don Padgett, and have just been notified that Pete Reiser, last year's batting king, is in class 1-A.

The war has cost the Boston Braves Bill Posdel and Carvel Rowell and the Phillies Pitcher Hugh Mulcahy and Emmet Mueller.

Mulcahy is reported to be the first baseball star headed for combat service. In fact he may be in the far Pacific now. Most of the other players are still in training camps and in many cases are playing ball on various Army and Navy teams.

Bowie's Blenheim Purse Captured by He Rolls in Deep Mud

Gondalina Is Second By Length

6500 See Favorite Win in Good Time; Zaca Rosa Fails In Fourth Race

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Bowie, Md., April 10.—He Rolls, a pretty fair horse who raced with occasional success as a 2-year-old at Charles Town, carried the colors of the Cedar Farms to a driving victory in the Blenheim Purse, topping the Friday program at this track. The now 4-year-old and an Arkansas Derby winner in 1941 answered the urging of Jockey Al Shelhamer to end a stretch duel with G. R. Watkins' Gondalina and go on to victory by a length margin. Six lengths behind the second horse came W. L. Brann's Moon Maiden.

He Rolls found the sloppy track to his liking and rewarded favorite players in a crowd of 6500 with a $4.60 mutuel. The track was sloppy, but the bottom was good and He Rolls turned in time of 1:49 2-5 for the 1 1-16 miles.

The winner received stiff opposition from only one horse in the field of six. Gondalina moved with him after Alhalon and Moon Maiden weakened from setting and forcing the pace. In the early stretch run, Gondalina kept abreast of He Rolls, but it was all over when Shelhamer got down to serious riding.

Zaca Rosa Third

The heavy-money players went down swinging in the Dower House Purse, the day's secondary feature, located fourth on the program. The usually reliable combination of Apprentice Charlie Wahler, Owner W. W. Crenshaw and Trainer E. J. Baker failed when Zaca Rosa, almost played off the board, finished third in a vest-pocket field of five.

Zaca Rosa, who was a bad post actor on the West Coast, broke flat-footed and the field skidded away from her before she got under way. Wahler appeared to be overanxious to make up for the handicap and rushed Zaca Rosa from far back to the front in a bold sweep.

The filly opened a wide lead, but her early effort told on her and she almost collapsed in the stretch as She Dast, owned by E. G. Hackney, and Breckinridge Long's Equipet came to her. At the finish, She Dast was a length ahead of Equipet with "Rosa" another half-length away. The winner paid $15.80.

EARLY SPRING set and forced pace early and weakened.

Selections at Bowie

Dear Al:

Bowie's abbreviated but highly successful meeting comes to a close today with the $5000 added Southern Maryland Handicap as the feature. The race over the mile and a sixteenth course drew an overnight field of nine. W. L. Brann's Pictor and Challomine probably will draw the bulk of the betting. Pictor carries top weight of 128 pounds and gives his rivals from 12 to 18 pounds. The Southern Maryland was first run in 1934 when Gay World stepped home in front. Other winners have been Purple Knight, Calumet Dick, Challephen, Honey Cloud (twice) and Ringle. The best time for the stake is the 1:47 3-5 hung up by Honey Cloud in 1939. I have heard all kinds of stories about the race Walter Haight won at Charles Town. If you remember, the Mowlee colt came from behind to defeat Top Transit by a length that December day. When Walter Haight ran here earlier in the week, I bet that he would again defeat Top Transit. In the betting, Top Transit was 6 to 1 and Walter Haight was 50 to 1. At the finish, Walter Haight came from behind to end up in sixth place and he finished exactly a length in front of Top Transit. By the way, Jockeys Al Shelhamer and Johnny Deering, who rode the colt in his last two starts, reported that Walter Haight "climbed," meaning of course that he was throwing his head in the air. Maybe he's getting stuck up and wants to run in better company. Ralph Murdock and the skeet shooters of the Elks Club will put on their big Navy Relief event Sunday at O'Donnell's farm on the Marlboro Pike. I've challenged Art Brown to a 25-target match. If neither one of us breaks one, then I'm willing to wrestle it out. Friend Mickey McGuire was back at work in the press box yesterday. Looked like old times. See you on the rail.

BILL

First race—SAMMY SMITH seems to have a habit of starting three-horse entries in these 2-year-old affairs and they are always close up so I'm stringing along again. MENELAUS is a first-time starter that has trained well on occasions. BURGOO KID may go well if able to break into the starting field.

Second race—UGIN came up a good thing in that first start here and received a rather listless ride. With improved handling, this should be the right one. APPREHEND is a bad-legged veteran that has trained in excellent fashion. CHESTNUT BUR is a dead fit horse but may need a little more ground.

Third race—EXARCH appears a standout in a field of this caliber. Needs only alert handling leaving the gate. DAINTY FORD is a fair sprinter but may be in need of a race. WISBECH could be tough if started.

Fourth race—I'm going to shoot for the moon in this three-quarter affair and try to get LIBERTY POLLY to show on the head end throughout. INDIAN SUN has been raced into condition and is about ready for his best race. MOONDRIFT graduated from the maiden ranks in clever fashion and may give trouble.

Fifth race—PICTOR is heavily weighted, but I see nothing in this field capable of giving him any trouble at all. The tough going makes him look even better. RIDING LIGHT is finally getting his best distance. AIR MASTER may surprise.

Sixth race—CREEPY MOUSE showed a whale of an effort first out this year and may improve enough off that effort to take this field into camp. HILLBLOND was poorly handled last out. **

$100,000,000 Issue Filed by Tobacco Firm

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, April 10.—The American Tobacco Co., today filed a registration with the Securities and Exchange Commission, covering 100 million dollars of 3-per-cent debentures due April 15, 1962.

The issue will be the biggest corporate financing since last May, when the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. offered 234 million dollars in convertible debentures, the largest loan of that type on record.

Proceeds from the sale of the American Tobacco securities, together with other funds of the company, are to be applied to the payment of $12,977,000 of 2.45 per cent serial debentures, 16 million dollars of 2 per cent notes, and $75,500,000 of short term loans payable to banks.

Morgan Stanley & Co., of New York, head a group of 146 underwriters to handle the sale. The offering price to the public, the underwriting discounts or commissions, and the redemption provisions are to be filed by amendment under the Securities Act of 1933.

The company's propectus states that to facilitate the offering it is intended to stabilize the price of the debentures. This is not an assurance the prospectus says, that the price of the debentures will be stabilized or that the stabilizing, if commenced, may not be discontinued at any time.

Gas Company Preferred Issue Is Approved

The Washington Gas Light Co.'s application for the issuance of 40,000 shares of $5 cumulative preferred stock was granted yesterday after a hearing by the Public Utilities Commission.

Waiver of the competitive bidding ruling also was granted, subject to P. U. C. approval of an underwriting agreement between the gas company and nine local investment houses. Under a tentative agreement, the brokers will underwrite the sale of 20,000 shares, less the number taken by common stockholders under preemptive right, and will undertake to sell the remaining 20,000 shares.

E. Barrett Prettyman, counsel for the gas company, agreed to a request of P. U. C. Chairman Gregory Hankin that the stockholders be asked to revise the charter so as to give this new preferred stock, as well as all that outstanding, a voting provision that, if six consecutive dividends are defaulted, majority voting control will pass to the holders of preferred stock.

60,000 Shares Now

At present there are 60,000 shares of preferred stock, and 425,000 of the common. Each share of preferred as well as common commands one vote.

Hankin wished this voting control revision to be agreed to at the hearing, as a "remarkable condition" to granting the appeal, but Prettyman insisted it would have to be referred to the stockholders, which would take two or three months. The appeal was approved without further mention of this condition.

Robert C. Owers, Washington Gas Light Co. vice president in supervision of financial affairs, was the principal witness at the hearing. The commission conceded at the start that the company was in need of additional capital and that the issuance of the $5 stock was a sound method of financing. The major question of the hearing was the waiving of the competitive bidding ruling.

Owers testified that the present market for preferred stock was too unfavorable to try to get individual brokers to assume the sale. It would take the combined efforts of all the dealers in Washington to float the issue, he said.

Market Purely Local

Owers further testified that three New York investment houses had been approached about handling the sale and five Hartford, Conn., insurance firms had been offered the stocks. None of these outside firms were interested, indicating that the market for the stocks is purely local. This fact was affirmed by John S. Osborne, a member of Lehmann Brothers, of New York.

Yellerton E. Booker, whose investment firm is one of the underwriters of the stock issue, justified the $3.50 per share commission to be paid by saying that the nine houses will not negotiate the entire sale but will pass the stock on to all other houses in the city. Furthermore, he said that their promotion would help the sales to the common stockholders, who otherwise would not generally exercise their preemptive right.

To Hankin's surprised question, "Do you mean to say that the common stockholders would pay more attention to a salesman's talk than to the approval given by this commission after the proper consideration of evidence?" Booker replied, "Yes, where the treasure is, there is the heart."

Peoples' Sales Up 14.1% in March

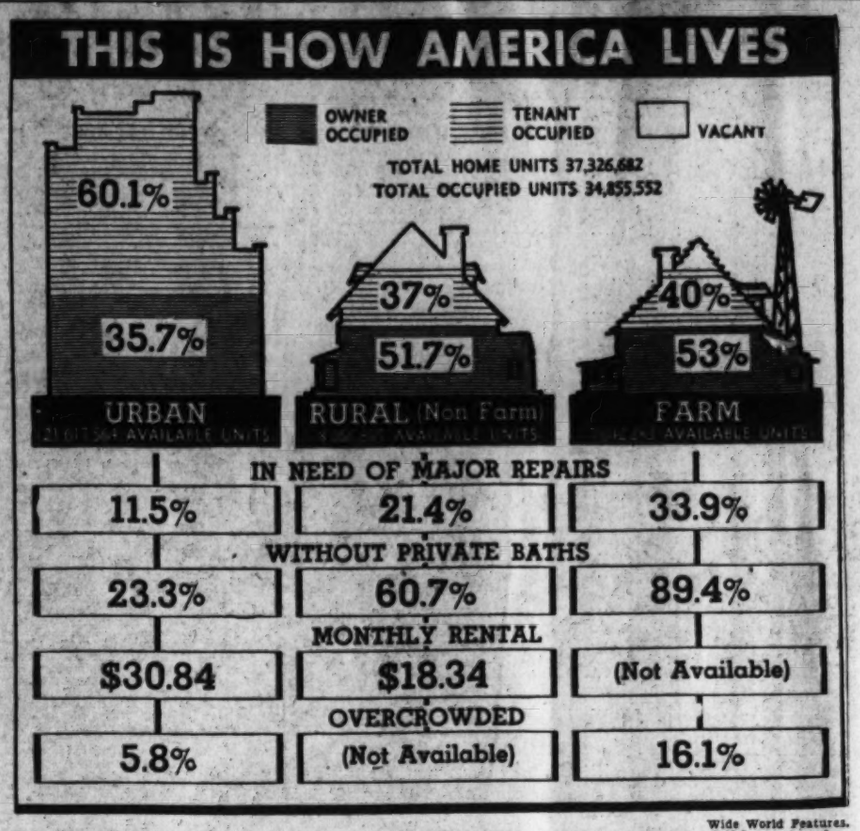
Peoples Drug Stores, Inc., yesterday reported net sales of $2,447,016 in March, an increase of 14.1 per cent over the $2,144,193 for the same month last year.

Cumulative sales for the first three months totaled $7,241,259, an increase of 15.9 per cent over the $6,244,825 in the same 1941 period. Treasurer W. H. Churchill in revealing the figures pointed out that the report is made without adjustment for change in number of stores.

Court Authorizes Rail Bond Interest

St. Louis, April 10 (AP).—On petitions of bondholders' committees, Federal Judge George H. Moore has directed payment of $5,115,871 in overdue and unpaid interest on bond issues of the St. Louis-San Francisco (Frisco) Railway.

As of March 6, the petitions said, the cash balance of the railroad was calculated to be in excess of 13 million dollars.



Wide World Features.

THE FIRST SURVEY of where and how the 130,000,000 men, women and children in the United States live was undertaken as part of the last decennial census. The breakdown of figures has just been completed by the Department of Commerce. They show how much overcrowding there is, what the condition of homes is, how modernized they are. Average rental figures are based on inclusion of rental value of vacant units and those occupied by owners; a home is termed overcrowded when there are more than 1½ persons per room. Urban areas are those with a population of 2,500 or more. The survey showed the percentage of home ownership declined since 1930 from 47.8 per cent to 43.6 per cent. In the same period the number of families increased 16.6 per cent, but the total population rose only 7.2 per cent, showing a decrease in the size of the average family to 3.8 persons

Post-Easter Sales Remain At High Level

By the Associated Press

New York, April 10.—Continued heavy retail buying in the wake of the Easter splurge was reported today by Dun & Bradstreet in its weekly trade review.

Special sales and mark-downs were limited, the review said, because of the sustained consumer demand and the difficulty of replacement in some lines.

Summer business took precedence in wholesale markets, retailers generally seeking early delivery.

Dollar Gains Cut

The survey found that while there was some decline from the Easter peak, it was less pronounced than usual, and heavy buying continued in soft goods lines, spreading to include a wide variety of seasonal and scarcity items.

Dollar volume gains over 1941, however, were cut sharply, since Easter fell in the corresponding calendar week of last year. For the country as a whole, dollar sales were estimated 2 to 7 per cent above the 1941 week. By regions, percentage gains were: New England and East, 3 to 8; Midwest, 4 to 10; Northwest, 3 to 9; Pacific Coast, 2 to 7; Southwest, 0 to 5, and in the South results ranged from slightly under to 3 per cent above 1941.

Wholesale Trade Busy

A substantial interest in fill-in merchandise and liberal bookings of orders for summer and fall goods quickened the pace of wholesale markets. Heavy orders on spring numbers often were demands for immediate deliveries which wholesalers were unable to make.

The substantial forward purchasing followed on the heels of reports that few stores were concerned over ample inventories, preferring to carry over staple lines rather than reduce prices for clearances.

Steel Shipments In First Quarter At Record Peak

New York, April 10 (AP).—The United States Steel Corporation today reported that finished steel shipments in March and, for the first quarter of 1942 were the highest for the month and the period in its records.

The corporation said shipments of finished steel products of its subsidiaries in March totaled 1,780,938 net tons, an increase of 164,351 over the February total of 1,616,587 net tons and a 60,572-net ton increase over March, 1941, when the total was 1,720,366.

For the first three months the corporation's shipments were 5,136,418 net tons, an increase of 185,147 over shipments of 4,951,271 net tons in the same period in 1941.

U. S. Places Big Order For Powdered Eggs

Chicago, April 10 (AP).—Contracts calling for the purchase of 21,007,895 pounds of powdered eggs were made yesterday by the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation, Government lend-lease and relief buying agency, according to advices received today by the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

It was the largest single day's award made by the FSCC since the start of its buying program and will bring total awards since the beginning of the year close to 80 million pounds. About 65 million dozen shell eggs will be broken and dried to meet the purchase.

Union Fails To Win Seats On Rail Board

By the Associated Press

Jersey City, N. J., April 10.—Hudson & Manhattan Railroad employes lost today their attempt to win two seats on the carrier's board of directors at a meeting of stockholders.

Matthew O'Leary, of New York, chairman of the General Grief Committee of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, and Peter Patton, of Jersey City, a ticket taker on the Newark-New York tube runs, received 47,929 votes each compared to the total of 212,554 received by the two directors they specifically opposed.

Eight other directors, all sponsored both by the management of the line and by the employes and stockholders protective committee, were given 260,483 votes.

The two men who won over the unionists were Albert H. Wiggin, former chairman of the Chase National Bank, and Lewis L. Strauss, member of Kuhn, Loeb & Co.

Outstanding stock, common and preferred with one vote each, was given as 452,363 shares. The employes committee which owns 3000 shares is sponsored by three lodges of the railway brotherhood.

O'Leary criticized at the meeting the practice of the company in employing outside contractors for cleaning the H. & H. twin buildings at 30-50 Church Street, New York, and urged a cleaning staff be placed under direct supervision of the management. His objections were noted.

The meeting had been scheduled for Wednesday but was adjourned when proxies were questioned.

The Treasury announced yesterday that subscriptions totaling $3,062,000,000 were received this week for the $1,500,000,000 of new certificates offered for sale.

Subscribers will be alloted in full up to $25,000 and about 48 per cent on larger subscriptions.

The certificates will bear one-half of 1 per cent interest and mature in six and a half months. They are the first of this type of security to be sold by the Treasury since 1934.

M. & S. L. Railroad To Be Sold May 15

Minneapolis, April 10 (AP).—Final sale of the properties of the Minneapolis & St. Louis Railroad today was set for 10 a. m. May 15 under terms of a consolidated final decree signed by Judge Gunnar H. Nordbye in Federal Court.

Special Master Howard S. Abbott will hold the sale. Attorneys for the receiver said, however, that a 30-day delay may be sought in order to perfect arrangements.

Judge Nordbye's decree brings up to date the original final decree signed in 1929. Under its terms, several mortgages held by the railroad and since foreclosed are included in the property to be sold.

Reorganization plans of Lucian C. Sprague, receiver, already have been approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Court Refuses to Halt Steel Firms' Merger Vote

Cleveland, April 10 (AP).—Judge Charles J. McNamee today refused to halt a stockholders' vote on proposed sale of Otis Steel Co. assets to Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp.

He denied an injunction in a stockholder's suit brought by Mrs. Jeanne P. Daus of Shaker Heights, Ohio, who contended an Otis liquidation plan to be submitted to stockholders April 24 was illegal and deprived preferred stockholders of "vested rights."

The judge described the plan as "unique and unusual in its formal aspects," but asserted it nevertheless conformed with the statute and Otis' articles of incorporation.

Winter Wheat Estimated 10% Above Average

By the Associated Press

The Agriculture Department reported yesterday that the important winter wheat crop, which got an excellent start last fall, still shows good prospects with production indicated at 624,983,000 bushels on the basis of conditions prevailing April 1.

A crop of this size, while 7 per cent less than last year's comparatively largest harvest, would be about 10 per cent above average.

The reduction from last year reflects largely a crop control program calling for the production of less wheat because of the existence of a record surplus and prospects of a shortage of storage facilities.

Yield Near Record

The winter wheat crop will be supplemented by the spring wheat crop which has been tentatively placed at 164 million bushels on the basis of average yields for prospective planting, and by a surplus of 630 million bushels from previous years. The indicated yield of winter wheat per acre planted was 16.1 bushels, a level exceeded only in 1914 and 1931.

The department said prospects for the rye crop also continued excellent. No estimate on the prospective production of this crop was given, however.

In its first monthly crop report covering early portions of the spring planting season the department said farmers have been delayed by adverse weather and were behind with spring work in much of the Nation. It added that many farmers were complaining of difficulties in securing competent help and adequate production supplies.

Bigger Effort Seen

On the other hand, the department said, moisture conditions this spring were better than usual. The great majority of farm families were said to be exerting themselves to increase production of crops and livestock products for war needs.

"The acreage of crops," the department said, "is expected to be the largest since 1933 and prospects for good yields per acre seem as favorable this season as in any other year."

Other favorable factors in the agricultural situation, the department said, included the facts that work animals, were now above pre-drought peaks and still were increasing, that feed reserves were large and that stocks of grains on farms were the largest on record for this season of the year.

Labor Problem Cited

"Pastures and range prospects are promising and the production of meat, lard, milk and eggs is currently running at levels that provide fully the usual per capita supply in addition to the present volume of lend-lease purchases," the department said.

Commenting on the farm labor situation, the department said that unless offset by increased use of farm machinery, shortages of competent labor "that are now restricting the expansion of farming operations near industrial sections may affect more of the agricultural sections later in the year or next year."

Cheese Price Case May Be Delayed Until After War

Madison, Wis., April 10 (AP).—Trial of the Government's case charging conspiracy to fix prices in the Swiss and limburger cheese industries may be delayed because of the war, it developed today after the defendants, five corporations, an association and nine individuals, pleaded innocent in Federal court.

Judge Patrick T. Stone received the pleas yesterday and granted defense attorneys 20 days in which to file a motion for a bill of particulars setting forth the charges in detail.

It was believed the trial would not start at least until midsummer and that it might be delayed indefinitely if the Department of Justice determines that the case comes within the scope of a plan announced by President Roosevelt to forego antitrust prosecutions which might hamper the war effort.

The defendants are the Kraft Cheese Co., the Badger-Brodhead Cheese Co., the J. S. Hoffman Co., Triangle Cheese Co., the Borden Co., the Foreign Type Cheese Dealers Association and officers or agents of the corporations.

Solution to Wage-Profits-Farm Price Problem Emerging After Lengthy 3-Cornered Stalemate

A sane, practical solution to the difficult and vital problem of keeping industrial wages, corporation war profits and farm prices in line appeared this week to be emerging from the confusing discussions and stalling since Pearl Harbor.

The industrial worker, the factory owner, and the farmer all are vital to the war effort.

The pay envelope, corporate profits and the price-tag on a bag of food are, in essence, much like the three legs of a three-legged stool atop which rests war production.

The war material effort is likely to be unsettled or upset by any sudden lengthening or shortening of anyone of the three legs without compensating adjustment of the other two.

Now, after the series of hearings, the issuing of statements, the healthy name-calling that accompany the American democracy's way of doing things, a solution to the wage-profits-farm price problem seems likely, the experts say, along these lines:

1. Passage of legislation to limit war profits.

2. Either a lengthening of the 40-hour basic work week to 44 or 48 hours, or a relaxing of management opposition to overtime pay as the result of the war profits limitation.

3. A quieting of future demands for further increases in farm prices if limits are set on war industrial profits, and prices of essential civilian goods items the farmer buys are kept under reasonable control.

Said War Production Chief Donald M. Nelson in a statement regarded as expressing the views of President Roosevelt:

"If we abolish the 40-hour week by law we do not gain one hour of additional work in our war industries; but naturally we create a widespread demand for increases in wage rates, throw the entire structure out of adjustment, and remove an important incentive for labor to shift from non-essential industries into war production jobs."

The House favors a 6 per cent maximum on war profits.

The Senate sub-committee wanted a 2 to 10 per cent sliding scale, but the Senate, by a voice vote, this week approved a modified plan which, instead of setting any ceiling, would instruct the War and Navy Departments and the Maritime Commission to negotiate contracts to prevent excessive profits.

The House and Senate versions now go to conference.

When the profits limitation question is settled, observers say, discussion of the matter of the work-week can go on from there with greater speed and facility.

For the industrialist making war goods, of course, the basic work-week, after profits limitations are set, could become academic.

The way to make more profits, if they are to be limited to a small margin above cost, is to step up production.

The bigger the output of goods, the larger the company's earnings.

As the fast diminishing surplus labor supply is tightened by expanding Army ranks and bigger war factory employment, the tendency may be to pay not only the prevailing wage without grumbling but, in many additional companies, to issue "incentive" bonuses to speed output.

If profits limitations measures are enacted, some observers say, the Government for the first time in any war thus may find itself in a position to keep profits, wages and farm prices in balance.

With a law to keep profits in line, the labor board could, if it chose, keep wages from getting out of hand and, by so doing, could forestall any new wage spiral to bring fresh demands from farmers for higher guarantees on major crops.

Reserve Banks To Stand Back Of War Loans

By the Associated Press

The Federal Reserve Board yesterday issued regulations placing in effect President Roosevelt's March 26 order facilitating the financing of small business for war production.

Under the regulations, business firms needing loans to fill war contracts may apply to their local banks, which in turn will arrange guarantees through the nearest Federal Reserve Bank. The Reserve Banks will be guaranteed against loss by the War or Navy Departments or Maritime Commission.

The regulations make this service available to all banks whether or not they belong to the Federal Reserve System.

Further regulations will be issued later regarding interest charges and other details.

C. & S. to Battle One-Stock Plan Ordered by SEC

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, April 10.—Commonwealth & Southern Corporation will contest in the courts the order issued late yesterday by the Securities and Exchange Commission, which directs the billion dollar holding company to change its capitalization to one class of stock, unless the order is revoked on rehearing or a plan based on voluntary stockholder action is worked out, Justin R. Whiting, president, declared in a statement issued today.

Commonwealth & Southern's capitalization consists of 1,500,000 shares of $6 preferred stock and 33,673,328 shares of common. As of March 31, there was unpaid dividend arrears of $21.75 a share on the preferred.

This is the first promise of a challenge to an SEC order to be given by any major holding company executive in about a year, although counsel for C. & S. told a commission hearing last April that it would litigate the constitutionality of the death sentence of Section 11 (b) of the Holding Company Act as "far as we can go."

Net income for the year was $9,330,204, equal to $4.66 per common share, compared with $6,427,217, or $2.59 per share, for 1940.

The figure was calculated by the Treasury on the basis of March 31 statistics. This average was 39 cents more than the end of February and $19.11 more than a year ago.

New York Cotton

New York, April 10 (AP).—Cotton futures prices spent most of today in lower ground, but the advancing tendency was not maintained and at the close were 10 cents a bale lower to 15 cents higher.

Buyers showed caution because of price ceiling uncertainties and the fact that the Commodity Credit Corporation Monday will consider bids for its April sales quota of 300,000 bales of loan cotton.

Quinine Supply Running Low, Doctor Warns

By the Associated Press

New York, April 10.—United Nations forces in the East Indies and Australian face the dangers of malaria with an impending shortage of quinine, chief remedy for the disease, an expert in chemical warfare declared tonight.

Dr. Marston Taylor Bogert, professor of organic chemistry at Columbia University and a consultant to the U. S. Army Chemical Warfare Service, asserted that the fall of Java, which produced about 95 per cent of the world's supply of quinine, left the United Nations dependent on their reserves.

In the United States the total stockpile of quinine reserves has not been revealed, Dr. Bogert declared, adding that Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones recently announced the purchase of about five million ounces. The annual peacetime consumption was estimated at 4,500,000 ounces.

Dr. Bogert disclosed that for the last two years chemists under his supervision at Columbia have been working on a synthesis of new organic compounds which, he said, "we hope will be of some value in the treatment of malaria."

Synthetic remedies, he said, were more potent than the natural product manufactured from the bark of the cinchona tree, but could be administered only under medical supervision.

Army, Navy to Need 16,000 More Doctors

St. Louis, April 10 (AP).—American physicians were told today the Army and Navy will need 16,000 additional doctors this year in a program of preparation for a ten-year war.

Dr. Roy W. Fouts, of Omaha, chairman of the medical procurement and assignment service of the Seventh Corps Area, speaking at a meeting of the Second American Congress on Obstetrics and Gynecology, said to the attending physicians:

"There are only three things we will consider in granting deferment to a doctor. Is he needed in his community? Is he needed in industry? Is he needed for teaching?

"You folks had better get into this right now. Somebody else will have to do the work you are doing. In cities like St. Louis we will leave just one physician for 2000 persons."

On such a basis, St. Louis, with a population of 816,000, would be entitled to 400 doctors. The 1940 census showed 2126 physicians practicing here.

British Cruiser Lands Wounded at Gibralter

London, April 10 (AP).—Reuters reported tonight that the British cruiser Hermione arrived in Gibraltar yesterday, damaged and with wounded aboard. Reuters said a dispatch from Ceuta to the Vichy News Agency reported that the wounded were disembarked at once. The dispatch said it was believed the cruiser had been engaged in a sea and air battle near Malta.

Workers Ask Ford To Fire Lindbergh

Detroit, April 10 (U.P.).—A resolution protesting the employment of Charles A. Lindbergh at the Ford Motor Company's Willow Run bomber plant and demanding his removal was made public today by production foundry workers affiliated with the United Automobile Workers (C. I. O.).

Richard T. Leonard, administrator of the Ford local of the U. A. W.-C. I. O., and Paul St. Marie, chairman of the local's general council, issued a joint statement announcing that "neither the local union nor the international union has taken any action" with regard to the hiring of Lindbergh.

A spokesman for the company said he believed the resolution was "Communist inspired" and signed by only a small group of workers.

Gaming Suspects Held as Court Overrules Protest on Warrant

Two men arrested February 21 on gaming charges in what was once the home of William F. Draper, former Ambassador to Italy, at 1705 K Street Northwest, were held for the grand jury yesterday following a decision overruling protest by the defendants that an arrest warrant was used as a search warrant.

The men, each of whom posted $1500 bond, were Howard R. Seals, 43, 1497 Meridian Street Northest, and Fred B. Harper, 51, 5426 Ninth Street Northwest. Each was charged with setting up a gaming table for dice playing.

Legality of the men's arrest was challenged by Defense Counsel T. Edward O'Connell, on grounds that an arrest warrant was issued against Seals October 28, 1941, but was not served until February 21, when United States deputy marshals and police forced entry into the house. In the meantime, Seals, upon learning he was sought, had appeared at the Third Police Precinct Station but was not arrested, O'Connell asserted at a preliminary hearing March 4.

United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage in his opinion ruled that an arrest warrant is valid until served, that Seals was not arrested at the precinct station because the officer there did not have the warrant which was then being executed by the marshal's office, and that the arrest of Harper at the time was legal because police saw that a law violation, namely gaming, was occurring on the premises.

Turnage stated that United States marshals and police went to the K Street address on special information and saw Seals in seeking admission. Seals, however, did not admit the law officials until one officer drew a gun, Turnage declared.

When the men were arrested at the Draper mansion, once occupied by the Chinese Embassy and later by part of the Russian Embassy, police said $421.50 was seized from a table. Turnage ruled that the officers had a right to seize evidence of crime as an incidence to the serving of the warrant on Seals.

Medical Aid System for War Plants Urged

Industrial hygienists representing 34 States yesterday called upon the United States Public Health Service to take the lead in mobilizing medical, nursing and hospital facilities in the Nation's critical war industry areas.

A resolution to that effect was adopted at the final business session of a joint meeting of the National Conference of Governmental Industrial Hygienists and the subcommittee on industrial health and medicine, office of defense health and welfare.

Other resolutions urged expansion of hygienic research, personnel training and other forms of assistance to war industries, and the development of plans by which smaller plants, employing 500 or fewer workers, may provide medical, or at least nursing services to the personnel.

M. F. Trice, of the North Carolina State Division of Industrial Hygiene, was elected chairman of the national conference, succeeding Dr. C. A. Nau, of Texas. Dr. P. A. Brehm, of Wisconsin, was elected vice chairman, and J. J. Bloomfield, of the National Institute of Health, secretary-treasurer.

The 1943 joint meeting will be held in Washington, the dates to be announced later.

New York Times Is Awarded Cup For Typography

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, April 10.—N. W. Ayer & Son, Inc., announced yesterday that the New York Times has been awarded the F. Wayland Ayer Cup as the most excellent daily newspaper among 1326 which competed in the advertising firm's twelfth annual exhibition of newspaper typography.

The Times also won the competition in 1933, 1935 and 1940.

First honorable mention among the 152 competing papers with a circulation of 50,000 or more went to the New York Herald Tribune, five times winner of the Ayer Cup. The Christian Science Monitor won second honorable mention in this group and the Baltimore Evening Sun, third.

The competition was open to all English-language dailies in the United States and judging was on the basis of typography, makeup and presswork. Editions of March 3 were selected by lot for consideration.

10,000 to 50,000 circulation—The Lynchburg (Va.) News, first; the Billings (Mont.) Gazette, second, and The Rutland (Vt.) Daily Herald, third.

Less than 10,000 circulation—The Troy (N. Y.) Herald, first; The Alexandria (Va.) Gazette, second, and The Chambersburg (Pa.) Public Opinion, third.

Tabloids regardless of circulation, PM, New York.

Cynicism Is Hit By Dr. Fendrich At YMCA Dinner

The Rev. Dr. J. Lowrey Fendrich last night urged that persons not take themselves too seriously in an address at the annual reunion dinner of "Old-Timers of the Young Men's Christian Association," held in the building at 1736 G Street Northwest.

The speaker condemned cynicism and suggested that people maintain an interest in life in order to enjoy it. He also emphasized spiritual values and belief in God as the main things that count.

Some 80 "old-timers," representing an estimated total of more than 3000 years Y. M. C. A. membership, attended the dinner. E. C. Graham introduced sponsors for the reunion and Lee D. Latimer, who presided, read an in memoriam in which he paid tribute to "old timers" who died during the past year. In point of years of membership, Latimer was the oldest "old-timer" to attend the dinner, having been a Y. M. C. A. member for 58 years. An "old-timer" is anyone who has been a Y. M. C. A. member for as long as 15 years.

Leonard W. DeGast, general secretary of the Central Y. M. C. A., presented a leather-bound tribute embossed on vellum to Dr. A. C. Christie, expressing appreciation of the Y. M. C. A. Board of Managers to Dr. Christie for the latter's long service to the Y. M. C. A. Dr. Christie resigned last December as a member of the board after serving for 21 years.

Burial Service Set Today for Mrs. Hutcheson

Burial services for Mrs. Rosalie St. George Hutcheson, wife of Maj. Gen. Grote Hutcheson, United States Army, retired, will be held at 2 p. m. today in Arlington Cemetery.

Mrs. Hutcheson died after a long illness February 20 at Saratoga, Calif., where she and Gen. Hutcheson had resided since leaving Washington in 1927 because of her health.

They had established residence here in 1924 on Gen. Hutheson's retirement. They also lived here from 1904 to 1908 when he was a member of the War Department general staff.

Born in Brooklyn, N. Y., she was married to Gen. Hutcheson in 1899. Surviving, in addition to her husband, is one sister, Mrs. Agnes LaFitte, of New York City.

Bunker Again Criticizes Jones Over Contract

Senator Bunker (Democrat), of Nevada, again yesterday criticized Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones over the contract entered into by Defense Plant Corporation, headed by Jones, for a magnesium plant in New Mexico.

In the Senate Thursday Bunker had charged "sinister fraud" in the contract. Secretary Jones, as Federal Loan Administrator, immediately replied that the charge was "unworthy of a United States Senator" and could not "go unchallenged."

Yesterday the Senator declared that Jones apparently "has not read the contract."

"Jones," he said, "is the same big-time banker who told folks in substance a few months ago that 'a good risk' was one thing for his bank and another thing when the taxpayers' money was involved.

"His remarks about my statement to the Senate yesterday and the findings of the Senate committee that investigated the Las Vegas project further testify to his misapprehension as to what constitutes a public trust.

"Jones would do well to look at his hole card. His statement does not settle the case of the people of the United States vs. Defense Plant Corporation. We have only started."

Unsafe Caps Seen As Cause of Blast Fatal to 31

Harrisburg, Pa., April 10 (AP).—A State inquiry found today old and "unsafe" blasting caps may have been responsible for the dynamite blast that killed 31 men at the Lehigh Portland Cement quarry two weeks ago.

Lewis G. Hines, secretary of labor and industry, announcing the findings of the investigation, said a Hercules Powder Company official committed "one of the most flagrant violations of safety that I or any of the other investigators have ever heard of."

He said the man transported 1500 electric blasting caps, too old to be considered safe, from Dover, N. J., to the Lehigh quarry to be destroyed.

"After the explosion about 42 of the caps were found. Most of them had been detonated. It is my opinion that if the caps did not actually cause the explosion, they were a contributing factor."

Roosevelt Heard Nought Of Merchant Ship Plan

President Roosevelt informed a press conference yesterday that he, literally, had not heard a word about the possibility of the Navy's taking over operation of the Merchant Marine for the war's duration. Secretary of the Navy Knox indicated recently that some consideration was being given to such a step.

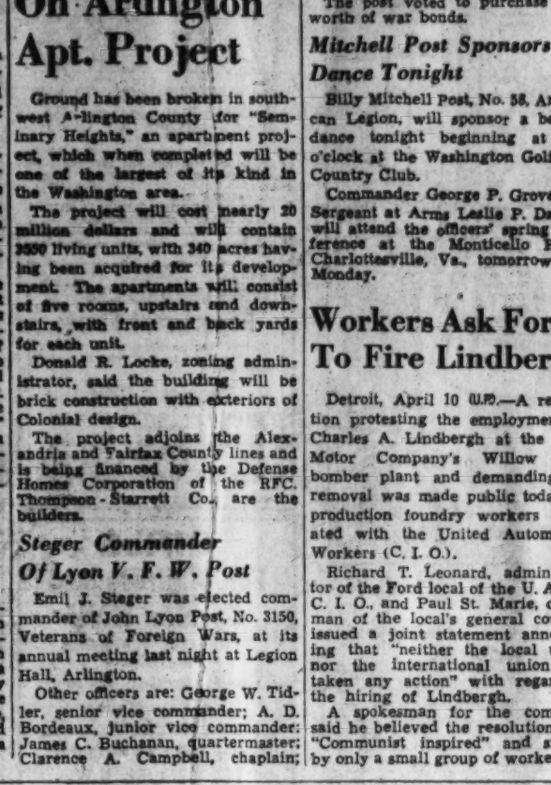
"MY business is simply Blooming! ... Is Yours?"

Ernie Powers
Made a living off of flowers.
He'd raise them in his Flower Shop and when they were all grown up he'd smell them.
And if the smell was right he'd sell them.
Gradually, his fame spread through the city area
Until there was nary a
Person who hadn't heard of his special sweet pea or prize petunia,
And pretty soon ya
Couldn't even get waited on
Unless you could prove it was your wife's birthday or, if single, a day you were heavily dated on,
And even then the service
Made you nervice.



Well, who should come in one day but a chap named Marty,
And oh, he was a smarty!
"Ernie," he said, "you're a genius botanical,
But you're not mechanical,
Yet you try to do everything alone
From answering the phone
To personally handling the delivery of every little potted azalea.
Do you want your health to falea?"
Of course Ernie answered, "No."
Then added, "Oh, oh, oh!
If I could only get some efficient help to help me and get it now,
Only—how?"

So Marty made reply:
"It's easy as pie.
Just put a Help Wanted Ad in the paper you like the most—
The Washington Post.
Only .22 a line, which is a pretty small decimal,
And you'll get much quicker action
Because The Post is people's first-thing-in-the-morning main attraction.
So what do you say?"
And Ernie said, "Okay.
But how do I do it?"
"Just call an Ad-taker at NAtional 4200," said Marty, "and give her your ad, and that's all there is to it."
So Ernie did it
And now his life is a bed of roses, and if you ask him if it's due to his Post Want Ad he'll proudly admit it.

It pays to put a Want Ad in The Post NAtional 4200

Cecil Brown, "the reporter of the year," the C. B. S. correspondent who has had the happy (?) experience of being present at most of the most notable happenings of World War II, and who has described them vividly for you over WJSV and the Columbia network, becomes the subject of a broadcast himself tonight.

He is to receive one of the many awards for his modern-day Richard Harding Davis feats of reportorial derring-do at a banquet in New York at which the outstanding radio features of the year are to be cited by the Peabody Committee, radio's equivalent of the Pulitzer Prize Committee. The broadcast will be heard over WJSV from 10:30 to 10:45 p. m.

It was Brown, you remember, who was on board the British battle cruiser, Repulse, when it was sunk with the Prince of Wales last December and whose gripping factual story of the event as heard over C. B. S. covered every incident of the tragic happenstance from the moment the Japanese attackers were sighted, through the captain's momentous words, "Prepare to abandon ship; may God be with you," to the remarkable rescue scenes that followed.

Following that Brown was heard several times from ill-fated Singapore, telling the world of the tragic unpreparedness of that Pacific citadel until his truth-telling annoyed the lethargic colonial commanders in charge and he was asked to leave. But Brown went on to Australia and was able to tell his stories from there and to win the respect of the world for his fearless recital of what he saw and thought.

He'll be present at the banquet tonight to say a few more words.

Contract Bridge

This question concerns your play of today's hand. You are sitting South as declarer at a six-heart contract and West opens the club king, then shifts to the spade queen. How do you handle your cards so as to take 12 tricks? The solution is presented below.

Today's Hand

Both Sides Vulnerable

SOUTH DEALER.

	♠ A K 8 ♡ Q 10 9 8 ◇ 4 3 2 ♣ Q 4 2
♠ Q J 10 9 7 5 ♡ 2 ◇ 10 7 6 ♣ A K J	WEST	NORTH EAST SOUTH
	♠ 4 3 2 ♡ A K J 7 6 3 ◇ A K Q ♣ 8
		♠ 6 ♡ 5 4 ◇ J 9 8 5 ♣ 10 9 7 6 5 3

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	1 ♠	1 NT	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	5 ♡	Pass
6 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: K ♣.

South makes his small slam by squeezing West. When West shifts to the spade queen, declarer can count 11 top tricks in spades, hearts and diamonds. As West's vulnerable overcall places him with the club ace and the outstanding high spades, South sees that he can make the twelfth trick with dummy low spade or queen of clubs if he can squeeze West.

Declarer, therefore, wins the spade queen in dummy and cashes five hearts and three diamonds.

He now leads the thirteenth heart, and West is finished. If he discards the high club, dummy's club queen and high spade will take the last two tricks. If he throws off one of his two spades, North's spade eight becomes a winner. Declarer makes his six-heart contract regardless of West's play, giving up only the club king.
